The judgment, made public today, said the Aluminum Company made a return showing an income in excess of $15,000,000 and claimed exemption of all of it except $9,127.18. It was stated that the company included among exemptions income from subsidiaries which income was made up of dividends or interest on advances from the parent company.

"It is in respect to these items, totalling $1,985,580.89, but reduced by certain adjustments and reductions to $1,811,806, that the present appeal rests," the judgment stated.

The Aluminum Company has been assessed for the income it received from the subsidiary companies.

2,000 TONS BOMBS POURED ON FRANKFURT

Allied Offensive Smashes Many Continental Areas

90 Planes Lost During 24-Hour Operations

(By JUDSON O'QUINN, AP STAFF WRITER)

London, Dec. 21 —(AP)— R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers rained more than 2,000 tons of high explosives and incendiaries on Frankfurt in a heavy raid Monday night, it was announced today.

Forty-two planes were lost in the night's operations, which included a subsidiary attack on Mannheim-Ludwigshafen. Ten of the missing planes were Canadian.

R.C.A.F. Coastal Command aircraft also successfully attacked enemy shipping in the Channel and Canadian Mosquitos shot down two planes during intruder flights over western Europe.

The great aid offensive against Germany reached a new intensity with these additional attacks during the past 24 hours:—

1. Mosquitos stabbed at western Germany and Belgium and mines were laid in enemy waters.

2. Heavy formations of American bombers in daylight struck heavily at the German U-boat campaign by bombing Bremen.

3. Bombers based on the Mediterranean for the fifth time in recent weeks blasted the rail yards of Sofia, capital of Bulgaria, and Elevsis airfield near Athens.

4. British and United States medium bombers spread destruction on targets in northern France.

Heavy Losses

The Allies lost more than 90 planes in the 24-hour operations. This includes 33 (counting 25 heavy bombers) over Bremen, 42 in the R. A. F.-R. C. A. F. operations, 11 in the Italian-Balkan area and six fighters over Northern France.

Monday night's attack probably placed Frankfurt in the category with Berlin, Cologne, Hamburg and Kassel as Germany's most-bombed cities. It was carried out in near top strength by a force which possibly numbered 800 or more heavy bombers.

Huge fire were left burning in the city of more than 500,000 which already had been so badly devastated in 41 raids that a large proportion of the populace had been forced to leave.

Raids Continuing

Continuing the air offensive, a steady stream of medium and light bombers crossed the southeast coast towards France in daylight today, backing up heavy assaults begun yeterday on what may well be German rocket-gun emplacements.

Mannheim - Ludwigshafen, twin cities on the Rhine where I. G. Farbenindustrie has the largest chemical works in the world, have been subjected to at least six bombardments of 500 tons or more since the start of the war. They have been well up on R. A. F. bomber command's list.

The tonnage dropped on Frankfurt last night approached the heaviest raid of the war—more than 2,300 tons rained on Berlin the night of Nov. 22—and its effect on a city less than an eighth the size of the German capital must have been terrific.

Third Major Attack

Frankfurt has been the target for British bombers on numerous occasions, but last night's raid was the third major attack (more than 500 tons). The city, important inland port and rail centre, also has been heavily attacked in daylight by American heavy bombers.

The Frankfurt attack was the R. A. F.'s fourth major operation of a month which has seen Berlin bombed twice in strength and Leipzig once. Losses to date for December total 136 aircraft.

By German account, the R. A. F. caused damage and losses to the civilian population in the districts hit. The Nazis claimed that a number of R. A. F. planes were shot down by intense "flak" in the starlit night.

The R.A.F. went out early last night, with the planes taking two routes — one over the southeast coast, another over the east coast. This splitting of forces suggested the R.A.F. was attempting to scatter the waning Nazi fighter opposition.

Christmas Eve Party For 56 Orphan French Children

Algiers, Dec. 21 —(AP)— Officers and men from the headquarters of the 12th Fighter Command will play Santa Claus this week-end, adopting 56 French children from a local orphanage long enough to give them a Christmas Eve party.

The boys and girls, from four to 16 years old, will be brought to a Red Cross Club decorated with a tree and tinsel where French carols will be sung by the children and English songs by the soldiers.

Churchill Shows More Signs Of Improvement

London, Dec. 21 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill, who is recovering from pneumonia somewhere in the Middle East, continues to improve, today's bulletin on his condition announced.

The bulletin issued at 10 Downing Street said:—

"The Prime Minister continues to improve. The condition of the circulation is more satisfactory."

It was signed by Lord Moran, Mr. Churchill's personal physician, and Brig. Davis E. Bedford.

A sure sign that the Prime Minister was getting better was his insistence on getting the newspapers as usual. They are flown to him from London every day.

Bangkok, Thailand Heavily Bombed

NewDelhi, Dec. 21 — (CP) — A combined R. A. F. and American bombing force attacked objectives in Bangkok, Thailand, the night of Dec. 19 in the first long-range operation of the newly-formed Eastern Asia Air Command, it was announced today.

A communique said the R.A.F. hit the enemy arsenal area while the Americans attacked the docks.

Widespread attacks were also announced in Southern Burma, the R.A.F. bombing by night and the U.S.A.A.F. by day.

"Targets from Akyab to Henzada on the railway south of Prome were attacked Dec. 14 and on the three following nights," the communique said. "On Dec. 15, American heavy and medium bombers hit oil installations at Chauk and Yenangyaung, starting large fires."

British fighters also made repeated attacks during the period on rail, road and river traffic, the bulletin added.

3 Gestapo Agents Are Killed in Oslo

Stockholm, Dec. 21 — (AP) — Three Gestapo agents were killed in an exchange of gunfire with Norwegians when the Germans raided an Oslo house, the Swedish-Norwegian press bureau said today.

Farm Land in Odd Corners of Airfield Rich Venture for Bomber Group

With the R. C. A. F. bomber group overseas, Dec. 21—(CP)—A farming venture that started out in a small way and developed into big business is going to provide a tasty Christmas dinner for Canadian airmen and airwomen at this heavy bomber conversion unit.

Here's the stock from which the cook will choose his menu: 240 pigs, 21 chickens, 15 ducks, 15 geese, six cows and potatoes, carrots, turnips, parsnips and corn from 30 acres of varied production.

It began, the R. C. A. F. said today in an overseas press release, last May when the Canadians, commanded by Group Capt. F. A. Sampson of Ottawa, found they had about 130 acres of spare land tucked in odd corners of their airfield. They also found an R. A. F. corporal on the station with a reputation for farming.

"Joe," the corporal, was given a half-dozen pigs and £50 from the station's funds—subscribed by all ranks—to start him off. Station funds got its £50 back in short order, with a tidy little profit, and the latest estimate values the farm at £5,000.

JAPANESE FLEEING S. BOUGAINVILLE BY BARGES, LAND

Knox Says Jap Air Opposition in Pacific, 'Negligible and Very Weak'

AIR FIELDS UNUSABLE

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—Navy Secretary Frank Knox reported today that the Japanese apparently are fleeing from the southern part of Bougainville in an obvious effort to concentrate their forces further north of the island.

"There is some evidence," he told a news conference, "that the enemy is evacuating the southern part of Bougainville and moving up to the north by land."

The Secretary added it "seems the very obvious thing" for the enemy to attempt to combine all his forces on Bougainville where the task of cleaning up opposition has been turned over by the marines to army forces under Maj.-Gen. Oscar Griswold.

None of the enemy's once strong air fields on Bougainville is usable now, Knox said. They are being kept out of action by constant U.S. bombing.

The evacuation of the southern part of the island is under way not only by land but by barges operating along the coast to carry troops to the north The barges have been subject to heavy attack.

Knox reported that Japanese air opposition in the Pacific is "negligible and very weak."

"It is difficult to understand the lack of Japanese counter air work," he said.

Bolivia's Tin Ore Mines Guarded By Junta Troops

La Paz, Bolivia, Dec. 21 —(AP)— Troops guarded Bolivia's tin ore mines today as a Nationalist Junta which yesterday overthrew the government of Gen. Peñaranda announced it was firmly entrenched and discounted rumors a counter-revolution had begun.

The troops were stationed at the mines, producing a large portion of the tin ore used in the manufacture of British and United States arms, in one of the first acts of the new government which pledged, however, to live up to Bolivia's commitments to the United Nations.

Victor Paz Estensoro, leader of the coup and new finance minister, told an interviewer that "the Atlantic Charter and other obligations of Bolivia will be respected and maintained" and "the new government in no case will alter the international situation at the side of the United Nations."

An executive decree of last April declaring war on the Axis, was affirmed by the legislature Dec. 4.

Dispatches from Santiago, Chile, noted that the Nationalist revolutionary movement, from which most of the new leaders are drawn, has long campaigned against control of the mining industry by three major producing companies. These advices said the coup could hardly fail to affect the production of tin.

Reports Indicate Northern Italy Aflame With Revolt

By RELMAN MORIN
(AP War Correspondent)

Naples, Dec. 21—(AP)—Northern Italy is flaming with revolt against the German military command and its puppet Italian government, trustworthy information reaching Naples showed today.

At the same time, it was reported that the Germans, following the tactics employed in Naples, have forcibly evacuated whole areas of Rome, presumably to permit German engineers to plant mines and dynamite on a large scale. This may indicate a decision to abandon Rome.

The situation behind the German line was described as being "more serious than in any of the European countries that are under complete German occupation."

Axis radios gave heavily-censored confirmation.

They reported funeral services were held today for Aldo Resega, Federal Fascist Commissar, Pierre Deangeli and Primiere Lamberti, officials of the Fascist squadristi organization. The men were shot by Italians described as "terrorists."

At the same time the German military commander for Rome ordered the suspension of all street highway and railway traffic inside and outside of the city between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. Significantly the new order declared that "doctors, ambulances and Red Cross vehicles" could obtain special passes permitting them to pass through the streets during the prohibited hours. Germans must carry identification papers at all times.

The death penalty has been attached to violation of the ordinance.

Sabotage Increasing

Reports of sabotage in the industrial districts and fighting between small, mobile bands of Italian guerillas and German regular troops were multiplying.

A German general has been placed in control of the Milan and Turin industrial districts with life and death powers over the workers. He assembled tens of thousands of factory workers and told them that sabotage would be punished by shooting. He declared not only their lives but the lives of their families would be forfeited for any slowup in production that could be traced to carelessness or deliberate destruction of machinery or materials.

German troops have superseded Italian units previously thought to be loyal to the Axis in the guarding of railroads, communications centres, oil and fuel dumps and all other objects of military importance. The action necessitated bringing more German troops into Italy.

2,000 MONTREAL CITY HALL CLERKS GO ON STRIKE

Second Walkout Within Week Disrupts Municipal Gov't. of City

WANT HIGHER PAY

Montreal, Dec. 21 — (CP) — Montreal's second strike of municipal employees within a week was on the way this morning when an estimated 2,000 city hall clerks and stenographers failed to report for work and started picketing the city hall.

All was quiet inside the city hall building where the only employees on duty, apparently, were the switchboard operators. They readily admitted they did not have much to do: all the telephone locals being unattended except the press room's where newsmen walked in and out trying to gather the meagre details available.

At the executive committee room, no one was in attendance at the regular opening hour and Honore Parent, director of city services, as well as his assistants were not available for any comment on the situation.

The white collar workers voted to strike last night, turning down an offer from the Provincial Government, through the Quebec Municipal Commission, for an arbitration board to investigate their wage demands.

It was just a week ago today that employees of the police, fire and public works departments staged a 14-hour strike that won them union recognition for the Canadian Congress of Labor.

Those striking today were members of the National Syndicate of Municipal Workers and two smaller unions who have joined forces with the syndicate following recognition by the city of the syndicate as bargaining agent for the white collar workers.

The vote was 950-40 to strike at last night's mass meeting that came after a day of conference between city, commission and government officials on the demands of the workers for wage increase "comparing favorably" with those promised policemen and firemen before their strike last week.

In last week's walk-out, wage increases averaging $500 a year were turned down when the city offered them as a substitute for union recognition. The strike brought union recognition, and the matter of wage adjustments is still under consideration by union officials and representatives of the municipal commission, provincial body that controls the finances of Montreal.

Have Union Recognition

Today's walk-out differs from that of last week in that the white collar workers have already won union recognition and are concerned only with wage increase. Recognition of the union came last week—after a strike threat—when the city accepted the majority report of a conciliation board favoring the National Syndicate.

AMERICANS TAKE ARAWE AIR STRIP ON NEW BRITAIN

25 BARGES BAGGED

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 21 — (AP)—The United States 6th Army expanding six miles from its Cape Merkus, New Britain, beachhead, has taken the Arawe air strip, adding another landing field to the perches from which Allied planes are purging the air of Japanese.

An Allied headquarters' communique today said the Arawe field was secured Sunday.

Scores of heavy and medium Allied bombers again hammered Cape Gloucester, on the western end of New Britain, dropping 414 tons of bombs on enemy airdrome, supply and bivouac areas. Damage was described as "widespread."

The tonnage, left in two raids Sunday, topped the bomb load dumped on any one enemy location in one day in this war theatre, and brought to 1,600 tons the total delivered at Cape Gloucester since Dec. 1.

Cape Gloucester marks the fork of the enemy barge supply route eastward from New Guinea. By taking Arawe, the Allies have severed the route that branches along the south coast of New Britain. Should they likewise seize Cape Gloucester, the north-coast route leading to the big enemy base at Rabaul, New Britain, would be cut.

Australian fighters on Huon peninsula, New Guinea, cashed in on Allied air command in that sector by driving out at bayonet point the Japanese south of Masawang river, 15 miles north of Finschhafen. The enemy in full retreat was pursued across the river. Allied planes meanwhile bombed and strafed the Japanese lines of communication.

Admiral William F. Halsey announced that United States Army forces under Lt.-Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commander of ground units in the South Pacific, have taken complete control of the Empress Augusta Bay sector on the west-central coast of Bougainville Island in the Solomons.

Allied planes and motor torpedo boats took a toll of 25 Japanese barges sunk or damaged in attacks on these vessels which constitutes the enemy's principal medium for supplying his hard-pressed defensive points.

Undertaker Brought Back in Own Hearse

Picher, Okla., Dec. 21 — (AP) — Roy J. Durnil, 51, an undertaker at Jay, left Picher driving a hearse, bearing the body of a Muskogee man who was killed in a mine accident. Several hours later Durnil was brought back — in the same hearse. The hearse had stalled on a steep bank at Grand Lake and plunged 70 feet backward into water 30 feet deep. Durnil's body was found by a rescue party.

BRITISH FORCES BETTER POSITION AROUND ORTONA

Troops Meeting Stiff Resistance North of Ortona-Orsogna Road In E. Italy

SEVERE CONDITIONS

By WES GALLAGHER
(Associated Press War Correspondent.)

Algiers Dec. 21. (AP)— British 8th Army Forces fighting against stiff resistance north of the Ortona-Orsogna Road in eastern Italy made further advances yesterday, Allied headquarters announced today while positions around the Adriatic Port of Ortona were improved.

Immediate objective of the troops advancing north of the lateral road was reported to be Tollo some four miles west and a little south of Ortona.

Reports heard in London yesterday that Ortona and Orsogna had been captured by the 8th Army appeared here to have been premature as the Allied communique made no mention of Orsogna and in regard to Ortona merely said: "Our positions in the Ortona area were improved".

On the Anglo-American 5th Army front in western Italy American troops advanced 2 1-2 miles west from recently-taken Lagone through a snowstorm to capture Mount Spinuccio, a 2,600-foot elevation, seven miles northwest of Venafro.

On this section of the front the Allies are fighting under severe conditions. Hills in the area are all covered with snow and many of them loom up 3,000 feet or more. On the remainder of the 5th Army front only patrol activity was reported.

The naval section of the communique announced that British and American light naval craft teamed up to fight two German destroyers of the Island of Elba, Dec. 18. Torpedo hits were probably obtained on one enemy destroyer.

American torpedo boats made the first contact, headquarters said, engaging the enemy destroyers with guns and torpedoes.

"The enemy retired with the PT's in chase and later was engaged with guns and torpedoes by another force which included both British and United States light coastal craft", the communique said. "Both actions were brisk and enemy opposition was considerable.

"Though no results could be seen in the smoke and darkness, it is probable that torpedo hits were obtained on one of the enemy destroyers".

The communique announced that in the eastern Adriatic on the same night British light naval forces sank one enemy E-boat, a ferry, an escort vessel and two motor-boats.

Canadian Nurses Have Exciting Times While on Duty in Italy, Sicily

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 21 — (CP)—Blood, sweat, tears and fleas — and the time of their young lives—awaited the Canadian Nursing Sisters in N. Africa, Sicily and Italy.

Nursing Sister Rae Adams of Toronto, invalided back to England after shrapnel shattered her foot in Sicily, is straining at the leash to be back on active service at the front.

"See, I don't limp at all," she said. "But they won't let me work yet." An ack-ack shell, fired at German planes swooping low over Catania, ended an exciting chapter of adventure for her on Sept. 2.

"The day before the invasion of Italy — so I missed that show," she said wryly.

The shell, which didn't go off until it exploded on the penthouse mess of the Canadian hospital, wounded 12 nurses and three mess boys. And Miss Adams was the most seriously injured. None of the other girls was invalided back to England.

The nurses, with a Canadian general hospital, landed on Sicily July 19, much to their surprise. They hadn't been told their destination when they left England, so the trip down was a guessing game of "where?"

"We guessed everywhere but Sicily," Miss Adams said. On the trip between Algiers and the invaded island a German plane dive-bombed their ship. "But our ship's ack-ack got it and we weren't the least bit afraid."

The nurses landed at Augusta with the sound of gunfire from the frontline, seven miles away, in their ears.

Syracuse was their first stopping place. "That was a trip for the book," said Miss Adams. "We drove 25 miles down the hottest, dustiest and roughest road I've ever seen in my life. It took us four hours because we had to stop every little bit and climb into the ditch to let the troop conveys pass."

At Syracuse the nurses hadn't been expected quite so soon and there weren't enough sheets to go round. "Most of us were pretty badly bitten by fleas and bedbugs and most of us got dysentry," Miss Adams said.

Their equipment had been sunk enroute so for the first few days everything was makeshift with the girls collecting things from the British service corps and using captured Italian medical supplies. The work, Miss Adams said, was backbreaking and, sometimes, heartbreaking.

"But it wasn't long before the invitations started to roll in from men posted around us — teas, cocktail parties, dances dinners, swimming parties. Our social life got so strenuous we had to cut down on it."

Reds Threaten To Disrupt Whole Nazi Defence Line

Germans Forced To Withdraw Forces From Kiev Sector To Nevel Area

NEAR LATVIAN BORDER

London, Dec. 21 — (CP) — The Russian Baltic Army, steadily expanding its breach in the heavily-fortified German line, has plunged down the east side of the Nevel-Vitebsk railway to within 20 miles of Vitebsk, Reuters news agency reported today from Moscow.

This represents an advance of some 15 miles for Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's forces from their last reported positions. His troops stand barely 50 miles from the Polish and Latvian frontiers.

The nearest approach to Vitebsk was the railway station of Gorodok, 20 miles north on the railway from Nevel.

The German communique said Soviet pressure was increasing in the Vitebsk area and that "northwest of Nevel, the Soviets launched unsuccessful attacks."

In the Dnieper Bend area, the Germans said the Russians had broken through southeast of Kirovograd but claimed they had been dispersed or wiped out. Two days of Russian attempts to break thru on the Nikopol bridgehead on the lower Dnieper and southwest of Dneptropetrovsk were said by Berlin to have failed.

Bargamian's success in Northern Russia, threatening to disrupt the entire Nazi defence system south of Leningrad, had immediate repercussions on other sectors of the long eastern front. Dispatches indicated that huge reinforcements the Germans are throwing into the Nevel battle were possibly being drawn from the Zhitomir-Korosten front west of Kiev, if not further south.

Troops of the 1st Ukraine army, who successfully balked Nazi Marshal Fritz Von Mannstein's powerful tank drive in the Kiev bulge last week, were back in the Korosten sector yesterday, front dispatches said and had repulsed a series of sharp enemy assaults. Previous reports said fighting in the bulge was centred in the area below Malin.

Dispatches also revealed that the Russians now were exerting strong pressure from the southeast on Korovograd, Dnieper bend enemy base, in an apparent drive to isolate the industrial centre.

A German military spokesman was quoted by the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter as saying the Germans had withdrawn troops from the Kiev bulge southward toward Korovograd, suggesting Von Mannstein may have abandoned his drive on Kiev.

A Berlin broadcast, meanwhile, announced the Germans had evacuated their bridgehead on the east bank of the ice-bound Dnieper River opposite the city of Kherson far to the south, and said an early assault against Kherson itself was anticipated by the German garrison. Moscow did not mention any activity in the Kherson salient.

Detailing action in the Soviet drive south of Nevel the Moscow war bulletin said Bagramian's army had wiped out 1,800 Germans yesterday and that "the enemy is retreating, abandoning a great quantity of arms and ammunition".

Bagramian was driving in multiple thrusts toward the rail centres of Vitebsk and Polotsk as his immediate objectives. In less than a week his troops have recaptured nearly 1,000 square miles of territory including 570 villages and have killed or captured nearly 24,000 enemy troops along a wide front.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Axis commentator, was quoted as saying the Red Army drive toward the Baltic "constituted the beginning of the Russian winter offensive".

The German-controlled Paris radio, in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press, said the Russians had initiated a powerful attack to "sweep out the Dnieper Bend". The broadcast asserted that the Red Army was attacking in the Nikopol sector southwest of Dnepropetrovsk. A successful Russian smash here would open the way for a drive toward Nikolaev and Odessa, but there was no confirmation of the Vichy report from Russian sources.

Stalin 64 Today

London, Dec. 21 — (CP)—This is Marshal Joseph Stalin's 64th birthday anniversary, but Moscow apparently planned no special observance. The Soviet monitor here said no special broadcast had been scheduled.

Roosevelt Hopes For Formula In Railway Situation

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP) — President Roosevelt asserted today that assurances there would not be a transportation stoppage would be the best Christmas present the American people could get. He expressed hope that railway executives and employee representatives could get together and work out a formula which would provide some wage increases.

Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference discussions were under way toward setting up a system under which rail employees would get time and one-half for overtime or the equivalent.

He said a feeling existed that increases proposed for rail workers in both non-operating and operating classifications by special emergency boards were not as great as might be necessary to compensate for increased living costs, particularly in comparison with increases allowed in other industries.

200,000 BAGS MAIL ARRIVE OVERSEAS

Reflecting the response of the Canadian public toward the appeal of the Post Office Department for early mailing of Christmas letters and parcels for overseas, over 200,000 bags of such mail has arrived safely overseas, according to Postmaster General William P. Mulock. A merry Christmas is therefore assured for tens of thousands of Canadian men and women in uniform.

All of October Armed Forces mails, comprising 95,174 bags, and a great deal of November's, some 105,747 bags, totalling in all [illegible]84,917 cubic feet of Christmas mails to the forces, have arrived overseas.

Appreciation of the Postmaster General to the public for co-operation in early mailing has been expressed with the assurance that postal authorities have spared no effort to arrange for speedy handling and transportation. That this huge volume of Christmas mail passed safely through the sea lanes was termed a tribute to the men of the Merchant Marine, the Navy and the Air Force.

190 O.S.D. STUDENTS LEAVE FOR HOMES

190 youngsters from the Ontario School for the Deaf left the city yesterday for their homes. This early holiday migration was arranged so the children would be able to travel and avoid the heavy traffic when the armed services start their Christmas leave. 32 children will remain at the school over the holiday which will last until January 6th. These children remaining at the school will be treated to a Christmas dinner of turkey and everything that goes to make Christmas day dear to the juvenile heart. During the long holiday, part time school will be conducted to avoid the monotony of being in the school this long time. On Christmas day each house will have its own Santa Claus, and there is every probability that the children will be escorted to one of the motion picture theatres. The regular visit of Santa Claus to the school was made last Thursday before the majority of children had left for their homes. Gifts were given to each child. It appears that Christmas this year is not going to be as dull as it might have been.

CAR THIEVES FOILED BY LOCKED VEHICLE

The fact a motor car was securely locked while parked near the hospital last night doubtless foiled car thieves in their attempts to steal the vehicle, police learned today. Gouges in the right front door near the ventilator window and the fact part of the window lock was broken, was sufficient proof unsuccessful attempts to enter the vehicle had been made.

Today Chief Probert warned all motorists to securely lock their automobiles, particularly during the holiday season when so much travel is being done by members of the armed services and others. "Here is a direct case proving the sensibility of securely locking motor vehicles," stated Chief Probert as he cited last night's incident where a locked car foiled would-be car robbers.

WOMAN ACCOSTED BY 'CURB CRUISER'

Pre-Christmas activities in local police circles began to show signs of activities last night when three early celebrants of the holiday season ran afoul with the long arm of the law and today paid drunk fines.

Disturbances in two local restaurants were investigated and settled by police, while a woman complained she was accosted by a "curb cruiser" on Pinnacle Street. Naturally the man drove hastily away, when he observed the woman proceed directly to the nearby police station.

WALLACE H. ROBB TO BROADCAST DEC. 23

Mr. Wallace Havelock Robb of Abbey Dawn, near Kingston, will broadcast over CKWS 960 Kingston on December 23rd from 4.45 to 5.00 p.m., on "The Empty Manger". He will tell a story of his own composition for Canadian listeners in this broadcast. Mr. Robb's many friends here will be interested in this event.

PTE. ED. G. HOPKINS WOUNDED IN ACTION

Overseas since early in December 1939, Private Edwin G. Hopkins, son of Mrs. Annie Hopkins, 28 Bettes Street, has been wounded in action according to word received by his mother from the Director of Records at Ottawa. No information regarding the nature of his wounds or where the action took place was contained in the telegram, but it presumed he was fighting with his unit in Italy.

Born in England, Private Hopkins came to Canada at an early age with his parents and attended Belleville schools. Early in the war he enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and went overseas with the first contingent. In July, 1941, he was married to an Irish girl, the couple now having a young daughter.

REGINALD EDWARDS TO REPRESENT GROUP AT BOYS' PARLIAMENT

Reginald Edwards, nephew of Miss H. McLaren, Belleville collegiate teacher, has been nominated to represent the boys' group of Belleville at the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament which this year is being held in Kitchener from December 26th to 31st. Older Boys' Parliament is to ensure youth from Ontario of fellowship of boys and boys' groups throughout the province.

EARL FOSTER HOME FROM NORTH AFRICA

Earl Foster, son of the late Alderman George Foster of this city, is visiting friends here. Earl Foster is at present in the American Army and has served for the last nine months in North Africa, returning home only recently. He is a veteran of the last war, having served with the Royal Canadian Artillery.

NO COLLECTION GARBAGE MADE CHRISTMAS DAY

Like the majority of other civic employees, members of the public works department engaged in the collection of garbage about Belleville streets will take a well-deserved holiday on Christmas Day according to City Engineer Charles Mott. Householders in the habit of putting out garbage for the usual Saturday collection, therefore, are asked to delay until the following week when every effort will be made to make up for the holiday.

JOHN FORIN HELD BY MOUNTED POLICE

Wanted by the Selective Service Board on a charge of changing his address without the notification of his Divisional Registrar, John Forin, Bancroft Post Office, was apprehended by the R.C.M.P. on the Monk Road north of Bancroft late Monday.

Today Forin appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court and claimed he had never changed his address. Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson entered a plea of not guilty and the accused was remanded for trial until Thursday.

WILL BE LIBERATED DAY BEFORE CHRISTMAS

It might just so be the spirit of Christmas has arrived already. At any rate His Worship, Magistrate J. L. Lloyd meted out what sounded like the true Yuletide spirit in today's local police court when an inebriate appeared on a drunk charge that carried the conventional "ten and costs" fine following the conviction.

"I'd like to be out for Christmas," remarked the accused as he intimated he was willing to "pay up" if liberated.

"Maybe it would be better if you served out your remaining three days and save your money for Christmas," suggested Magistrate Lloyd as he sentenced the man to seven days in default. The accused had been on remand for four days and will be liberated the day before Christmas, thus saving his fine to perhaps gladden the hearts of others at Christmas time.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Grills to Celebrate 64th Wedding Anniversary, Wed.

Married 64 years on Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Grills, 158 Church St., will celebrate the event with members of their family at their home during the afternoon and evening. Mr. and Mrs. Grills were married by Rev. Wm. McClain in Thurlow Township at the home of Mrs. Grills' parents and they took up residence on a farm in that district for several years before coming to the city. Mr. Grills was born in Hungerford Township where he was a farmer. He celebrated his 90th birthday in February of this year, while Mrs. Grills, with feminine reluctance reported that she was "a little over 80." The elderly couple have resided in the city for 26 years.

One son and three daughters, the family of Mr. and Mrs. Grills, Dana W. Grills, 12 Chatham St., Mrs. Francis Purdy, Thurlow Township, Mrs. Frank Noakes, 57 Grier St., and Mrs. James Pigeen, Oshawa, are still living. There are 14 grandchildren and 10 great grandchildren in the family today. Mrs. Grills said that she did not know whether they would all be able to visit them this year, that it depended upon the weather. She is looking forward to the family reunion and hopes they all will be able to come. Last year the sub-zero weather kept a number of the family at home, but the gathering of those who could come, and their friends made an enjoyable time for the couple. Both are in fairly good health considering their advanced years, and it is with as much anticipation they look forward to their 64th anniversary.

Transit Control Committee And Taxi Owners Meet To Discuss City Conditions

Better Taxi Service Will Result and Possibly City Calls Will be Raised

MAYOR PRESIDES

At a meeting called by the Mayor and his committee on transit control for the city of Belleville, the twelve taxi companies of the city were represented and the purpose of the meeting was set forth by His Worship the Mayor. He stated, that he had been asked by the Transit Controller at Toronto to form a committee in the city for the purpose of regulating the consumption of gasoline and wastage of rubber by unnecessary operation of taxis. He said, that the committee would function as an intermediary between the taxi operators and the government and also as an advisory board in matters relating to the war-time regulations. It would also be the duty of the committee to inform the Transit Controller of any wastage of rubber and gasoline, but that it was also the duty of the committee to see that the citizens of the city were given as good a taxi service as it was possible under present war-time conditions.

Told of Complaints Received

Mayor Rollins told the assembled operators of the many complaints coming into his office about the service, and that most of these complaints were about the service to the early morning trains arriving in the city. "I have experienced difficulty myself," said Mayor Rollins, referring to this complaint, "but", he continued, "I have also encountered this condition in other cities, as early as last week in Toronto. But there is a solution, and we must arrive at it." It was suggested by His Worship that one taxi company be detailed to meet the trains each night for a stipulated period, more if necessary and it was found, that one company could not adequately handle the traffic. He said that, if the taxi operators would co-operate with the committee, the committee would work for the good of them.

Operators State Case

The operators then brought up the problem of being unable to meet the demands of the citizens for city runs at the existing rate of twenty-five cents per passenger, especially when one or two passengers only called for a car. They stated, that they were forced to refuse many fares for this reason, that there was insufficient profit in many runs of this nature, and that their ration of gasoline would not permit them. The Mayor, backed by Police Chief Probert, said that he would recommend to the War Time Prices and Trade Board an increased rate for city service if the operators would promise better service. They both recognized, that the rates are too low for profit and that longer runs, naturally, would be more attractive. However, it was pointed out to the operators, this could not be accomplished unless the operators would submit to the committee a statement of conditions, backed by actual percentage figures.

Owners Agree

This the taxi owners agreed to do, and appointed three members of their body to represent them in committee. Messrs. R. W. Clare, Lorne Munroe and Jack Grotto Jr., were the selected committee. Two taxi owners agreed to put their businesses up as a test, taking all calls, that came in to them for a period of two weeks, keeping an accurate check on their mileage and gasoline consumption, and whether there was a profit or loss shown at the end of this period, this would constitute a statement, which would substantiate their claim, that the rates were not enough to handle the city traffic in full.

Facts in Written Form

Following the Mayor's address, Chief Probert spoke to the owners and said that it was up to the operators of the taxis themselves to put into writing their side of the story and submit it to the newly formed Transit Control Committee for action Mr. Harold Bateman, secretary of the committee, also spoke to the assembly, stating, that the story had been pretty well covered by the Mayor and Chief of Police, but pointed out that it would be absolutely necessary to have these facts presented in written form. A number of arguments were brought out in the open discussion following the committee's suggestions, and it was suggested, that a central office be set up for all the twelve companies, each company taking its turn on the calls.

This, it was said, would eliminate the present condition of telephoning for a taxi and not receiving an answer, or, in the event, that the telephone was answered, the car or cars at the number contacted were out. It would be unlikely, that every car would be busy at one time. A number of objections were set out against this, mainly, that one call would net one company two dollars, while the next call would probably be a city call and would only bring in twenty-five cents. They failed to see that organizations would relieve much of the tension now in existence. It is expected that some solution will be forthcoming following the next meeting between the Transit Control Committee and the Taxi Owners' Committee.

Musical Revue Features Ladies' Night Program

A splendid turnout was on hand Monday evening at the Hotel Quinte during the regular Ladies' Night program of the Canadian National Railways War Veterans' Association, when a musical revue with tap dancing by Madeline Walden's pupils was a feature of the program.

Larry Amo, the Association president, presided over the meeting and expressed his appreciation to all who had helped make the cigarette fund a success. Asking for continued support, he intimated that the Association had now sent overseas 1,020,000 cigarettes to 210 Belleville boys overseas.

A song toe dance by little five-year old Darline Dalrymple was one of the features of the musical revue which saw military tap dancing by Shirley Taylor and Madeline Walden, and a ballet acrobatic dance by Margaret Casey. A kiltie dance was performed by Dorothy Calvert, Ruth Cameron, Barbara Boulter, Helen Caverly, Beverly Aseltine and Madeline Walden, while solos were given by Margaret Fawkes and Ruth Cameron. Also assisting in the program were Mrs. Grace Calvert, Cecil Lloyd as pianists, and Danny Boy Smith.

Refreshments and draw for the fifteen turkeys completed the program.

Special Christmas Dinners for Those In Institutions

Christmas day in the various city, county and provincial institutions will be celebrated in orthodox style, replete with dinner and entertainment. The inmates of the county jail will have a pork dinner in lieu of the turkey they may have formerly been accustomed to having on this day in their own homes, but then there are hundreds of citizens of the city who will have to do the same with turkeys so difficult to obtain. The dinner will consist of roast pork, vegetables, dressing, applesauce, tea and coffee, and oranges, apples and candy in limited quantities will be given to each of the twenty inmates. When asked by the reporter what the Christmas dinner would be like, the County Jailer replied: "It will be just like home." Of course, that is a matter of opinion.

At the House of Refuge on the Kingston Road, the old people will be entertained with a Christmas tree and a present for each one. The generous donations of several citizens and a substantial contribution from the Reliance Aircraft Company will make it possible for a much brighter Yuletide than otherwise might have been possible. The dinner will not be turkey, however, but the institution has raised its own fowl and the elderly inmates will have a delicious dinner. There will be ninety-five at the Christmas day party. The Home for the Aged on Dundas Street East has planned a similar Christmas day for the inmates of this institution.

Realtors Assist In Administration Of R. E. B. Act

Addressing the twenty-first annual conference of the Ontario Association of the Real Estate Boards, in Toronto, Mr. Harold A. Tanton, registrar of the Real Estate Brokers' Act for the Ontario Securities Commission, reported that, for the most part, he was receiving full co-operation from the brokers in his administration of the act.

The number of registered real estate men in Ontario remains virtually the same as last year, new registration balancing resignations received from dealers who have given up business. In all, the department has supervision of some 2,000 registered real estate brokers and salesmen throughout the Province.

While there are no recent changes in the act, Mr. Tanton felt that all real estate brokers and their salesmen should be completely conversant with existing legislation. He stressed that part of the Real Estate Brokers' Act relating to trading in real estate for remuneration by persons not licensed to do so by the department, and pointed out that penalties are provided in the act in connection with unlawful trading. He also emphasized that the act requires brokers to report to his department any request or demand for commission from any person who is not licensed.

Every real estate broker in Ontario, he reminded the meeting, is required to keep a trust account with a chartered bank or trust company for the deposit of trust monies held by the broker, and a trust ledger earmarking such trust funds as to the transaction involved.

Among the requirements for registration as real estate broker were cited: Good Character, the supplying to the department of a bond and the passing of an examination in real estate set by the department.

The members went on record as confirming their desire to assist Mr. Tanton in every way in maintaining on a high plane the profession of real estate.

December 22nd Shortest Day

Just in case someone is interested in the comparative length of the days during this season of the year, the astronomer has pointed out that the shortest day this year is Wednesday, December 22nd. From then on the nights will cease to get longer and the accent, so to speak, will be on the other foot. In this case the days will begin to get longer.

To use the astronomical term, however, it will be on Wednesday at 1:30 in the afternoon that the sun will enter the zodiacal sign Capricorn and winter officially commences. This time is spoken of as the winter solstice and is the time at which the sun ceases its apparent southward motion, stands still, and turns back northward.

As may be easily seen by the most casual observer, the sun is now at its most southerly position and at noon is less than 23 degrees above the horizon. This fact is rather more accentuated in centres farther north, the sun now never getting above the horizon at Murmansk and in the Canadian Great Bear Lake district. To observers living in the southern hemisphere however, the effect is the exact opposite and at noon the sun is directly overhead

Council Vetoes Resolution Of Planning Commission To Engage W. Storrie for Survey

Members Vote 6-5 After Lengthy Discussion on Letter Tabled

OPEN AIR RINKS

By a vote of six to five, the City Council at their last regular meeting for this year on Monday evening, vetoed the recommendation of the War Planning Commission, that Mr. William Storrie, consulting engineer of Toronto, be engaged to prepare a survey of the city with a sewage disposal plant in mind at a cost not to exceed $1,500.

A motion was introduced by Ald. Pringle and seconded by Ald. Woodley: "That this council authorize William Storrie of the firm of Nasmith and Storrie to proceed with the survey of the city sewage disposal plant as set out in Item 3 of his letter to the Post-War Planning Commission addressed to W. L. McDougall, dated October 15th., the City Engineer to provide every assistance possible, and the cost not to exceed $1,500." After the vote was taken the yeas and nays were called and the vote was as follows: Yeas, Mayor Rollins, Aldermen Armstrong, Clapp, Pringle and Woodley, Nays: Aldermen Allin, Butler, Clarke, Follwell, Hyde and Potter.

Long Session.

The session was one of the longest of the year, the members having to extend the time and they did not terminate their business until the midnight hour. Before the session was completed they voted to build open air skating rinks in several sections of the city, turned down a request of the Weston Bread Company to build an office and stable near the corner of Harriett and Coleman Streets and instructed the treasurer to pay all outstanding bills if properly signed, and all civic employees their salaries before Christmas Day.

Before closing the last meeting of the year, Alderman Charles L. Hyde and Alderman Follwell moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mayor Rollins for his guidance in the past year and for his promotion of friendly co-operation among the members. Mayor Rollins suitably replied and wished all members, civic employees, the press and all citizens the Compliments of the Season. Alderman Clarke expressed the regret of losing Alderman Potter in next year's council, stating that he had made an excellent chairman of Fire and that the Fire Hall had been splendidly managed. Alderman Potter thanked the mem-Aldermna Potter thanked the member for his expression of good wishes. Alderman Hyde complimented Aldermen Clarke and Armstrong for their work in the two heaviest departments of the council, that of chairman of Finance and chairman of Public Works.

The matter of engaging Mr. Storrie to make a survey of the city came up, when a report of the Post-War Planning Commission was tabled for consideration and in which was the recommendation. It was shown in the letter that Mr. Storrie would not be engaged immediately but that his services were in constant demand. The Commission felt he should be contacted and when the city was ready for his services there would be no delay in the project. It was pointed out in the letter to the council that the City Engineer was to make all the preliminary surveys possible but it was shown that he, not being an engineer on waterworks and sewage disposal, final survey should be made by Mr. Storrie. The price for this work was set at $1,500 and if the survey was accepted and the work was proceeded with Mr. Storrie was to prepare the plans and supervise the construction, the firm to receive a percentage of the contract.

Opened Discussion.

Aldermen Follwell opened the discussion on the question when he opposed engaging Mr. Storrie because he said he was not sufficiently informed.

Ald. Woodley:— "The letter was there for you to read and investigate in the committee. It was not the purpose of the council to hire Mr. Storrie at once, but the Commission wanted him lined up so that when we needed his services he would be available. Mr. Storrie is a very busy man and is a recognized authority on the American continent with respect to sewage disposal plant".

Ald. Pringle:—"The Commission appointed by this council has worked hard on the Post-War plans and this is their recommendation. Mr. Storrie says the ceiling price will be $1,500 but with the assistance given by the City Engineer this price may be reduced considerably".

Ald. Clarke:—"If we hire him and don't use him do we have to pay?"

Mayor Rollins:—"Certainly not".

Mayor Rollins:—"I think it is a step in the right direction".

Ald. Clapp: "We must get our plans in shape and who is more capable of giving us a survey than Mr. Storrie. Sewage disposal is bound to come either by our own volition or by order of the government".

Ald. Follwell: "Have we the right to make a contract?"

Ald. Pringle:—"Why certainly."

Ald. Allin:— "For the $1500 we only receive a survey and report and if the sewage disposal plant is built we will still have to pay Mr. Storrie for the plans and for inspection work on the contract".

Ald. Woodley:—"That is correct".

Ald. Butler: "I agree with Ald. Allin that we will only get a survey for this amount of money".

Large Investment.

Ald. Armstrong:—"It is a small amount for the investment involved and if this project is proceeded with we should have the best advice possible. The City Engineer does not profess to be an expert on sewage disposal, but he can materially assist in preparing the preliminary survey".

Ald. Pringle:— "The Commission appointed spends time to thrash these matters out and the Commission was appointed by this council and it seems rather useless for members of the Commission to spend their time and have their work refused by the council".

Ald. Follwell:—"I don't think this council should accept whole heartedly the recommendations of the Commission".

At this point a motion was made by Ald. Allin to refer the whole matter to the 1944 council and the vote being taken by the Chairman, Ald. Potter, it was found to be a tie with Alds. Allin, Clarke, Follwell, Butler and Hyde voting to refer it over and Alds. Pringle, Armstrong, Woodley, Rollins and Clapp being opposed. Ald. Potter cast the deciding vote to continue the discussion until the matter was decided. Under the headings of motions, the resolution above mentioned was introduced and the vote taken. In the matter of voting money, two-thirds of the entire council must be in favor and this being not the case the motion was defeated.

Another recommendation of the Post-War Planning Commission invoked discussion, when it was proposed by that body to have two open air skating rinks in the city, one situated on the East Hill playgrounds and the other on the West Hill playgrounds.

To Open Rinks.

Another recommendation from the War Planning Commission requested that open air rinks be erected at the two playgrounds in the city and Ald. Clapp thought it was an excellent idea. We have no hockey players in Belleville, that are native born said Ald. Clapp and "it is simply because there has not been enough rinks to provide skating for all the children. It will keep the children off the streets and also provide excellent recreation for them".

Ald. Allin:—"We want outdoor rinks but there should be one placed in the north end of the city."

Ald. Woodley:— "We suggested the two playgrounds because it was the only spots we could use the money from the Ritchie Fund. Now I understand the City Solicitor says that it is not possible to use these funds".

Ald. Butler: — "This question should have been decided early this year so that plans could have been completed for the cold weather. I think the Quinte Skating Club should be contacted and I think the rink could be used for public skating for the children at specified times. We give grants to the Hume Arena, the Belleville Yacht Club and this club should be considered. It was finally decided to build rinks in four sections of the city under the supervision of the City Engineer and the foreman of the Public Works. The Fire Department will be asked to co-operate.

Discussion on Application.

Alderman Pringle opened the discussion on the Weston Bread application to build a warehouse and stable at the corner of Harriett and Coleman Streets. There was a large delegation from that section of the city, who were present to oppose the application. Ald. Pringle stated that as he was chairman of Industry, it was his place to present these propositions to the council for their decision. The Alderman produced a detailed plan of the building and the houses adjoining and stated that after the war it was likely the firm would go back to gas-driven vehicles but for the present it was their intention to use horses and house them in the building proposed. One of the delegation stated he had no objection to the firm coming to the city but he did object to having horses placed in his backyard. You can it what you like but it is still a horse stable", said the delegate.

Must Recognize Investment.

Aldermen Allin, Butler and Armstrong stated, that the council had to recognize the investment of these residents in that section of the city and they thought it would be useless to go contrary to their wishes. It was decided to refuse the application but the chairman of Industry was instructed to contact the Weston Bread Company and see if they would not accept another location in the city which would be just as suitable.

The inaugural meeting of the City Council will be held on January 3rd. in the forenoon as usual and the caucus of the new council will be held on Thursday evening, December 30th.

It was decided the orange flasher in the traffic lights will be shut off from eight o'clock in the evening until six in the morning every day excepting Saturday, when it will not operate from 10.00 p.m., to 6.00 a.m., and until such time as the one traffic light is fixed, a traffic officer will be used to direct traffic at this busy corner.

Prices and specifications will be secured by the chairman of Market and City Property for a paint spraying machine.

Employees to Have Holiday.

It was decided that all hourly-rated employees employed by the city will be given a holiday on Christmas Day without deduction of pay and the employees will be paid regular rate for this day and if called out in case of emergency this shall be considered overtime and will be paid on this basis.

Mr. Mikel was thanked for his history of Belleville and four copies will be placed in each of the Public Schools, one in the Public Library, one in the Chamber of Commerce, in the Clerk's office, the comptroller's office, the offices of the C.N.R. and C.P.R. in Montreal, in the industrial offices of these railways in New York, in the police station, the fire hall, St. Michael's Academy and the Wharf Street Debating Clubhouse.

Hills Prepared For Sleighing.

Toboggan and sleigh-ride hills will be prepared on Church Street from Bridge to Dundas, Octavia Street from Holloway to Henry, Gordon Street from Ridley to Harriett and on Lingham Street. The old vinegar factory hill will be put in shape also and Mayor Rollins stated it would help much to curb juvenile delinquency. The City of Belleville Patriotic Association asked for a tag day on Easter Saturday and this was referred to the 1944 council. Raymond Arnott was given the market lease for the coming year and the agreement will be signed before the end of the year. Ald. Clapp objected to a bill presented by the City Engineer for $5 for drawing plans used in court for a traffic accident. Ald. Clapp claimed this was not a matter of money but a principle with him. It is true he was asked by the police to draw these plans, but if it was not done on city time, city paper was used. There was no discussion as the account was passed. A notice will be inserted announcing the closing of a certain street and a motion was passed restoring the restricted area clause in the by-law as it affects the Coleman-Harriett street section.

Report Given.

A report was submitted by the City Engineer respecting the work done by the Bell Telephone Company in the city and is herewith given:—

December 20, 1943.

His Worship Mayor Rollins and Aldermen of the City Council,
Belleville, Ont.

Gentlemen,—

Re: Bell Telephone Underground Cables.

I beg to submit herewith a report on the progress of the laying of the underground cables of the Bell Telephone Company as carried out by the Par-Tex Construction Company.

On Oct. 27th I made an inspection of the complete route through the city along East and West Bridge Streets from McDonald Avenue to Sidney Street, in company with Mr. Conrad and Mr. Curry, engineers of the Bell Telephone Company, and Mr. Parker, president of the Par-Tex Construction Company. A direct line for the trench was laid out, subject to changes being made, if necessary, after the trench was opened up. On Nov. 3rd Mr. Curry and I made some alterations to the line of the trench at Chatham Street intersection.

On Thursday, Nov. 18th., the Contractors' workmen started to work inside the city limits at McDonald Avenue and have been continuing westward since that date.

On Friday, Nov. 5th., excavation was started for the construction of the large manhole on Bridge Street, directly in front of the new office building at the south east corner of Bridge and Church Streets. The manhole was completed in ten days with the exception of replacing the pavement over the top, which will be completed after full settlement has taken place.

On Friday, Nov. 17th., the line of trench just west of McDonald Avenue was shifted in order to clear the line of one of our storm sewers. Part of our storm sewer has to be shifted approximately 6' to the north for a distance of 40' in order to by-pass the Bell Telephone manhole at this location. This work is to be carried out by our workmen at the expense of the Bell Telephone Company and this is fully understood by Mr. Curry.

On Nov. 23rd. Mr. Curry and I made a further inspection of the line of trench and we found the city storm sewer had not been laid in a straight line along the boulevard and it was impossible to get a line of trench straight through for the laying of the cable. It was decided to tear out the existing storm sewer pipes and relay new tile for a distance of approximately 370' along a straight line in the boulevard between Dufferin Avenue and Bleecker Avenue. This work is being carried out now by our workmen at the Bell Telephone Company's expense. We could not start this work until the Contractor's men had their trench filled in, so that our men would have more room to excavate our trench.

On Dec. 4th a 6" pipe line was uncovered in the boulevard between Foster Avenue and Albert Street, leading toward Foster Avenue. The pipes were full of roots and dirt and had not been in operation for some time. We traced this line of pipes to a point half way to Albert Street and found it to end there, with no connections leading in from any residences. It appears to have been a private line of sewer tile which was abandoned after the main sewers were constructed on Foster Avenue and Albert St. I then ordered this line of tile entirely removed.

On Wednesday, Dec. 8th., I again met Mr. Curry and we made some alterations in our storm sewer line at the corner of Bridge Street and Foster Avenue in order to let the cable line get through between the water main and the gas main at this point. A section of 12" storm sewer pipe 16' in length was replaced by four lines of 6" pipe and this work was carried out by our workmen at the Bell Telephone Company's expense. The connection was made between two manholes 16' apart. The velocity of the 12" pipe which was removed was increased 50 per cent by the replacement with four lines of 6" pipe, and this also increased the volume of discharge from one manhole to the other. A sump pit forming the bottom of the manholes prevents any obstacles from blocking the outlet of these pipes which replaced the 12" tile. In order to make this change-over, the block between Bridge and Queen Streets had to be closed for a week and I informed the Fire Department of this detour on Dec. 8th.

On Dec. 8th., it was found that the line of cables hit the same elevation as that of a sewer lateral leading out from house 162-164 Bridge Street, so I had Mr. Curry alter the grade of his trench in order to get over the top of the lateral. This order was carried out by having the Contractor backfill a section of his trench and relay the cable line for a distance of approximately 200'.

On Wednesday, Dec. 15th., Mr. Curry and I planned the removal of part of the 12" storm sewer between William Street and Ann Street and the relaying of a section of this storm sewer for a distance of approximately 40' in order to bypass the company's manhole at this location. This is also being done by our workmen at the Bell Telephone Company's expense. A large tree at this point may have to be entirely removed, as about one third of the tree roots had to be cut away to make room for our storm sewer pipes. If it is considered advisable to remove this tree after pipe laying has been completed it will be taken care of by our workmen.

On Dec. 16th a small 6" pipe line was uncovered under the main storm sewer line at the corner of Bridge and Ann Streets. This pipe was full of dirt and roots and was traced to an old catch basin which had been cut off from this 6" line and connected to the new storm sewer on Ann Street. The 6" line was then ordered removed.

This concludes my report on the activities of the work carried out to date and further reports will be submitted as the work progresses. I may say that I have received the very best co-operation from the Bell Telephone Company officials and engineers, as well as the officials and workmen of the Par-Tex Construction Company, and I can assure the Council that I will protect the City's interests throughout the duration of this work to the best of my ability.

Yours respectfully,
Charles A. Mott
City Engineer.

HERE'S HOW TO GET MORE HEAT

Your Ration Board won't allow you more fuel—but you can get more heat! Give your furnace a CHIMNEY SWEEP TREATMENT.

This finely ground chemical compound cleanses soot and scale from furnace walls, boiler tubes and flue clear up to chimney top. A soot-free furnace means a warmer house.

British Bring Benefits

One significant feature of the war is that British troops which have been stationed in Allied and friendly countries in pursuance of war against the Axis will leave behind them permanent long term benefits to the peoples concerned.

The Middle East Supply Centre and United Kingdom Corporation have ensured Middle Eastern import requirements, organizing disposal of supplies of various countries, introducing major industrial and agricultural improvements and thus raising the living standard. This result has been possible because under British supervision the area could be treated as a whole economic entity. Similarly works planned, pioneered and executed by British engineers in co-operation with local populations through the whole area have immensely improved transport and land utilization, affording a basis for permanent development.

One of the most sensational developments is locust control. Everyone has heard at some time or other the stories of the plagues of locust which devastate periodically the Middle East and Near East. People of those parts have for centuries accepted locust depradations as fatastically as sandstorms and droughts.

In the last local cycle, 1930, it is estimated that three and three quarter million pounds damage was done to Middle East crops and people were brought to starvation. It was discovered by British scientists that these cycles move in series of decades, therefore 1940, when the British opened the Middle East campaign, was the beginning of a new swarming cycle. Hitherto those countries took purely local action against locusts but locusts have no respect for national boundaries.

The area over which locusts swarm must be treated as a whole; the British therefore were able to bring advantages never before known.

The brain of the whole anti-locust work is the Anti-Locust Centre, London, where the world's experts forecast locust movements.

London forecast chief locust breeding as Arabia and Baluchistan. So British locust officers immediately proceeded to Bahrein on the Persian Gulf, Jedda on the Red Sea and Central Arabia to most inaccessible districts, where man had never penetrated. R.A.F. reconnaissance and Army Camel Corps showed where locusts were breeding. Their directions were followed by the Pioneer Corps who, rushing military transports to danger areas with poisoned bait, destroyed untold millions of locusts.

British authorities have spent 30,000 pounds sterling in locust destruction in Persia, Arabia, Ethiopia and in addition local government expenditure and saved crops worth millions.

Locusts, it is now realized, can be permanently defeated if international organization is undertaken. This has been started by the British with regional conferences in Cairo, Teheran and Nairobi.

So permanent results are bound to follow the foundation laid by the British army engineers for transport facilities and for communications and with the building of bridges and draining of malarial swamps and the diminishing of tropical disease, providing employment and handing on their skill to large numbers of natives. Local technicians are trained, local industry is fostered and widening the scope of interest and organizing an international system in which the good of one depends on the good of all.

Such steps also indicate the great part which British engineering skill will play in the reconstruction and development of the post-war world.

When one contrasts this benign and bountiful record of the British with the blighting and devastating influence of the German armies, one sees why there are such hopes for permanency and how the nations will realize how great a benefit the British army and the science it brings with it have been for the amelioration of living conditions and the improvement of the standard of living.

In this way the benefit of ages of scientific and economic progress may be felt within even one year and certainly within a few years.

Rommel

Rommel who went to North Africa with the usual German pomp of reputation and who afterwards was driven westward in headlong flight for over fifteen hundred miles before the Allied army under General Montgomery was taken out of Africa before the Nazi and Italian collapse was reached in Tunisia. He was sent to the Balkans and then to North Italy, according to reports. Now a new rumor says he has been in the west of Europe and in Denmark and there is some talk that he may be taking on a very prominent position in regard to the German armies. Rommel has never been mentioned along with the Prussian generals with whom militarism and junkerdom are a second nature.

Why the prominence given Erwin Rommel who has never been rated in the class with the old military class army leaders is difficult to understand, some however see in him a possible foil chosen by Hitler to offset any possible anti-Hitlerite trend.

Nazis Not Good in Last Ditch

(From The Buffalo Courier-Express)

Swedish information, for what it is worth, says that Dr. Goebbels is getting ready to launch a campaign to convince the German people they must carry out Hitler's pledge to fight to the last man.

Dr. Goebbels is reported planning to use decorated war veterans as stump speakers throughout the Reich to emphasize the Stalingrad disaster as an example of how 100,000 men sacrificed their lives to carry out Hitler's orders.

That would be dandy. The Germans haven't forgotten Hitler's confident prediction that Stalingrad would be a push-over for his invincible legions. They haven't forgotten what actually happened at Stalingrad—probably the greatest single defeat in German history.

We're all for having the Goebbels stump speakers stress the Stalingrad disaster. The reminder is hardly likely to rekindle German belief in Hitler's infallibility.

And we have our doubts about the efficacy of a campaign beating the drum for a fight to the last man. If that is all Hitler and Goebbels can offer at this point, their popularity rating in the Reich is likely to slip a notch or two. And the Germans, while they make excellent professional soldiers, have never built up a reputation for last-ditch fighting. Dying for a lost cause has not been one of their national traits. The odds are against their developing it now.

Walking on Concrete

(Leeds Yorkshire Post)

Warning us that the present timber shortage is bound to continue for a considerable time after the war, burly Mr. George Hicks, Parliamentary Secretary for Works pleaded a flexible attitude on post-war building. He was opening an exhibition of constructional concrete floors.

Concrete floors are extensively used in America, in Norway and Sweden, and in other Continental countries. But in Britain people are apt to think of them as cold and noisy. The exhibition aims at showing that with the right type of covering and with proper insulation such floors are both warm and noise-proof.

They are also damp-proof, rot-proof, vermin-proof and much more fire-froof than wood. More than 10,000 armament workers' homes in this country have been successfully equipped with them.

On escort duty around India's coast and on the ocean passages, in patrolling and minesweeping, vessels of the Royal Indian Navy steamed well over half-a-million more miles in the six months ending June 30th than in the corresponding period of 1942—doing a total of 1,500,000 miles.

ALL-TIME TASK

Our children are an all-time task
From which we're never wholly free.
When helpless infants, oft we ask
The day when they shall stronger be,
Believing when they romp and run,
With countless footsteps we'll be done.

But through the years as on they go
We find they need us more and more.
There is so much for them to know,
The tax seems heavier than before,
Then looms the dangers of the street.
They must be counseled how to meet.

No stopping time; no saying: "Done."
No bidding: "Go your way alone."
Full-time our services must run.
Shall right and wrong be truly known,
First must the home established be
Around the patient mother's knee.

Oh, never ends the need for care
And never need for love will stop.
The burdens parents all must bear
Are burdens they can never drop.
To offer all that children ask,
Is not a part, but all-time task.

Their names are Ernest Gadhow, C. Edgen and T. Sullivan. The father of Edgen is the foreman on the job at the light house and as a slight expression of his appreciation of the bravery of the Belleville men in making the rescue, he sent to each a beautiful large turkey.

The Money a Wife Saves

From the London Daily Telegraph.

The Court of Appeal has decided that money which a married woman is able to save out of her husband's allowance, or from payments from lodgers, is the property of the husband. An appeal which sought to establish that the wife had the right to keep the money was dismissed with costs.

Two women barristers, Miss Constance Colwill and Miss Knight Dix, instructed by a woman solicitor, appeared on behalf of the appellant, Mrs. Dorothy Ursula Blackwell. A third woman barrister, Miss Venetia Stephenson, held a watching brief for the Married Women's Association.

At Oxford County Court Judge J. H. D. Hurst decided that the money saved by a wife belonged to the husband, and made an order awarding to Mr. John Henry Blackwell, of Crantham Street, Oxford, £103 10s. standing to the credit of his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Blackwell, with Oxford and District Co-operative Society, Ltd.

Miss Colwill said in the appeal that in 1931 Mrs. Blackwell had a share in the Co-operative Society. In 1936 she started taking in lodgers. Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell separated in 1941. The County Court Judge had found that the £103 10s was money derived from the wife's housekeeping allowance given to her by her husband.

Miss Colwill submitted that there was an agreement between husband and wife that any money made out of the lodgers was to be for Mrs. Blackwell's separate use. She added that the wife said that she was saving for herself and her child.

Lord Justice Scott: Rather hard on the husband.

Lord Justice Luxmoore (to Miss Colwell): Do you admit that the wife's savings from housekeeping would be the husband's?

Miss Colwill: No.

Lord Justice Goddard: Then, if a husband gives his wife £5 a week and she wants to save it all, and does not spend it but puts it in the bank, the husband is to go short of food while she builds up a banking account. That does not seem right to me.

Miss Colwill argued that any profit from the lodgers came from the wife's physical effort.

Lord Justice Goddard (to Miss Colwill): Do you admit that the husband wanted roast beef for dinner his wife could say: "No, I shall get corned beef and save the balance." It is a most astonishing proposition that she can spend as little as she likes and save the rest.

Miss Colwill argued that housekeeping was a skilled occupation. Even if a wife saved only 2s or 3s a week she was entitled to keep the money.

Lord Justice Goddard: That is not law; it is ethics. Do you suggest that she is employed? If so, who is her employer? I should be very sorry to lay down that a wife is her husband's servant.

Miss Colwill: She is an equal partner and can earn money by reason of her partnership.

Lord Justice Goddard: Who is to pay her?

Miss Colwill: She takes her money out of the housekeeping money.

Lord Justice Goddard: That means her husband pays her. It would be a dreadful thing if it were held that money saved by the wife belonged to her. It would mean that every husband in a working-class household would be tempted to stint his wife as much as he could and she would have to ask him if she wanted a coin to buy a penny-worth of salt.

Miss Colwill: If Mrs. Blackwell had been a housekeeper she would been entitled to her expenses. She is in a worse position than a housekeeper.

Lord Justice Luxmoore: But she has a status which a housekeeper has not.

Lord Justice Luxmoore: If we were to decide that I can imagine what an uproar there would be! We cannot upset laws which have been settled many many years. If you want the law altered you must get Parliament to do it.

Lord Justice Goddard said that profits from the lodgers were the husband's. Their money was paid to him, although the wife received it.

Lord Justice Scott, dismissing the appeal, said: "There is no justification at all for the contention that, where a husband hands to his wife an allowance for housekeeping purposes, the husband is to be taken, as a matter of law, as presenting the savings out of that money to the wife for her sole use."

Lord Justice Luxmoore agreed Lord Justice Goddard, also agreeing, said that even if there had been an agreement between the husband and the wife with regard to savings out of housekeeping money this sort of domestic agreement would not necessarily result in a legal contract.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

With the arrival of Christmas the colonists "slowed down." Their axes stood idle while they fashioned crude skates and skeetered gaily along the surfaces of ice-bound streams and lakes. Skates of long ago were constructed by inserting an iron or steel blade into a wooden bed, which was somewhat shaped to the foot and fastened to it by leather straps. As the century progressed, all-metal skates were the favoured type.

"Careful now!" Don't do this and don't do that, said doctors of the 19th century when admonishing women and children who enjoyed going skating. "Do not sit down to rest a single half-minute; nor stand still if there is any wind; nor stop a moment after the skates are taken off, but walk about, so as to restore the circulation about the feet and toes to prevent being chilled . . ." "If the wind is blowing, a veil should be worn over the face, otherwise fatal inflammation of the lungs, pneumonia, may take place." . . . "Arrange to have an extra garment, thick and heavy, to throw over your shoulders the moment you cease skating; and then walk home, for at least half a mile, with your mouth closed, so that the lungs may not be quickly chilled by the cold air dashing upon them through the open mouth; if it passes through nose and head it is warmed before it gets to the lungs."

"Dormeuse" was the name given to a sleigh especially constructed to keep travellers cosy while travelling in the winter-time. It was an open sleigh with "a head made of sealskin and lined with baize." Bear or buffalo skins were arranged to keep out wind and weather and a feather bed was tucked snugly around the feet. It was the winter conveyance preferred by Lord Dorchester at the beginning of the 19th century.

CANADIAN FLIER IN MIDDLE EAST

Liberators, heavy bombers, flown by the Royal Air Force from a base in the Middle East, are doing great work in smashing Hitler's bases in the Eastern Mediterranean. Enemy installations in Greece and the Dodecanese are visited almost nightly by these giant American-built bombers, and many aerodromes, harbors and railways have been battered by the weight of their bombs. Here is Flight Sergeant M. Charbonneau, of Montreal, Que., who is rear gunner of a Liberator operating from the Middle East.

Conquering Highjacker at Coast Is Cougar

(By W. H. Colclough, Vancouver in Stratford Beacon-Herald)

"What's that?" asked the amateur hunter, across the midnight darkness of the flimsy camp, of a guide in his sleeping bag, a few feet away.

The guide slept on. Again the weird, strange sound, which commenced like a thin cry and finished with a spine-tingling scream, drifted through the melancholy-sighing fir and larch trees high above the British Columbia hunting camp.

"What's that?" called the hunter again, putting a little more power in his question.

The sleeping guide stirred and sat up. "What's that" he demanded.

"Listen!" warned the hunter. Much closer than before the cry penetrated the lodge.

"Oh, that," explained the hunter, with traces of disgust in his voice, "Cougar!" In three minutes the guide was asleep again.

Cougar. Only a cougar which wasn't on the hunt this time, or he wouldn't be advertising himself throughout the woods. Nevertheless his screaming presence raised the blood pressure of the amateur hunter and, according to the best authorities, it also raised the blood pressure of every deer within sound of the hateful noise.

The cougar is the conquering highjacker of the British Columbian forests. One hundred and fifty pounds of flexible fury, which fortunately is unconscious of its plundering power.

In one year a cougar, his mate and a couple of kittens will destroy well over one hundred deer. That's a lot of meat—approximately twelve thousand pounds. "One deer a week for each full-grown cougar," is the way one hunter puts it. Little wonder that there is a bounty on this animal and that in some localities an additional amount has been added by the community where raids are being made on domestic stock.

The cougar is of the cat kind, and is similar to the panther and jaguar found in other countries. During the day he holes up in some rocky den, quite inaccessible to the average hunter. In warm sunny weather he occasionally curls up on the warm side of a rocky bank. If disturbed, he takes to the tall timber and above the snow line will frequently circle and pursue the hunter, planting his feet accurately in the tracks of the nimrod.

Occasionally a cougar has been surprised eating a recent "kill" and has been destroyed by a fast-shooting sportsman before it got into the brush; but it is a rare experience to find a cougar without the help of dogs.

Professional cougar hunters may be found throughout the province, who hunt with a pack of four dogs; an Airedale to give courage, a Collie to put up a racket by barking, and two hounds for tracking. In a short distance the cougar usually trees, with the dogs circling below him. The hunter loses little time in following his dogs, for sometimes the cougar changes his mind and starts killing the dogs. After the dogs have been safely tied some distance from the tree the animal is shot. Many a good cougar dog has lost his life by being too courageous and closing in on a dying feline.

In Color, a cougar is fawnish grey, varying in degree, with black tips on ears and tail. The animal measures up to 9 feet from tip to tip and stands as high on the hips as at the shoulders. Cougars slip through the underbrush with amazing quietness and, working up wind, are able to catch deer with the greatest of ease. One of the saddest sights which may be witnessed in our forests is the discovery of a partly eaten deer—the recent kill of a cougar. Only a fraction of the deer is consumed—warm blood and fresh meat being the cougar's specialty.

There are only two cases on record where a cougar attacked mankind. In both instances the animals were thin, old and nearly blind. No harm was done in either case, although two school children were followed for a mile.

Bear may be found throughout the Dominion, but apparently cougar is found only in British Columbia. The fact that he has been killed in the Fernie and Banff sections indicates he is not afraid of the cold. There is a market for his skin and the Chinese restaurants make a bid for the carcass.

Unless you are familiar with the cry of the cougar you would not recognize it as such, but you would have an immediate impression that it was something which was master of the dark places in the forest.

HUGGING BEARS

An Associated Press dispatch from West Townshend, Vermont, recently said:

"Apparently squeezed to death by a bear, the body of Carl Herrick, 37-year-old hunter missing since Tuesday, was found today in woods by his cousin, Forrest Hewitt."

This dispatch was given wide circulation and in nearly every case the head-line writers gave the impression that the hunter was choked, squeezed or hugged to death by a bear.

Which raises the old question, Do bears actually hug their enemies to death?

The proverbial hugging propensity of bears is probably a myth, notwithstanding a vast amount of alleged testimony to the contrary.

Literature, reference works, and books on natural history contain numerous references to the "crushing embrace," or "deadly hug" of bears.

Pope says: "'Tis a bear's talent not to kick, but hug."

Nearly all careful observers are agreed that this notion is erroneous.

It no doubt arose from faulty observation.

In his book entitled "In the Zoo," Dr. W. Reid Blair, director of the New York Zoological Park when he wrote the book, said on this subject:

"In regard to the proverbial hug, the story is apparently devoid of foundation. A bear, on account of its anatomical structure, strikes round with its paws as if grasping and the blow of its power arm drives its claws into the body of its victim, which action apparently gave rise to its hugging reputation."

It is too bad to spoil a good story but all evidence points to the conclusion that there is nothing to the common belief that bears hug, squeeze or choke their victims to death.

Even persons who have wrestled with bears in the show ring testify that bears show no inclination to hug or squeeze their opponents.

Scottish Training Responsible For Successful Invasion Of Sicily Says L. Cpl. Faulkner

Sustained Serious Injury Near Mount Etna and Sent Home

PRAISES H. & P. E. REG'T.

"It was up and over the rocky we trained for weeks on end for what ultimately proved the successful conquest of Sicily," explained L/Cpl. Ross Faulkner, native of Stirling and a convalescent returned soldier of the First Battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, when looking back over the last few months. L/Cpl. Faulkner sustained a serious head injury at Ragulbato, near Mount Etna in Sicily, the nature of his wounds affecting his hearing and sustaining the loss of his right ear and a deep neck wound as the result of enemy bombing in Sicily.

One of six in his family, L/Cpl. Faulkner has two brothers in the Canadian army, one in the paratroop corps, one in the navy and 16-year-old Morris in the 2nd Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment (Reserves.) The son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Faulkner of Stirling. Ross' brother, Blake Faulkner, was also wounded in Sicily, while serving with the "Hastie-Pips," but has since rejoined his regiment and is now fighting the Nazis in Italy. The sixth member of the "Fighting Faulkners is none other than "Hub" Faulkner, father of five fighting sons, who, although a veteran of the last war, has spent the last two years back in the service with the R.C.A. at Kingston, only to be retired from service the same week his son returned from overseas.

H. & P. E. Reg't. Praised.

Referring to the Allied raids on Sicily, in which the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment took such a prominent part, L/Cpl. Faulkner paid tribute to many local district lads who were his comrades in arms. "I am not selecting these few out, but there were Chuck Kidd, Harold Dracup and "Cal" Calbury, Belleville and Don Stapley, Stilring, all in our platoon and they were all simply grand and proved themselves top-ranking soldiers, as did all the lads in the "Hastie-Pips," stated Ross.

Asked what his greatest thrill of the Sicilian campaign was L/Cpl. Faulkner hesitated and then replied—"Well, we were just about 110 yards off shore when I turned to my sergeant and well I remember saying—'I wouldn't trade places with any person in the world'—it was truly the greatest thrill of my life," added Ross as he related as to how the land troops went ashore under the protection of naval fire.

Nests Soon Disposed Of.

"We were met by a few enemy machine-gun nests, but they were soon disposed of by "B" Company under Major Stockloser. I believe he comes from around Madoc," added Ross as he paid glowing tribute to the work of the artillery for their work after the Allied troops landed.

Speaking of aerial warfare L/Cpl. Faulkner stated he only say three or four Nazi planes all the weeks he was in Sicily. "Yes, and it was one of them that got me and several other of our boys," he lamented.

"We had just made a successful attack on a hill and captured it. Jerry was so close he was tossing hand grenades that landed nearly in our laps, but the artillery put him out of business, when over came that plane and dropped a bomb about 200 feet away. That's about all that I remember," stated Ross, who later was treated at No. 5 Canadian General Hospital, situated at the spot where the first Allied paratroops landed. Later he was flown to Algiers for medical treatment and hence to England and later home to Canada.

Enlisted in 1939.

L/Cpl. Faulkner enlisted with the original Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1939 and went overseas just four years ago to spend Christmas of 1939 in England. When asked by the Ontario Intelligencer the reaction of Italians when the Allied troops landed in Sicily, Ross hesitated momentarily. "Well, I'll try to explain that. The civilians hid in fields, but once they saw we were friendly they greeted us. I recall marching through a village where the people had gathered in a church. One of our boys in front merely waved his hand and they all ran out to greet us with smiles and tears of what I'm sure was rejoicing. They were poorly clad, some had no shoes, even old ladies were tattered," continued Ross.

"As for the Italians we took prisoners, the first one I came in contact with was so happy that he wanted to carry my equipment. However, I wasn't taking any chances and held on to it as our equipment was much better than anything the Germans had. From what I could learn from the civilians the Fascist Government had taken everything possible from the common people, but they seemed to have a hope there would be a better future for them and after all I guess that's part of what this war is being fought for. Frankly I've only one regret—I wish I was back there with those buddies of mine in the good old "Hastie-Pips," you know they're doing a swell job on the east coast of Italy right now," added L/Cpl. Faulkner, who proudly displays an 8th Army Flash Badge on the shoulder lapels of his tunic.

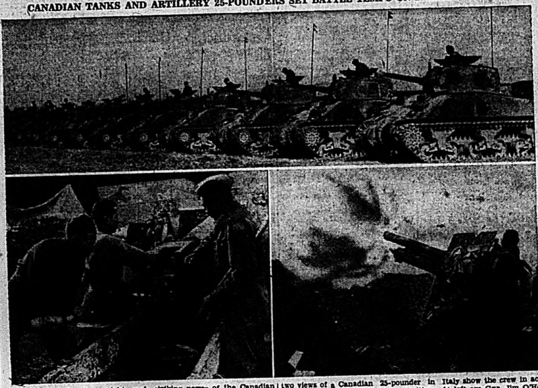
CANADIAN TANKS AND ARTILLERY 25-POUNDERS SET BATTLE TEMPO ON ITALIAN FRONT



Forcefully depicting the weight and striking power of the Canadian Armoured Corps and the Royal Canadian Artillery in Italy, these pictures lately received, give the answer to two reasons why Hitler's crack divisions in Italy are fighting a retreating battle. TOP, Sherman tanks, massed in line for inspection on an Italian plain, belong to the regiment that scattered German tanks in the battle for Termoli, destroying ten Hun Mark IV's in bitter olive-grove fighting. BOTTOM, two views of a Canadian 25-pounder in Italy show the crew in action during a barrage against enemy positions. At left are Gnr. Jim O'Hearn of Newcastle, N.B.; Gnr. R. C. Gunn of St. Catharines, Ont.; and Gnr. S. S. Cline of Hudson, Man. In one Sicilian incident, these guns, hub to hub, smithered the German lines of two square miles under an artillery curtain of 30,000 shells within a few hours. — (Canadian Army Overseas Photos.)

Australian Letter

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 21 — (CP Cable) — Australians are displaying concern over food production and export problems.

No one here objects to rationing of butter and meat if convinced such action benefits the tightly-rationed British people but they do display anxiety at the government's failure to release sufficient labor from the army to help farmers and at the daily reports on waste of foodstuff and loss of production.

For instance, the central executive of the primary producers' union was told that in the most favorable butter production season actual production dropped 20 per cent because of labor shortage. The chairman of the meeting said dairy farms were manned chiefly by old people and children and many elderly men and women, who came out of retirement to manage the farms for their sons in the forces, were breaking under the strain.

The press has carried daily editorials condemning the lack of planning for absorption of surplus products which were raised in response to government appeals to increase output for the benefit of Britain and the Allies.

The crux of the problem is the failure to release enough manpower from the army. The government promised in October to release men from the forces and munition factories for farm work in recognition of the fact that food production was as important as increasing the number in the army. Latest published figures show only a proportion of the number was released.

Sir Earle Page, one of the leaders of the country party, has stated that when the government found a dock labor shortage as a result of strikes and absenteeism it quickly put troops to work at military rates of pay. Many editorials also made this point.

Army Minister Francis Forde said the promised adequate number of men would be released from the services and factories within the promised period of 10 months but the press insisted the men were wanted now for harvesting, milk, butter and hog production — and not in the distant future when production of many crops ends for the season.

Partisans Smash Way Into Vicinity Of Zagreb, Croatia

London, Dec. 21 (CP)—Yugoslav Partisans have smashed their way into the vicinity of Zagreb, German-occupied capital of Croatia, 70 miles east of Ljubljana on the Trieste-Belgrade railway, a communique from the headquarters of Marshall Josip Broz (Tito) announced today.

The bulletin, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio, said that one column of Tito's forces had entered the town of Kopinec, near the important Nazi-held base on Dec. 15, while another column had occupied the town of Vojnic, 35 miles to the southwest, on the same day.

The Partisan threat to Zagreb was broadcast belatedly, along with the announcement that Tito's forces were mopping up in the Croatian provinces of Banya and Kordun, where the Germans were said to have been put to flight after their sixth big offensive had ended in a debacle.

Tito's offensives were still rolling forward in Sanjak, Bosnia and Slavonia, the communique said. Presence of some of Hitler's pet fighting units in Yugoslavia was disclosed through an announcement that the Partisans were locked in battle with the Nazi Prince Eugene SS divisions in Hercegovina.

New National Anthem Replaces 'International'

London, Dec. 21 — (CP) — Russia is hailed as a "Republic of the Free" in a new Soviet national anthem which has replaced the famous "Internationale," a Moscow broadcast said last night.

The "Internationale" was broadcast by order of the Council of Peoples Commissars, the broadcast said, because it "does not reflect the basic changes that have taken place in our country as a result of the victories of the Soviet system." The old anthem begins: "Arise, ye prisoners of starvation, arise ye wretched of the earth," and concludes with "The International Soviet will free the human race."

The new song, music by composer A. V. Alexandrov and words by Sergei Mikhalkov and E. L. Gisten, praises the victorious growth of the Soviet Union.

'Over Top' in Providing Clothing for Forces And Helping Allies

Ottawa, Dec. 21 — (CP) — Government authorities said yesterday the clothing industry is "over the top" in its gigantic task of providing clothing for Canada's fighting men of Canada — and assisting other United Nations as well — but they said they cannot promise the civilian population will notice much change in the supply situation.

Production of uniforms has been tapering off for some months, and Prices Board officials said they had been kept informed of the situation. One result of the lessened military demands for clothing had been easing of the order forbidding two-pant men's suits.

There might be other benefits later, but they would not be as widespread as some purchasers might hope.

RALSTON ENJOYS FUN AT PARTY FOR CHILDREN

Praises Work of C.W.A.C. Holding Christmas Fete for Bombed-out Children

ALSO R.C.A.F. PARTY

By MARGARET ECKER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 20—(CP Cable)—It is hard to say who was having the most fun—Col. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Defence Minister, three-year-old Patty or the company of the Canadian Women's Army Corps giving a Christmas party for children of one of London's worst-bombed slum areas.

Crushing a rag doll with cheeks as red as her own, Patty kept saying in a singsong voice, "I've a dolly. I've a dolly."

"'er never 'ad one before. 'er always asking for one," said Georgie, Patty's brother, with eyes as bright as his sister's.

Col. Ralston squatted beside another boy, fair-haired Reggie, having as much fun as the four-year-old youngster who hugged a grey elephant. Maj.-Gen. P. J. Montague, senior officer at Canadian military headquarters, London stood by, smiling.

"I don't know when I have had so much fun," said the minister, laughing. "This is a wonderful party and in line with the grand service our girls are doing everywhere. It shows how extremely thoughtful they are, providing a party for the children."

Picking up the elephant he added, "Think of the nights they worked making these toys."

Little Guests Arrive

The C.W.A.C. members worked hard and late but their reward could be seen in the eyes of Cpl. Mary Clegg of Levis, Que., playing with a little boy named Brian, and Margaret King of Hamilton who held Patty close.

Long before the children arrived the Canadian girls were leaning from the windows of their barracks off the Strand, watching for their guests. When they arrived, each was whisked off by C.W.A.Cs. like Pte. Peggy Sheldon of Cochrane, Ont., who grabbed Michael, son of a member of the R.A.F. All those at the party were the children of servicemen.

The children first saw movies, then had supper of sandwiches, soft drinks, cocoa and candy.

Pte. Pat Rook of Toronto acted as Santa Claus.

Airmen and women of the R. C. A. F. also gave a party for children of a much-bombed neighborhood nearby. Cpl. Harold Pullen and Cpl. Burney Laddy of London, Ont., dressed as clowns galloped around with shouting boys on their backs. Sqdn. Ldr. W. A. Davison, of Brockville, Ont., acted as Santa Claus.

Chinese Capture Four Main Bases From Japanese

Chungking, Dec. 21 (AP)—Chinese forces have smashed forward in the central China rice area, capturing the four main Japanese advanced bases of Lihsien, Tsingshih, Nanhsien and Ansiang, Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek's headquarters announced today.

The victory, a follow-up to the smashing at Changteh of a Japanese offensive against the important Chinese base and communications of Changsha, effectively cleared the northern banks of Lake Tungting. It also made the position of the Japanese forces between the Lake and the Yangtse river precarious.

The original Japanese offensive against Changteh and Changsha was launched from the four strongpoints capture of which was announced today.

Gen. Somervell Defends Canol Oil Development

Washington, Dec. 20 —(AP)— Lt.-Gen. Brehon Somervell testified today that the $130,000,000 Canol oil development in northwest Canada was made imperatively necessary by "the desperate outlook" of the war in the dark days of 1942.

Opposing the recommendations of the War Production Board Chairman, Donald M. Nelson, and Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes, who have advocated junking the project about which they said they were not consulted, Somervell told the Senate Truman Committee:

"Any inference or statement made that the Canol project was handled in a cavalier fashion and without further reference to my associates is entirely without foundation."

Somervell said he had discussed the project with members of the general staff concerned and that it was "entirely outside Mr. Nelson's jurisdiction." He added it was also outside Ickes' jurisdiction.

Somervell defended the project against repeated criticism of it by Chairman Harry Truman (Dem.-Mo.) and said the decision to drill wells at Norman Fields, Fort Norman, N.W.T., and build a pipeline to White Horse, Yukon, and a refinery at the latter point, all of United States expense, was "sound."

Desperate Days.

Even today, looking at it from "hind-side" judgment, he declared the conclusion that it should have been undertaken appeared "inescapable."

"Those were desperate days, indeed," he said.

"In December, 1941, we had lost the fleet, as an offensive weapon; it was out of the picture for months to come."

Detailing the mounting losses, the shelling of "West Coast refineries by a Japanese submarine," and the subsequent landing of shells in Oregon, he said there was "great public anxiety on the east and west coasts."

"There were unfortunate possibilities of raids—not alarms," he declared.

"The security of the whole Pacific was in jeopardy and danger," he continued.

He said General Pyron, his oil expert, and others recommended the development of the Norman fields for whatever they would produce and he recommended the project along with oil development in New Zealand.

Allied chiefs of the staff have made the Canol developments an essential part of their grand strategy for a global offensive war, Somervell declared.

"It is not a question of completing the project, in my mind," he said. "It is a question of expansion. I have no doubt funds will be sought for expansion soon."

Somervell disclosed that oil started through pipelines at the Norman wells field last week.

"We might as well have gotten off Tarawa after having killed all but one squad of Japs as to get out of there (Canol) now," he said.

"Fortunately we struck oil far in excess of our wildest expectations," he declared. "It is certain to be a 50,000,000 barrel field and probably a 100,000,000 barrel field."

Somervell said $24,000,000 remains to be spent on the Canol project, including $8,500,000 for oil prospecting.

He termed Canol the "biggest oil field that has been discovered in the North American continent in 15 years."

He said the armed forces are particularly short of high test gasoline such as can be produced at the army's project.

How to Announce Baby's Arrival to Your Friends

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am going to have a baby soon, and I want to send birth-announcements to our families and friends who live in other cities. In shops where I live I have been unable to find any such cards; but I am told I can have them printed by special order. Do you think this plan is too extravagant? Would you advise just sending written notes on note-paper or cards?

2. I would also like to have a party for our friends here, and make the event known to them in an informal way. I had thought of using a centrepiece or some other means for the announcement, and serve a buffet lunch. What do you think of this plan? What kind of entertainment would you suggest for the evening?

Ella.

1. There does seem to be a shortage of ready-made birth-announcements in the stores in some cities. I believe you really would prefer to do what I suggest that you do... send notes to relatives and friends telling them the wonderful news. Write these notes on white semi-note paper, or on white cards, or (if you have them) on the inside pages of "Informals." (If you haven't engraved "Informals," buy a box of plain one, write "Mr. and Mrs.——" in the centre of the announcement-note inside. This would serve to verify your address.)

Here's an idea for your notes:

Dear Aunt Kate and Uncle Jim.

John Alexander Clark, junior, arrived on Tuesday, November 16th. We're all well and flourishing. And so happy!

Lovingly,
Ella and John.

2. You do mean, don't you, that you would have this party at some convenient time after the birth of your baby? If perhaps you do mean giving it before the baby's birth, I suggest you give the party in the day-time (perhaps a luncheon-dessert party, or a tea-party) and invite only your close women friends. If given after birth, you could have an evening party, inviting the husbands too. In either case, I don't believe it will be necessary to have any planned entertainment, but you may properly, of course, plan for bridge or any other game you know your friends enjoy.

A centrepiece of baby's breath would be appropriate. For an after-the-birth party, you might combine with the baby's breath blue delphinium or other blue flowers (for a boy) and pink roses or other pink flowers (for a girl). Or for the centrepiece you might make a big baby's boot, of white crepe paper or soft cotton. Around the centrepiece you might have cut-outs of storks.

The Magic of Christmas for the Family

If it hadn't been for letters from some of my correspondents asking for the recipe, I believe I would have forgotten about "Poor Man's Fruit Cake" this Christmas.

For the last ten or twelve years, I have sent out thousands of leaflets telling how a very good Christmas cake can be made for about fifteen or sixteen cents a pound. It's not so much the pennies saved in the making of this cake, as it is the filling of the house with that delicious Christmas aroma of baking spices, sugar and fruit—the very essence of Christmas smells.

Now that the long tide of the war seems to be turning, it's a good thing to keep our faith in anything that makes us happy for a day, or even a few hours. It's such fun to be childishly happy over the Christmas celebration, even if it's only once a year we indulge that impulse.

Looking back on your own childhood, when you wrote ill-spelled letters to Santa Claus, perhaps you remember when your mother made the Christmas cake or the plum pudding, if your family preferred the latter delicacy.

This year, when everybody is getting better wages, why not make a Christmas cake, if for no other reason than to fill the house with that delicious spicy odor wafted from the kitchen as the cake is baked. Poor Man's Christmas Cake has had a far-reaching history since this column has been offering the recipe. One correspondent has been making it commercially and been turning a pretty penny from the results.

During those dreadful days of the depression, when parents could not fill the children's Christmas stockings, they compromised on making Poor Man's Fruit Cake and let the children take a hand in the preparation. Happy climaxes have resulted when girls have invited the boy friend over to help stir up the cake. And old people have written me charming letters saying that the cake tasted almost as good to them as those old-time mixtures which demanded a dozen eggs and a pound of butter. All of this Poor Man's Fruit Cake skips.

And in the words of Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol," "God bless us, every one."

The Marry-Go-Round

The Sweet and Low-Down

Love is sometimes just that sudden revulsion of feeling, which makes a man fancy that one girl can make him happy for life, simply because some other girl has begun to bore him.

A man optimistically thinks that he can love more than one girl at a time. But a girl knows, instinctively, that love is like the tide: when it flows in one direction, it is sure to ebb from the other. That's what men call "suspicion", a woman calls "intuition", and the detective calls "a hunch".

You can believe all that an honest girl says, except when she is discussing her age—and all that an honest man says, except when he's running for office or making love.

Nothing makes a man more uncomfortable than to be idealized and adored by a girl, when he only wanted to be cheered up, amused and petted a little.

Don't worry, when he sends you his snapshot, wearing a beard. A beard is the best chaperon a man can have; but a nice clean shave and hair-cut seem to smooth a man's way for skidding into all sorts of folly.

And then there is the optimistic sort of girl, who believes that the more kisses she gives a man at retail, the more eager he will be to acquire an option on them at wholesale.

A woman is smart. She can make money in a beauty parlor or a tea-room—and then lose it in stocks or real estate. But a man is smarter. He can make money in business or the market—and then lose it under the cushions of the divan. Or in a crap game.

In this day of standardization and regimentation (in everything from your clothes to your slang) about the only signs of individuality a girl retains are her toothbrush and her fingerprints.

Just about now, the successful career-girl is beginning to wonder if she's merely a "tax-packin' mamma".

Women's Work Will Be Made Much Easier

London, Dec. 20 (CP) — British women's pleas for more comfortable postwar living give promise of being answered—in the kitchen at least.

One of London's electricity authorities has designed a complete kitchen that can be plugged into a home as easily as a radio, that can be delivered as a unit and under mass-production will be sold at a price within reach of the average housewife.

A typical unit is 10 feet long and eight feet high and includes the following equipment:

Built in electric cooker, with grill and oven; built in refrigerator; convenient working table, beside cooker; cupboards for vacuum cleaner, etc.; detachable ironing board; racks for plates, pans, and kitchen equipment; built-in electric clock and plugs for radio, iron and electrical appliances.

The unit as a whole is streamlined and built to take as little room as possible. Such equipment will be revolutionary in English kitchens, few of which now have conveniences of any kind.

Measles a Disease of Importance During Wartime

Very few people escape contracting measles at some time in their lives, and it is not uncommon for persons to get their first attack past middle age. About the only persons immune to the disease are infants under three months of age. Measles run in epidemics and these epidemics seem to occur practically everywhere. When all those who are susceptible to the disease have been exposed to it and have contracted it, a period of several years may pass before a large new group of children who are susceptible to the disease are born and grow up.

Grownups are not immune to or protected against measles unless they have had an attack earlier in life. For this reason, measles is a disease of importance during wartime. Young men from the farms, who have come to camps for training, often contract the condition because they have not been exposed to it earlier in life. Hence they develop it quickly.

Measles is probably due to a virus, that is, an organism so small that it cannot be seen under the most powerful ordinary-type microscope. Viruses have been seen under the electronic microscope.

Since measles is probably caused by a virus, it is more difficult to control than infections caused by germs, because there seems to be great difficulty in developing vaccines which will protest against virus infections.

Measles is a respiratory disease, that is, it is contracted by breathing in the organism. It may be passed from an infected person to one who is susceptible to it before any noticeable symptoms occur. The chances of passing the disease on are much greater during the first two days, when the only symptoms are sneezing and coughing.

Up to the present, no means of artificial, permanent protection against measles have been developed. Vaccines have been prepared, but none of them have been found to be effective. It is well known, however, that temporary protection (about four to six weeks) can be produced by injecting convalescent measles serum. This consists of serum taken from the blood of a person who has recently recovered from the disease. If the serum is given within three days after exposure to the infection, it usually will keep the disorder from developing. If the serum is given from the third to the seventh day after exposure, the disease may occur in a mild form and, following this, the person is permanently protected.

Another substance used for protection against measles is placental extract, an extract made from the afterbirth.

When measles epidemics are occurring, children with colds, no matter how slight, should be kept out of school. If one child in the family has measles and other children in the same family have already had the disease, there is no reason to keep them out of school, since they do not act as carriers.

When a child has measles, he must be put to bed and kept there several days after his temperature has returned to normal. While there is no specific treatment which will overcome the infection, there are things the doctor can do to keep complications from occurring.

Fashion Flashes

AT WEST COAST resorts there is much emphasis on the dress-up slacks worn with a matching, collarless jacket and a midriff blouse of navy and white dotted crepe. The printed crepe is used for jacket lining and hat.

NOVELTY necklines mark many of the new blouses. Gold and blue or rose checked metallic silk taffeta is used for a simple blouse made with a high, cross-draped neckline that can be tied towards the back at the centre or at the side front.

NO NEED for an argument between mother and teen-age daughter about the new fashions. Mother and daughter both approve. And why not, when there are such frocks for junior miss as a winter white flannel with tint gold buttons from the square neck to the hem, gold kid belt and a ruffled neck yoke.

REPORTS tell us of the importance of gray for afternoon frocks at smart southern resorts. A fine wool jersey in very soft gray is used for a pretty frock with a U-shaped neckline that is softly gathered with self drawstring cord. Shirring and fullness at either side of skirt. Worn with yellow accessories.

A BRIGHT SPRING is the destiny of one line of beautifully sequined prints. A charming short-skirted formal has a white sheer peasant-type top worn with a built-up dirndl skirt of white crepe with a splashy red and green design picked out in tiny sequins.

IT'S NICE to note that most collections stress colorful suits for Spring such as a suit of pastel pink flannel with a matching pink chiffon blouse. The straight boxy jacket has a self tuxedo front.

QUEBEC LEAGUE TO CARRY ON

May Invite Two Other Teams in to Finish the League Schedule

Montreal, Dec. 21 — (CP) — The Quebec Senior Hockey League decided last night to attempt to carry on after the loss of Montreal R.C.A.F., with the possibility put forward that Valleyfield Braves of the Montreal Intermediate League, and University of Montreal C.O.T.C. might enter the league.

At a meeting lasting almost three hours last night, a committee was formed to investigate the two teams and report back at another meeting Thursday night as to whether the Valleyfield squad and the university team were considered strong enough to enter the league.

Last night's meeting was called after the R.C.A.F. regulations forced withdrawal of Les Alouettes and left the league that started the season with 6 teams, faced with possibility of folding up for the duration after being cut to three teams —Ottawa Commandos, Quebec Aces and Montreal Royals. Montreal Army and Cornwall Army had been forced to drop out earlier in the season.

At the same time, Tommy Gorman, general manager of the Canadian Arena Company, told delegates that Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League would be willing to play exhibition games against Aces and Commandos at Quebec and Ottawa respectively, to aid the finances of the league, providing permission for the exhibition contests could be arranged.

YANKEES VOTED TEAM OF YEAR IN CLOSE FINISH

Notre Dame Football Squad Close Second to McCarthy's Clan

CAGE TEAM THIRD

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Dec. 21 — (AP) — It's the New York Yankees doing the rags to riches routine to move from the biggest disappointment of 1942 to number one team of 1943 but Joe McCarthy's clan had to go hard to nose out Notre Dame's Irishmen.

For the twelfth straight year the annual poll of sports writers conducted by The Associated Press has produced a baseball winner but football might have broken the string this time if Notre Dame had been able to get past the Great Lakes Sailors in the last game.

Final tabulations show the Yanks and Irish received the same number of first place votes, 32 each, but the world champs got their winning margin in total points, 168-166, through the balloting for second and third.

If the upset by Great Lakes cost Notre Dame the title, the fact that the Yankees bounced back to beat the St. Louis Cardinals in the world series won the crown.

Once again it was the world series that counted most with the voters just as last year's top award had gone to the Red Birds from St. Louis after they had dazzled the baseball world with their speed.

Of the 27 teams mentioned in the poll, 13 were football clubs with the remaining divided among basketball with five, baseball with four, hockey with three and swimming with two.

Illinois' Whiz kids, who won the Big 10 basketball title without losing a game, surprised with 11 first place ballots and enough points, 57, to give them third place by a comfortable margin over the Chicago Bears who placed fourth with 18 points and only one vote for first.

TORONTO LEAFS INVADE BOSTON

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Maple Leafs invade Boston tonight for the National Hockey League's only encounter of the evening. Having a three-point margin over the third-place Bruins, the Leafs cannot be ousted from second place, but a bitter struggle is in prospect.

The Bruins are still unbeaten on their home ice this season, and that record includes a convincing 8-5 victory over the Leafs. At Toronto, the Bruins have won one and lost one.

The re-shuffled Leafian pack tonight will again have Benny Grant in the nets where Turk Broda cavorted for so many seasons. The Leafs were advised yesterday that Paul Bibeault, former Canadiens' goalie now in the army, is likely to stay there. Leafs had had hopes of getting Bibeault as a permanent netminder when they heard he was likely to be discharged from the army.

Benny hasn't been doing so badly at that. The Leafs have won five and lost two since the start of the month, with a total of 37 goals for and 24 against.

Tonight's tilt is the first of three week-night games before the Christmas rush. On Wednesday Detroit plays at Chicago, and on Thursday Rangers are at Detroit.

FIGHTER DIES AFTER BOUT

Al Reasoner Suffered TKO. and Never Regained Consciousness

Chicago, Dec. 21 — (AP) — Al Reasoner, 23-year-old lightweight boxer, died in Columbus Hospital today, five hours after he suffered a technical knockout in a 10-round boxing bout last night with Freddie Dawson of Chicago.

Reasoner, who had been boxing professionally since October 1942, was unconscious when he was carried from the ring in the 10th round and died without regaining consciousness, said Dr. E. J. Buchan of the Illinois Athletic Commission.

Dr. Buchan, who said the cause of the young boxer's death was cerebral hemorrhage, announced an inquest would be held. He termed death "an accident."

Dawson outboxed Reasoner in the first nine rounds of their headline bout at the Marigold Gardens, and at the start of the final round, the Chicagoan sent the Hines, Ill., lightweight to the canvas with a left hook. Reasoner, who weighted 137½ to Dawson's 135½, arose at a one count and Dawson peppered him with a two-fisted attack, sending him to the canvas for the third time in the round.

Airmen Register All Their Counters in the First Two Periods

SCORE IS 6-2

By The Canadian Press

In one of the few remaining games of their shortened senior O.H.A. season, Toronto R.C.A.F. last night at Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens humbled Hamilton Majors for the second time in the campaign with an impressive 6-2 victory in which the Airmen registered all of their counts in the first two periods. The visitors finished with a flourish but the Fliers held off after Johnny Conick found the net for Hamilton's brace of goals in the first three minutes of the third period.

R.C.A.F. rolled up a 4-0 lead in the first stanza with scores by Peanuts O'Flaherty, Wilson, Bud Poile and Bobby Laurent and it was 6-0 before the second recess after Red Heron and O'Flaherty found the range, the former Cornwall Army puckchaser registered his second goal at 16:56 in the second period.

It was the third toss-back of the season for Majors and the fourth victory against six losses for the Fliers. Hamilton still occupies first place in the standing with 15 points, one point up from Kingston Frontenacs whom the R.C.A.F. next meet Wednesday night at Kingston. Air Force is now only one point down from St. Catharines in third spot. R.C.A.F. will have only four more scheduled games in the Senior O.H.A. before withdrawing from the circuit Jan. 6.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Dec. 21 — (AP)—When such a basketball expert as the Oklahoma Aggies' Hank Iba grudgingly admits that a suggested change in basketball "might work," this dept. feels safe in popping off about it...our idea was to hoist the basket up out of reach of the extra-tall boys and to make it larger so that shooters would have a reasonable chance of hitting their mark without getting into those traffic jams under the bucket...Iba, who contends that basketball will see a lot of post-war changes, added that anything that tends to produce more outside shots will give the spectators a chance to see what's going on inside.

Coincidence

Harry Lumley, the 17-year-old hockey goalie who made his big league debut with the Detroit Red Wings here Sunday, has the same name as the old Brooklyn outfielder who clouted nine home runs to lead the National League in 1904... and the way the Ranger fired pucks at him, Detroit's Harry probably thought he was playing his first big league game in one of those Ebbets Field pop-bottle showers.

Sportpourri:

The two lightweight champs, Sammy Angott and Beau Jack, likely will meet in an over-weight scrap at the Garden Jan. 28 ... Wonder what good that'll do? ... Emery Hresko, outfielder-pitcher of the Flint, Mich., American Legion baseball team, has been offered $2,500 to sign with the Giants but decided to wait until he heard from the Tigers' Wish Egan before taking it ...Allie Stolz's kid brother, Stanley, made his debut as an amateur boxer last week in the same Newark A. C. ring where Allie started as a 105-pounder. Stanley weighs 125...Steve Warga, who won the Miami Open golf tournament, is an air line radio operator and Johnny Bulla, who tied for third, is an air line pilot. Perhaps they're used to hob-nobbing with birdies.

Miss Patty Berg Crowned Outstanding Woman Athlete

(By The Canadian Press.)

The Associated Press' annual poll for the selection of the most outstanding woman athlete of 1943 resulted in the crowning of Miss Patty Berg, women's western open golf champion and now a lieutenant in the marine corps reserve. Miss Berg, who previously gained the honor in 1938, received the first-place vote of 30 out of the 52 sports editors in the poll, for a total of 118 points. It was only last June that she had returned to competition after suffering serious injuries in an automobile accident down in Texas in December, 1941.

The runner-up, with 76 points, was Pauline Betz who defended her national tennis title at Forest Hills, N.Y., in September. Third in the list was Gloria Callen, prominent as a competitive swimmer. In the 13 years of the poll, only one woman athlete had previously captured the award for two years, this being Alice Marble, tennis queen, who headed the list in 1939 and 1940.

Wally Kilrea of Hershey Bears maintained leadership in point standing in the American Hockey League during the past week, compiling a total of 33 on 11 goals and 22 assists, according to statistics issued last night from circuit headquarters in New Haven. His teammate, Gaston Gauthier, was second with 31 points while Cunningham and Burlington, both of Cleveland, were tied with 22 for third place.

Under the sponsorship of the Philadelphia Nationals, the Bradford, Pa., club will re-enter the Pony Baseball League next season and it is expected that Erie, Pa., will also join the circuit which operated last season with six teams in New York State.

Elmendorf Farm, near Lexington, K.Y., with its stock of racing thoroughbreds was bought yesterday from the estate of the late Joseph E. Widener by his son, P. A. B. Widener. The later announced the whole crop of 1944 yearlings would be offered at the Keeneland sales next summer but would send the pick of the two-and-three-year-olds to the races

Despite the protests of State Governor H. M. Adkins, the Arkansas Racing Commission yesterday granted a permit to the Oaklawn Jockey Club to conduct a race meeting at Hot Springs Feb. 28 to April 1. The club's franchise expires in 1944.

Scout Johnny Nee of the New York Yankees said yesterday at St. Petersburg, Fla., major league clubs were banking on new players on U.S. army teams for the future supply of big league timber, many youngsters in the armed forces having had the opportunity of developing as diamond performers in the camps.

Lester Patrick, manager of New York Rangers, announced yesterday he had acquired Tony Demers from Montreal Canadiens for the balance of the National Hockey League season. Demers has just been discharged from the Canadian army and comes to the Rangers as part of the Phil Watson deal. Watson, unpermitted to give up his Montreal residence because of his war work, has been loaned to the Canadiens for the season in return for four players sent to New York. Patrick said that in return for Demers' services, he has granted the Canadiens permission to use Watson in games in New York. Demers is not in shape for N.H.L. competition immediately, Patrick said, and will report to Providence, R.I., of the American Hockey League for seasoning, subject to recall to the Rangers on 24-hour notice.

Toronto, Dec. 21 — (CP) — The last "incident" to raise a howl from press and public before the R.C.A.F. withdrew its senior hockey teams was transfer of three outstanding players from the Army at Cornwall, Ont., to the Air Force in Toronto just in time for them to score three of the four goals as Toronto R.C.A.F. beat Toronto Navy 4-3 in an O.H.A. senior game.

The three players involved were Bud Poile and Peanuts O'Flaherty, both former N.H.L. men, and Bobby Laurent. When the trio arrived in the air force dressing room, they were still wearing their army uniforms. There were rumors that the great Neil Colville might also be transferred from the army to the air force in Toronto.

Just the day before the R.C.A.F. headquarters clamped down on hockey completely there was some pertinent comment on the Laurent-Poile-O'Flaherty deal from their former headquarters, Cornwall, where Jack Park of the Standard-Freeholder wrote: "There are still a lot of people who believe men who were hockey stars before enlisting have not changed their vocation since joining the services...A lot of fellows are seeing more action in the rinks than in the ranks."

Silencing of such criticism of services hockey was as important to the individual players involved as to the service generally.

Moxy by Mervyn:

Mervyn (Red) Dutton, N.H.L. managing director, told Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson how he signed his first N.H.L. playing contract. Dutton had a hunch not to sign a contract in the summer of 1926 when he heard Lester Patrick was on his way to see Red at the construction camp where he worked. So Red climbed aboard a horse, rode out of camp leaving word he would be away several days. Patrick didn't wait and a few days later came word that the old Western Canada League had blown up and that Dutton, formerly with Calgary Tigers, was automatically a free agent.

Manager Eddie Gerard of Montreal Maroons then visited Dutton's camp and offered him a three-year contract at $5,000 a year plus a bonus of $5,000 for signing. Red's previous top was $3,000 for a season and he was so dazed by the offer he put his hands over his eyes and tried to think. Gerard thought Red was figuring a counter bid and upped the offer to $8,000 all around, or $24,000 for three years. "I just came out of the trance and yelled: 'Where's that contract and where's the pen?' " says Dutton. He signed on the spot.

What's Doing in Sport

Ottawa — (CP) — Prominent as a curler since 1911, a basketball player and swimmer, Albert Edward Smaill, 69, died suddenly at his home here yesterday. He was skip of three Glebe rinks which won the Governor-General's trophy and was the author of the Canadian Curler's Handbook, published in 1940.

Chicago — (AP) — Knocked out in the 10th round of his bout with Freddie Wilson of Chicago last night, Al Reasoner, 23, Hines, Ill., collapsed in his dressing room, necessitating the use of a pulmotor by ambulance and fire department squads.

Boston — (AP) — Surprising Ralph Zanelli, 148½, of Providence, upset Fritzie Zivic, 152, of Pittsburgh, last night at Boston Garden, giving the former world welterweight champion a thorough going-over in the 10-round main bout at Boston Garden before a crowd of 9,483.

Montreal — (CP) — The Gazette says today that Jerry McNeil, 17-year-old sensation in the nets for Montreal Royals of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, "may be going to play with Toronto Maple Leafs on the lend-lease basis this Saturday."

McNeil tried out at the beginning of the season with Montreal Canadiens, but was sent down to Royals for seasoning.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

Whirling.

"I have come to join my husband", said Mrs. Smith, arriving at the Golden Gates.

"Delighted to meet you, ma'am", replied the keeper. "What was your husband's name?"

"Joseph Smith".

"I'm afraid that will not be sufficient for us to identify him. You see, we have quite a lot of Joseph Smiths up here. Are there any other means by which I can identify him?"

"Well before he died he told me that if I ever kissed another man he would turn over in his grave".

"Oh, I know the chap. Up here we call him "Whirling Joe?"

Ready To Go.

Tonight the spacious 200 by 85 foot open air rink at the Trenton R.C.A.F. station will be officially opened. "We have all modern equipment, music for pleasure skaters, 26 giant floodlights adequate to make it as bright as day and workmen are now constructing the latest type of hockey goal standards", explained F.-L. "Buff" Horton, station sports officer.

Incidentally Buff tells us they are ice boating on the bay off the Air Port. "We have two ice boats and with the bay frozen over to a thickness of about eight inches the boys are getting some great thrills skimming over the ice these breezy days. After all there's no excitement known more thrilling than ice boating you know", revealed F.-L. Horton. All of this does recall the day when the Belleville harbor was doted with moored ice boats along about this time of the year. Afternoons and Sundays used to see scores of ice boats speeding across the frozen bay with the steel runners actually leaving the ice under the flying pressure of the wind. Then, also, another thriller was the jumping of wide cracks that sometimes appeared at various points where currents ran. More daring ice boat drivers would speed up their craft and hurtled these six to eight foot gaps sail boat and all. That was a thrill.

F.-L. Horton also informs us he is planning a gala boxing show for Jan. 19th., when Hub Smith, who hasn't been defeated on the station in over three years, will meet the Army champ from Kingston. "Buff" also hopes to present the No. 1 Command ring champion that night also. Incidentally "Hub" was washed out of air crew recently owing to defective eyesight and has returned to the Trenton station. Jerry Bagnell, former Oshawa hockey player, is also stationed at Trenton now.

Directly after the vacation period there will be some interesting hockey news from the Quinte service league.

Pitching Records.

According to the Howe News Bureau:

American league pitchers, with scores of star hitters doing their swinging for the armed forces, literally "poured it on" the batsmen during the 1943 junior circuit season, with New York's brilliant Spurgeon Chandler leading a hurling show which saw no fewer than 29 moundsmen wind up the campaign with less than three earned runs allowed per nine inning game.

Chandler enjoyed a remarkably brilliant year. The husky Georgian, with a record which gave him the league's most valuable player award, dominated the hurling department. He won 20 games and lost but four to lead the league in won-lost percentages at .833. He pitched 20 complete games, of which he won 19. He finished third in the strikeout department.

But his crowning achievement was his 1.64 earned run average—lowest in the American league since Walter Johnson turned in his 1.49 performance in 1919. He became the 13th pitcher to lead, in the same year, both in won-lost percentage and earned run average.

The Yankee hurler, beaten only by Cleveland and Washington in 1943—each of those clubs decisioned him twice—had one winning streak of seven games from Aug. 1 through Sept. 11. Previously he had unbeaten strings of five, three and four games. "Spud" was in 30 games, pitched 253 innings—a total topped only by three other flingers —pitched to 918 men, allowed 197 hits, 62 runs, of which 46 were earned, allowed 54 bases on balls, fanned 134, hit four batters and wild pitched but three times.

As was the case in 1942, the past season promised to be a pitcher's year—and turned out that way. There were 29 pitchers, who worked in 45 or more innings, who finished with an earned run average of less than three runs. That 29 total surpassed anything in that department since 1918, when 33 hurlers finished under the 3 run mark. last year the total was 20, but in 1941 there were but seven under the three point marker.

Sharing honors with Chandler as one of the two 20-game winners was Detroit's Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who finished with a 20 won 12 lost record which placed him 12th in the won-lost percentage column and 10th in the E.R.A. section.

In a season which saw no no-hit game pitched for a third straight season and the 21st time in league history, rookie Allie Reynolds of Cleveland led the strikeout artists, fanning 151. Chandler and Trout led the shutout division, each having five. Hal Newhouser, Detroit southpaw, again had plenty of trouble with control, issuing the most passes, 111—just one more than did rookie Don Black of Philadelphia.

Jim Bagby of Cleveland, pitched the most innings, 273, and also gave up the most hits, 248. The most runs, 122, were scored off Luman Harris of Philadelphia, who lost the greatest number of games, 21. Harris also allowed the most earned runs, 101.

Johnny Murphy, long-time New York relief expert, enjoyed a fine season, winning 12 games and losing but four to wind up third in the won-lost percentages and 12th in the earned run column with a mark of 2.51.

Longest winning streak of the season was nine, by Orval Grove of Chicago, while the longest losing streak was 13 straight, by Harris of the Athletes. Top strikeout job of the season was by Newhouser of Detroit, who whiffed 14 Yankees May 27 in New York.

Remember When.

Eighteen years ago today, officers of the International Boxing Federation refused to accept the challenge of Erminio Spalla that was hurled at Champion Jack Dempsey. The Federation decided that Spalla was too inexperienced to fight Dempsey for the world's heavyweight boxing championship.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 258

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The partner for whom I do not care a hoot bids no-trump whenever he should bdi a suit. The no-trump complex is an antiquated custom handed down from crude auction bridge methods.

In auction bridge days, experts favored no-trump bids. They did so because of ignorance. They had no easy bidding system to help decide their best final denomination.

Their systems were not flexible enough to find out their safest contracts for earning the biggest rewards. So, they were blinded by the seeming advantage of no-trump. It took less tricks to make game.

Minor suit bids in those days were as scarce as hens teeth. Major suit bids were used only with length. So, if a player had anything like a bid, he took a stab at no-trump.

They used to think it was silly to mention a minor suit. Because the taking of 11 tricks for game looked like a forlorn chance. So, they resorted to no-trump bids requiring only nine tricks for game.

In the earliest days of this century, one of the greatest experts of that time was Elwell. So, I pick up his book of 1905 and open it at random on page 226.

On that page he shows this hand:

♠Q J 7
♥A 6 2
♣A K 8 7 3 2

He says the dealer has that hand. Do you know what he says the dealer bids? He bids no-trump. And he was the outstanding expert of his age!

Nowadays, the opening bid with that hand would be one club. We would then wait to see if partner bids spades or hearts or diamonds. Or assists clubs. Or bids no-trump.

We might finally wind up in no-trump. But not until we had first shown our club suit. Unless we like to put our head in a noose.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Spy Ship"

Exciting as a time-bomb, and as topical, is Warner Bros.' "Spy Ship," which opened yesterday at the Capitol. Featuring Irene Manning and Craig Stevens in the top roles, it packs the tenseness of today's headlines into its action-crammed narrative.

Dealing with saboteurs and their efforts to stymie Uncle Sam's war efforts, the thrilling story reveals the ever-present efforts of our enemies to stifle aid to our armed forces.

Well cast and directed, "Spy Ship" opens our eyes to the undercover agents working stealthily and steadily to defeat the war aims of the United Nations.

Action is the film's keynote; the kind of action which today's war conditions have made Page One news in the newspapers throughout the world. "Spy Ship" isn't kid stuff, but neither is today's conflict. There's a war to be won, and in "Spy Ship" are disclosed ways in which all of us may help win it.

"You Can't Escape Forever"

The laugh-packed story of a hard-hitting newspaper editor who has to take over a "lovelorn" column, is the amusing theme of Warner Bros.' new film, "You Can't Escape Forever," which started its run yesterday at the Capitol Theatre as the added hit.

The film stars George Brent and Brenda Marshall who lend a realistic touch to their roles. They envelope just the proper characterizations of two sophisticated newspaper people who really care for each other but cover their true feelings with wise-cracks and sarcasm.

Gene Lockhart, Roscoe Karns and Edward Ciannelli all give brilliant performances in the supporting roles. Jo Graham did a swell job in the direction of "You Can't Escape Forever," blending thrills and gags without a single let-down.

The Canadian Universal News and "Tomorrow's World" complete the double program.

AT THE BELLE

"Tornado", Breezy Film

Nancy Kelly makes her debout as a screen singer in the role of a mining town cabaret chanteuse with social ambitions, in Paramount's mile-a-minute thriller "Tornado", which opens today at the Belle Theatre. She introduces two songs, "I'm Afraid Of You" and "There Goes My Heart".

Nancy who is co-starred with Chester Morris in this action packed drama of a coal miner who is driven to great wealth and back to poverty by the overwheming ambitions of his wife, returns from the New York stage in order to go before the cameras in "Tornado", in which incidentally she is the wife. While in New York she appeared in "Guest In The House", and "Flare Path".

"Good Fellows"—funny

A loveable little family that's sure to walk right into the hearts of every member of every family in town, now is cavorting on the screen at the Belle Theatre. It's the Helton family, headed by Papa Jim (Cecil Kellaway), and introducing Mrs. Helton (Kathleen Lockhart), grandma Kent (Mable Paige), attractive older daughter Ethel (Helen Walker), and little daughter Sprat ably portrayed by Diana Hale. The latter, aged seven, is one of the most engaging little tykes seen on the screen in some time.

In this picture, which is an understanding little giggle at fraternal organizations and their members, Kellaway plays the part of an inveterate "Joiner" and manages to get himself, his lodge and his family into one jam after another. It gets so bad that he almost losses out on a big real estate deal, but is saved through a combination of fancy billiard playing, lodge brotherhood, and love. The latter commodity is furnished by pretty Helen Walker and James Brown. The conniving of little sister "Sprat" also aids in straightening out things.

All in all, it's the kind of picture that most people would like to see more of in these worrisome times.

The Canadian Fox Movietone News described by Lowell Thomas, will also be presented.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Frontier Badmen"

Roaring along from gunfight to gunfight and thrillingly alive with the color and romance of the old west, Universal's "Frontier Badmen" came Monday to the screen of the McCarthy Theatre. The production is a major achievement in the realm of action, melodramas and for sheer gripping entertainment, it stands by itself among current Hollywood offerings.

Polished performances by a cast of excellent players enhance the story's rapid movement, Robert Paige, popular young leading man, is outstanding in his portrayal of the courageous Texas cattleman who wages war on a ring of weindlers in the pioneer settlement of Abilene Kansas. Anne Gwynne, seen in the chief feminine role in highly captivating, while others who contribute to the film's dramatic appeal are Noah Berry Jr., Dianna Barrymore, Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine.

Included among other notables in the picture are Tex Ritter, Thomas Gomez, William Parnum and Lon Chaney. The latter, famous for his recent "horror" characterizations, appears appropriately as the sinister banjo-playing henchmen of a ruthless gun-gang.

Gerald Geraghty and Morgan B. Cox co-authored the original screen play of "Frontier Badmen", memorable sequences of which include a cattle stampede through the streets of a prairie town and an attempted lynching. Abilene, as it appeared 75 years ago, is the locale for much of the action and the story is based in the traditional trek of Texas cattlemen and their herds from the Southwest over the perilous Chisholm Trail.

2nd feature attraction on the McCarthy program is "If I Had My Way" with Bing Crosby and Gloria Jean.

Varied Program Will Feature Don Cossack Choral Concert

The General Platoff Cossacks described as the most versatile choral unit of their kind will arrive here for one of their unique concerts of Russian folklore and dance on Monday, Jan. 10th. at Collegiate Auditorium.

Formed shortly after the last war during their temporary sojourn in Bulgaria, these 27 singing Russians have to their credit more than 4,000 concerts in all parts of the world. Their range of repertory is said to be uncommonly wide. It includes the folk ballads, heroic war songs, lullabies and mystical church music of the native land. It also is extended to take in Negro spirituals, operatic excerpts and songs in English and Spanish.

A feature of every concert they give is their demonstration of the folk dances of Russia. These include not only the traditional dances from the country of the River Don, but also a wide variety from other parts of that land of varied cultures collectively called Russia.

One feature of the dance part of the Platoff Cossacks' programs is the work of the famous knife dancer. He is a Caucasian Cossack and follows quite another tradition than that of the Don. He uses no fewer than 12 knives in the course of his dance routine. These he balances in his mouth, in hands, chin, lips and shoulders. It is said that his is an art that few are able to acquire since it is a family accomplishment handed down from father to son.

The General Platoff Don Cossacks named after a famous Russian commander of another century, made their official debut in Vienna in 1926. That was just following their official foundation which took place the same year under the patronage of the late Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, the great Czech patriot, who was then president of the Czechoslovak Republic. Eduard Benes, who succeeded Masaryk and who is now head of the Czechoslovak Provincial Government in Great Britain, is another patron of the Platoff Cossacks.

Parachuting Airman Thought He Landed In Denmark

Stockholm, Dec. 21 — (AP) —Sgt. Murday, 25, one of the Canadian airmen who parachuted to safety after his bomber crashed in Sweden Dec. 16 thought he had crashed in Denmark until he walked in on a birthday party.

The newspaper Svenska Dagbladet said the Swedish police found the airman at a farm at Parabol where he was the guest of honor at a farmer's 50th birthday party.

Murday was quoted as saying that after parachuting into what seemed to be Denmark he did not want to show himself. When he got hungry, however, he tried a farmhouse where 100 Swedes were celebrating.

He had seen police searching for him and had kept hidden because he thought they were Germans.

Murday is an ex-school teacher.

Council of Nations Must Be Universal Anglican Synod View

Toronto, Dec. 21 — (CP) — Conviction that the war must be pursued "until the enslaved nations are released and such conditions are established as will permit the nations of the earth to follow righteousness and practice fair dealing" is expressed in a statement released to Church of England clergymen by the Council for Social Service.

The statement based on discussions at the General Synod in Toronto recently, declares "It is apparent that there has not yet been attained a satisfying fellowship among men and nations, nor adequate freedom for all within such a fellowship."

A League or Council of Nations, to be ultimately successful, must be universal, the statement says, "with present enemy nations purged of malicious militarism and brought to a sense of their responsibility, admitted into a world organization for the maintenance of peace."

Cards and Letters Burned in Mistake Of Posties 'Lingo

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 21 (AP)—Only ashes remained today of more than 100 Christmas cards and letters, disposed of by a temporary carrier through a misunderstanding of postoffice parlance.

The youthful carrier, returning with a stack of letters which he had been unable to deliver because they were disarranged, was told by a regular employee "throw them into streets," meaning to sort them according to streets, numbers and zones.

The assistant started to dump the remaining mail behind the postoffice, when another temporary employee suggested a bonfire.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was starting to take a walk with pop, and ma said, William, these green swayed slippers are the only possible shoes that I can wear to the affair tonight.

That's a sollem thought, pop said, and ma said, The point is, the heels are a little run over and I want you to stop in at the shoemaker's with them. It's only a slight repair and you can stop and pick them up again on your way back. Here they are, nicely wrapped up, she said.

That's the only way I'd carry ladies slippers through the streets, I assure you, pop said.

And we went in the shoemaker shop on the Avenue and the 2 shoemakers were working in back of the counter, pop saying, Good afternoon I've got a pair of ladies slippers here and then this shoemaker said, It'll Will it be all right if I stop back in about 20 minutes or so? he said, and the this shoemaker said, It'll be all right if you stop back, but you wont find much difference in the slippers. How do you like that, Ed, he wants a job done while he waits right smack in the middle of the war, he said.

Maybe he'd like us to measure him for a new pair of riding boots and have them ready by tomorrow, the fat shoemaker said. There's only about 90 customers ahead of him and a two weeks waiting list, he said, and pop said, My error, gentlemen. It's a good one on me and 2 bad ones on my wife, he said

And he took the shoes out with him again just like they were, saying, Yee gods, if labor is the under dog it's the under Great Dane and I'm —the upper Mexican Chywawa.

And we kept on walking, me carrying ma's shoes on account of pop not liking to carry packages.

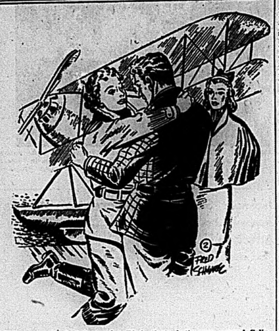
NORTH TO DANGER by TOM GILL

CHAPTER 2



With a squeal of glad surprise, Blair threw both arms around Colin.

The airport was almost deserted. Thin ice had begun fringing the lake, and two planes were moored to the wharf; a large Canadian Airways Junker, and a small cabin plane, very new and glistening. Paying the driver, Colin walked down the bank to the smaller plane where a tall girl in flying clothes was tightening spark plugs in the motor.

With a thrill of pleasure he watched her. She had changed. She wasn't a kid any more—she was tall and lithe as a willow reed. The cold November wind kept blowing her crisp black hair, and she flung it back with a well-remembered gesture. Hard to believe she could ever grow up or change. He had taught her to swim and drive a dog team. They had hunted and fished together. And now—in those two years of absence she had become a woman and a licensed pilot.

Irina beside him, he moved out on the wharf, the wind singing in their ears, until, close by the plane, he called, "Do you run that all by yourself, lady?"

The tall girl turned. For onc astonished second she gazed down at him, then with a squeal of glad surprise jumped from the wing and threw both arms around him.

"Colin! Colin, you darling. I never thought—you didn't — Oh, I'm so glad!"

He did not speak. Stooping, he kissed her.

"Blair, you're the best thing I've seen since I left. You're worth coming a million miles for."

With a happy, tremulous laugh, she moved back; then she saw the woman beside him.

"Blair, this is Miss Meredith," he said. "She's the passenger you're taking to Learmonth."

The two women smiled, and in that second it seemed to Colin that Blair's eyes had gone wary. Quickly she turned to him. "But you're going, too?"

"The sooner the better. Can you land at Learmonth this time of year?"

"The channel's still fairly free of ice. But there's always a chance of cracking a pontoon."

"Oh, I'm expecting you to wreck us." He picked up Irina's bags. "Nothing as lovely as you are could be a safe pilot."

Laughing she stepped up on the wing. "In ten minutes, prepare for the worst."

It was none too roomy inside the little plane once the door was closed; and, taxiing slowly out, Blair tested the two magnetos, then, turning into the wind, opened the throttle. The roar of the motor deepened, the tail rose until the pontoons were scarcely touching the water; ever so slightly Blair pulled back on the wheel, and they were in the air. Conscious of a vast relief, Rae looked back for the last time; he was on his way!

Whatever the future might bring, he was on his way to Learmonth. Back there, lost in haze and distance, the city lay, and somewhere back there was Jonathan Dove.

Down beneath that smoky haze where Colin's eyes were watching, two men sat in a narrow office, examining with absorbed attention a pile of red fox skins. Across the office door were the words, in modest letters, J. HOLMES, FURS; and the acrid smell of pelts hung heavy on the air.

Close together the two men sat, one of them large and swarthy, a dead cigar in his mouth. The other, slight of figure, and wearing gold-rimmed spectacles, kept turning a faded derby in his never-resting hands. A strangely expressionless face; the skin drawn tight, like parchment, and behind it, as if from behind a mask, the mild gray eyes looking out.

The big man shook a pelt, causing the thick red fur to gleam. "Prime, eh? Lovely! And our fall catch will find the best market in years." He looked toward the closed door, then asked casually, "What about Wolverine?"

The smaller man had taken a sudden interest in the markings of the pelt. "My work in Wolverine is done. The place is crowded with mounted police. Learmonth comes next. The reservation has four thousand Cree Indians, and the stage is set. Give me a little time—they move slowly, my barbarians—but when trouble comes, what can the Canadian government do?"

"They can call in more mounted police."

"Exactly. Call them down from the bay, and leave its south shores unpatrolled."

The big man laid the pelt before him. "The Party relies on you absolutely, Johann. So do I." He glanced at his companion's hands, then quickly looked away. "But some of the council suspect you of a certain—ah, a certain eagerness for violence."

Stiffly the impassive face jerked in a smile. "You talk like a sentimental American. Since when has the Party frowned on violence?"

"But we want no more premature deaths—as at Wolverine."

"That Hendrik's Bay fellow?"

"That Hendrik's Bay fellow may know too much. He is clever and without fear. Also, I think, a little crazy—a bad combination to play with." Again the lips trembled in what may have been a smile. "So if he persists in interfering, I cannot guarantee—"

The other waved a negligent hand. "In that case, of course."

The door opened. A young man entered bearing another armload of furs, and laid them on the table. They waited until he had gone. The big man picked up the skin of a blue fox and almost lovingly ran his fingers over the long guard hairs.

"What a beauty! Look, Dove. Can you send me anything better from Learmonth?"

Quietly as a cat Dove had risen. "I may send you something even better from Learmonth."

And the two men smiled into each other's eyes.

High over fields of fresh-fallen snow Blair's plane was heading straight into the north, following the Winnipeg River, then angling westward to the lake. They passed the Narrows, and soon the last village fell away, the last road was crossed, and ahead lay leagues of rivers, lakes, low ridges and muskeg swamps — bleak, desolate and unending, stretching to the frozen waters of the bay.

From the controls Blair glanced back at Colin. "That's Behrens River under us. Two more hours and you'll be home."

Home! Rae drew a deep breath and saw Irina watching him.

"Learmonth is my first memory," he told her. "There's not a lake or a river I haven't paddled or trapped in."

"You're a trapper?"

"No. I worked with the Hendrik's Bay Company there until two years ago."

"Hendrik's Bay. That's why you're a friend of Rodney Selkirk. Tell me about him."

"It's hard to know where to begin. There's not an Indian, white man, or breed up in that country who wouldn't give him his shirt. He's the most human man I ever knew, shy and sensitive—more like a schoolmaster than a chief factor of the biggest fur company in the world." Colin stopped. "And up where we're going, Rodney Selkirk is more important than the company itself."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean the human things he stands for. He's given his life to making this north country a better place to live in, and he's done it single-handed. The Indians and breeds owe it to Selkirk that the white trappers didn't clean out the fur animals years ago. Why, there wasn't even a doctor there until Rodney brought up Blair's father, Dr. Benedict."

Colin's hand pointed to the lake-dotted country beneath. "This land we're flying over is good for one thing and one thing only—fur. It's been a fur country for two hundred and fifty years. It's too cold for farms, the trees are too gnarled for timber, but it's the greatest breeding ground for fur animals in the world. Take them away, and every white man and Indian here would be doomed to migrate or starve. Human life would stop. Selkirk saw all that from the first; he put his foot down on the white trappers' using poison and snares; he made them respect the Indian game reserves.

"Twenty years ago he stood alone, laughed at as an impractical dreamer. Today there are more fur animals in the forests around Learmonth than ever; Indians don't starve in the winter, or die like flies from disease. And all because of one man—Rodney Selkirk."

Irina's eyes were on him. "You're really fond of Rodney, aren't you?"

"I should be. He did more for me than anyone ever did. He helped me get an education, and when I was fed up with the outside world he brought me back and gave me faith again—faith in this north country."

"That's interesting. It's hard to believe you were once fed up with the world. I know that feeling myself. But you are too healthy for such experience. Tell me about it."

"It's too long a story—and too long ago."

"Promise sometime you'll tell me."

"Perhaps."

Through the silence that followed, Irina watched the winding lake shore; then quietly she said, "I am going to marry Rodney Selkirk."

Rae started. For a second he did not want to look at her, and his eyes sought the window while the motor droned on. He knew he should say something; but, when he did, he knew he had blundered.

"You're years younger than Rodney." It was almost a protest. Even as he spoke he felt vaguely angry at his own clumsy resentment, yet something in him refused to accept that Selkirk was going to marry this woman who sat beside him in the plane. She couldn't be more than twenty-five, and Selkirk was fifty-two.

Women, so far as Colin knew, had never held a place in the life of that gentle, retiring man, and, watching her, Colin wondered what strange wind had blown athwart Selkirk's life since he had gone. Would she bring him happiness, or would she hurt him? Or was she only seeking a haven? Again he looked at that vivid, many-colored hair and those strange eyes.

"You're thinking thoughts about me," she accused.

"I was thinking about Rodney. This marriage comes as a surprise." He felt himself drawing away from her and, to distract her attention, pointed toward the skyline, where, in a great V., a flock of ducks flew south. "The end of the mating season," he murmured, and wondered if the words sounded ironic.

Well, Irina Meredith wasn't his problem. His problem was what Jonathan Dove would do. Turning from her, he watched the frozen ground beneath them. Dove would take the first scheduled plane for Learmonth—that would be a week from now, maybe ten days. Ten days' respite at most. Not much, but if he worked fast and had good luck it might be enough. And after that, after Dove reached Learmonth, it would be another story—it might not even be safe to stay.

With lowered head Blair had been studying the map, and now she called back to Colin. "I don't like it. We're running out of the good weather."

He looked ahead. Banks of clouds were rising above the north horizon, heavy and black, stretching across the sky, telling of wind, and perhaps snow. Rae leaned forward. "How far are we out of Learmonth?"

"About a half hour. Trouble is that's just where the storm is centering." He saw the anxiety in her eyes and asked, "What do you want to do?"

"Turn back. That's the wisest thing."

Christmas Music Features Rotary

The Christmas spirit permeated throughout the Rotary Club luncheon room on Monday as members digressed from the regular club program to enjoy a rendition of vocal and instrumental numbers by local artists and arranged through Rotarian Leo Riggs. It was Mr. Riggs' first appearance at Rotary since his being taken ill several months ago and members extended to him a hearty welcome upon his return and for his arrangement of the Christmas music.

As is the custom each year, members of the Rotary Club were guests of the hotel management for the luncheon, they commencing the luncheon hour program with the singing of well-loved Christmas carols, following which the guest artists were heard in vocal and instrumental numbers.

Miss Helen Cook delighted with two delightful Christmas solos, "Come Unto Him," and "Infant Jesus." Leo Riggs played the accompaniment for Miss Cook and for a violin solo number by Dr. A. C. Locke Rotary President Jack Deacon favored with several popular songs, climaxing his rendition with the typical Scottish number "MacGregor's Gathering." Mrs. J. Deacon played the accompaniment for her husband.

The business portion of the meeting was brief with President Jack Deacon giving a report of the work of the Rotary sponsored Belleville squadron of the Air Cadets. Present strength of the corps was 88 members including officers. Brief sketches of the corps training curriculum were cited by the president.

Rotarian Alex Nathan was appointed as club member to the Sea Cadet Board.

Minimum Cheese Price of 27½ Cents Per Pound Indicated Next Season

Possibility of a minimum price of 27½ cents per pound for cheese manufactured in Ontario next summer is indicated as the result of information coming out of a recent meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association executive, it is announced by Mr. J. L. Joss, secretary. The Producers' executive met last Friday with the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, at Ottawa.

According to the announcement made by Mr. Joss, the Cheese Producers' Association has been advised that the bonus of 30 cents per hundred pounds for cheese milk instituted during the autumn, will be continued throughout the 1944 cheese producing season. The 30 cents bonus is expected to be paid in addition to the current cheese bonus paid by the Federal and Provincial governments.

Continue Milk Bonus.

"When the 30 cents bonus on cheese milk was announced by the government, the general opinion was that this applied only for winter production and would be discontinued in the spring," stated Mr. Joss. "The Producers' Association is now advised that it will continue throughout the 1944 season."

The effect of the 30 cent bonus on the price of milk for cheese would mean approximately three and one half cents per pound, according to the Cheese Producers' secretary. The present price of cheese f.o.b. factory is 20 cents with an additional possible four cents through government bonus. The Federal government pays two cents bonus on cheese scoring 94 and one cent per pound on cheese scoring 93. The Provincial government pays two cents on all cheese. Thus with the further addition of the three and one half cents realized through the cheese milk bonus, the possible minimum price farmers may realize will be 27½ cents per pound.

Roy Weaver Given 6 Years For Car Thefts

Roy Weaver, Belleville, was sentenced to serve six years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary after pleading guilty to charges of car theft, breaking, entering and theft and assaulting a police officer when arraigned before Magistrate J. B. Garvin at Kingston recently. Lloyd Bilow, an alleged comrade in crime, pleaded not guilty and elected trial by the next court of competent jurisdiction before judge.

Two of the charges entered against the pair were presented by Provincial and Belleville police, namely that of stealing a car and assaulting a police officer. The authorities alleged that Weaver and Bilow were responsible for the shooting of Constable M. A. McNairn of the R.C.M.P. last month. Weaver was given six months on this count and four years concurrent for the stealing of a motor car belonging to Wm. Dennis of this city. Bilow pleaded not guilty to all charges.

Weaver received his most lengthy sentence, five years, for breaking, entering and theft of wearing apparel from Walker and Genge's general store at Verona. Nearly all of the other terms were of the concurrent sentence nature.

Weaver had only been released from the penitentiary on Nov. 8th last after serving a three years term imposed in a Belleville court.

Obituary

LATE MRS. JOHN VARCOE

Allans Mills — Residents of Seymour East were shocked to learn of the sudden passing of Emily Isabella Anderson, beloved wife of John Varcoe, at her fifth line home on Friday last, Dec. 10th.

The late Mrs. Varcoe was born in Rawdon Township 56 years, 10 months ago. About 35 years ago she moved to Seymour and as a young lady was married to her now sorrowing husband, John Varcoe.

The deceased lady won many friends through her kindly ways and generosity. She was always a particularly active friend of the sick in her community. She was a devoted Presbyterian and an industrious church worker. Besides her husband she is survived by one son, Alex., of Birdsalls; three daughters, Margaret (Mrs. Edgar Fisher), Olive and Isabelle, all of Peterborough; four brothers, Maxwell, Edward and Frank, all of Allans Mills district, John of Edson, Alberta; two sisters, Mary (Mrs. Alex Green), of Campbellford, and Clara (Mrs. Roy Merrills), of Morris, Michigan, a third sister, Susan, predeceased her.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was conducted at Burnbrae Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon with Rev. J. O. Ralston in charge.

Many beautiful floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which a multitude of friends regarded the deceased.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Roy Loucks, W. C. Todd, Mel McKeown, T. W. Bennett, John Bennett, Alfred Stevens, and the flower bearers were Messrs. Ronald Loucks, Carl Loucks, Murray Bennett, Morley Bennett, Bert Wallace, Murray Meiklejohn.

Interment was made in Burnbrae Cemetery.

Adamson, who also conducted the service at the graveside in Mountain View Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. Grant Sprague, C. Sager, W. Blakely, C. Sprague, W. Stanton and C. Kent.

Late ADAM LOVE
(Queensboro)

The funeral of Adam Love, Queensboro, who died in the Belleville General Hospital last Friday, took place from the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, Madoc, on Monday afternoon. The bearers were Messrs. William Nickle, James Gifford, Ray Whiteman and H. Dalyea.

Harbor Commission Report Given To City Council

A. H. Ketcheson secretary-treasurer of the Harbor Commission, submitted a report of the activities of that organization to the council and it was ordered filed. The report follows:—

December 6, 1943.

Mayor Rollins,
City Hall, Belleville.
Dear Mr. Mayor:—

At a meeting held in your office, of a committee appointed by Council and the Belleville Harbor Commission, it was thought that in connection with post-war planning, if a summary of the operations of the Harbor Commissions for the past several years could be procured it would facilitate closer co-operation between the City and the Commission, and enable them to suggest plans for the future.

As will be seen in the following summary, there is only a small surplus available from year to year for capital expenditures or major improvements, and the present plans of the Commission are to use whatever is available to enlarge the present area of reclaimed land. This policy has added considerable to the revenue of the Commission and also the City. At the present time such firms as City Service Oil Company, Good Rich Oil & Refining Company and Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company have erected storage tanks and other buildings on land reclaimed by the Commission, from which the City as well as ourselves derive income. The area reclaimed also provides space for the unloading of coal which at the present time is vitally important to the war effort. Coal for the various Air Ports and war industries is unloaded in this area.

The Commission as presently constituted, do not desire to take the credit for the policy of reclaiming land as the previous Commissions in 1935 used some $15,000.00, which surplus has been accumulated over a period of years, to build what is called the new pier. Bonds and a loan from the bank totalling $8,500.00 were necessary to complete this work. Some additional $25,000.00 was supplied by the Federal Government to fill in north of the new pier.

In 1936 the Commission presently constituted were appointed. Gross receipts in this year were $3,710.24. After paying operating expenses such as Harbor Master's salary $1,200.00, and minor repairs and replacements, there remained $1,669.27 from which $1,000.00 was taken to apply against bank loan.

Gross receipts in 1937 were $3,797.59. Operating expenses $1,936.90, leaving a net of $1,860.69 from which $1,500.00 was taken to apply against bank loan.

Gross receipts in 1938 were $4,251.28, operating expense $2,637.10, leaving a net of $1,614.18 and $2,000.00 was paid on loan.

1939 gross receipts were $4,429.42, operating expense $3,045.35. Loan reduced by $2,000.00.

1940 gross receipts $5,034.12, operating expenses $2,133.28. Loan reduced by $1,500.00.

1941 gross receipts $6,620.30, operating expense $2,813.77. Balance of loan $500.00 liquidated and $1,350.00 paid on additional fill, (reclaimed land policy).

1942 gross receipts $5,306.71. Operating expense $2,879.69. Paid on reclaimed land $4,250.00.

The increase in gross receipts from 1938 on is due principally to there being reclaimed land available. No one appears interested in a swamp or a water lot even though it can be filled.

The Commission would like the City Council and the citizens of Belleville to feel that their interests are our interests, and we would appreciate the opportunity of further discussions at any time convenient to your committee.

Yours very truly,

A. H. Ketcheson,
Secretary Treasurer.

The War Today— Great Red Army Offensive Major Blow at Nazi Left Flank

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press War Analyst

The great Red Army offensive now rolling southwest of Nevel, whatever its immediate tactical aims, is clearly a major blow aimed eventually at collapsing the German left flank.

It is, moreover, in all likelihood only the first of a series of winter drives by the Russians calculated to speed up considerably the probable intention of the German staff to withdraw by Spring to the so-called Riga-Odessa line.

The power of this northern lunge is indicated by German confession of losses long before the Russians disclosed progress, or even admitted the drive had started. And the Russians probably expect to keep moving, with growing momentum, until the Red Army, reaching the Baltic, has relieved the long siege of Leningrad and isolated Finland from her Nazi ally.

There is in some Washington circles a rather strong belief that the "main" Russian show, presumably timed to coincide with invasion of Western Europe, is still to come, and will come in the south, aimed through the Ukraine and toward Rumania. Such an offensive probably will be launched.

German Manpower Shrinks

But that should not minimize the importance of the push already undertaken in the north. The truth is that the Germans probably used up their last real armored striking force in the counter-attacks in the Kiev bulge, and now that those have failed, have lost the initiative to the Russians along the entire front.

That calls for some line-tightening by the Germans. It calls for it particularly because the Nazis are scraping the bottom of the manpower barrel, and cannot replace their lost divisions with equally-strong fighting units. Already men past 40 have been thrown into action on the Russian front, a sufficient indication of Germany's manpower straits. The figure of 300 divisions still is used for German army strength, but many of them are no longer first-rate divisions.

All of this points to the likelihood that the Nazi High Command will pull back, partly by plan but obviously as the result of Russian pressure, to a line pegged on Riga in the north and the Dniester river in the south. By shortening their line that much, the Nazis probably would man the Russian front with 30 less divisions, and—even more important than the manpower saving—be freed of the headache of supplying nearly 500,000 men.

WILL CARRY ON... and so must we!

"WAR never takes a holiday, even at Christmas.

"There will be thousands of vital war calls to put through. And our soldiers, sailors and airmen will be calling home from all over the country.

"I'm glad to do my share, but I need your help. Please relieve the Long Distance load by mailing your Christmas greetings . . . and doing it early. If you find you must make a Christmas call to out-of-town relatives, try to do so as many days before the holiday as possible. And especially avoid 'long haul' calls to far distant places.

"Be it ever so humble . . ."— Now, more than ever, we realize the significance of the words of the old song. Now, more than ever, home has become our haven —the place we expect to be gay, and cheerful, and cozy, whatever outside conditions may be.

With this thought in mind, we suggest gifts for the home this Christmas. Gifts with lasting appeal and usefulness—maybe a pair of new mirrors for over the console table in the hall. Or an attractive picture to add a note of cheer to the den. Cushions, too, go a long way in making a room more inviting. There are literally dozens of gifts for your home— chairs, tables, lamps, a rug, draperies—these are but a few of the many many lovely things that make a house a "home."

NAZIS HINT REPRISALS AGAINST ALLIED AIRMEN

Prisoners of War May Be Subjected To Court Trial

Paul Goebbels Calls American, British Aviators 'Huns of The Air'

PRESS CAMPAIGN

By H. W. HERCHER
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 22 — (AP) — Dark threats of reprisal against Allied war prisoners came from Germany today as Nazi propagandists worked up indignation against the Kharkov trials and Paul Joseph Goebbels called British and American aviators "Huns of the Air."

D.N.B., German news agency, said in a broadcast statement on the Soviet trials that Nazi military courts would "soon deal with those British and American prisoners who are guilty of a serious breach of international law."

Expect Further Attacks

Goebbels told Berlin police and airraid protection officials that further attacks on the German capital must be expected but that "one day our evergrowing anti-aircraft defences and future retaliation will make an end to the activities of the huns of the air."

Ugly hints of measures to be taken against captured airmen were closely connected with a German press campaign against American fliers imprisoned after the Nov. 20 raid on Bremen and accused of having "murder incorporated" written on their uniforms.

The bombed and battered Nazis are screeching that the names of some of the planes prove that gangsters control the American airforce.

A foreign office spokesman claimed the trials were agreed upon in principle at the Teheran conference, so the "British and Americans share the responsibility," Swedish press reports said.

Indignant Over Kharkov Trial

D.N.B.'s statement specifically accused Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt of associating themselves with the Kharkov proceedings and likened those proceedings to "medieval witch trials."

Three Germans and a Russian traitor, who admitted at their trial before a Kharkov military court that they had committed and witnessed numerous acts of atrocities against Russian civilians and soldiers, were hanged Sunday in Kharkov's public square.

Two Boys Die In Factory Fire

Toronto, Dec. 22 — (CP) — Two teen-aged boys were burned to death and four others cut and scorched about the head and face today in an explosion and fire at Kerr Brothers, Ltd., candy manufacturers, on Wolseley street in west central Toronto.

The two youths, who started work only yesterday, were identified as Steve Hrychuk and Michael Hudy, both of Toronto.

Twelve workers were trapped on the top floor but rescued and more than 60 other employees fled from the building.

Damage was estimated at $30,000.

More than 120 firemen from every downtown hall fought the blaze for an hour before getting it under control. Bodies of the two youths were found near a staircase. They were given artificial respiration for more than an hour and then taken to hospital where they were pronounced dead on arrival.

Three other boys dove headfirst through plate glass windows to escape being trapped. Gerald Oliver, 16, and his 15-year-old brother, Jack, were taken to hospital with head and face injuries and Dan Dannunzio was treated by firemen on the scene.

Steve Wasyleck, 19, chopped his way through a wall partition to make good his escape.

Jack Lynett, plant superintendent, was overcome by fumes while searching for the two new employees of the plant but managed to crawl to a window and was rescued by firemen. Another employee, Ralph Stevens, was thrown against a wash basin in the washroom by the explosion and escaped through an air vent window to the roof.

Cause of the explosion was not known.

'War Scare' Hits Istanbul Residents

By FRANK O'BRIEN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Istanbul, Dec. 21 — (Delayed)—(AP) — A first-class "war scare" hit its full stride in Istanbul today as many families living in the European part of Turkey moved over to the opposite side of the Strait of Bosporus.

Gold prices, which took a long jump upward when President Inonu went to Cairo for conferences with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt and which dropped after his return, reached new highs today.

The widespread scare developed despite foreign minister Numan Menemencioglu's announcement that Turkey's foreign policy remained unchanged and newspaper advice that there was no reason for panic.

The sight of columns of troops outfitted for a field campaign moving in considerable numbers thru the streets for the first time since the spring of 1941 may have helped crystallize public anxiety over the Cairo conference.

During the past fortnight, scores of new German faces have appeared in Istanbul, apparently with no visible occupation. In the words of one Allied official, they "look like the usual strongarm boys."

There were some evidences of food hoarding with consequent new increases in the already high prices of food here.

Owners of large apartments in outlying Anatolian districts of the city demanded and got from $500 to $700 rent from persons coming from the European side of the city apparently afraid of being caught on the wrong side of the Bosporus and Sea of Marmora.

Without Sleep Nearly 72 Hours Battles Gale

Ottawa, Dec. 22—(CP)—A 24-year-old Canadian naval officer who went without sleep for nearly 72 hours battling a gale and 60-mile-an-hour wind while towing an American rescue vessel in the Caribbean area has been cited by the United States navy for an "outstanding feat of seamanship."

He is Lieut. John J. McLaughlin of Winnipeg, whose skill and devotion to duty were praised in a letter of commendation from the admiral, Gulf Sea frontiers.

McLaughlin was in command of a motor launch attached to a Canadian fairmile flotilla, which was working with U. S. naval forces in the Caribbean. Third officer was Sub.-Lt. Bob Graves of London, Ont.

The launch was assigned to accompany an American diesel yacht carrying stores and the rescue craft gunner to the Cayman islands. The storm rose after they had sailed from Key West, Fla., to La Fe, where they refuelled.

Over Score Killed, 50 Wounded In Clash During Fascist Funeral

At Swiss-Italian Frontier, Dec. 22—(AP)—More than a score were killed and 50 wounded in a street clash yesterday at Milan during the funeral procession for Fascist Commissar Aldo Resega, advices reaching here today said.

Rifle shots and grenades fell upon the cortege from windows along Cardusio place where anti-fascists had posted themselves to await the end of services at San Sepolcro.

Fascists and Nazi troops returned the fire and panic broke out among the crowds on the street. The casualties included fascists and bystanders, among them several women.

An unconfirmed report reaching the border said that Fascist and Nazi authorities were planning a mass execution in an effort to halt attamks on Italian blackshirts and German soldiers.

Encirclement Of Vitebsk Hourly More Imminent

R.A.F. MOSQUITOS SWEEP GERMANY WITHOUT LOSS

Load Added to 4,000 Tons Dropped by 3,000 Allied Planes Monday and Tuesday

UNSPECIFIED TARGETS

London, Dec. 22—(CC)—Swift R. A. F. Mosquito bombers, maintaining the round-the-clock offensive against the Nazis, blasted unspecified objectives in Western Germany Tuesday night, the Air Ministry announced today, and shortly after day-break new streams of Allied planes headed across the channel in the direction of Northern France for the third consecutive day.

The latest Mosquito blow was carried out without loss, a communique said.

Their load of explosives was added to the approximately 4,000 tons of bombs dropped by more than 3,000 Allied planes on key Nazi targets in Germany and occupied France Monday and Tuesday in the greatest combined air operations carried out in 36 hours against any country since the war began.

On Tuesday hundreds of British and United States bombers made massed daylight attacks on military targets—possibly "secret weapon" installations—in the area of Pas de Calais. Monday night the R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. used a force which the London telegraph said possibly was 800 to 1,000 planes to hit Frankfurt and the twin cities of Ludwigshafen and Mannheim, following the 500-plane United States blow against Bremen.

Two thousand tons of bombs were dropped on Frankfurt and 1,200 on Bremen, it was disclosed. The London Herald said 300 tons probably were dropped on the Mannheim diversionary target and the remainder was dropped in Tuesday's sweeps.

Threatened Rail Strike Moves Into Crucial Phase

Washington, Dec. 22. (AP) — Strike orders from a new quarter today complicated government efforts to avert a threatened tie-up of the railway system in the United States, set for Dec. 30.

As conferences went forward to keep 350,000 operating employees on the job, the leaders of an even larger segment of rail workers—the 1,100,000 who perform the office, shop and track work—set Dec. 30 as the deadline for meeting their wage demands.

Negotiations with the five operating Brotherhoods (Engineers, Firemen, Conductors, Trainmen and Switchmen) were expected to move today into counter-proposals providing for paid vacations a liberalized overtime formula, and expenses away from home.

The operating groups last night rejected a plan put forward by President Roosevelt which would have given them a four-cent hourly increase in the form of overtime pay or expenses, in addition to the straight four-cent rate increase recommended by an emergency board.

The operating brotherhoods would settle for the supplementary four cents (a total of eight cents) as a straight rate increase, one official said, but to call it overtime, or anything else, he argued would impair their future bargaining position too much.

Jap Forces Cleared From Area South of Lin

Chungking, Dec. 22 —(AP)—The Chinese High Command announced tonight that Japanese forces had been cleared from the area south of the Lin river, thus restoring half of the rice growing district to China.

Enemy remnants on the north bank of the Lin also were said to have been cleared. The communique indicated the Japanese withdrawal was continuing with the Chinese "pursuing the fleeing Japanese on various routes, making considerable progress."

Eisenhower Leads Field As Selection for Allied Commander-in-Chief in West

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 22 — (AP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower under present circumstances — always subject to change — is believed leading the field for the job of Allied Commander-in-Chief for the western invasion. This would leave the developing campaign for the Mediterranean theatre generals in British hands.

The victor of North Africa and Sicily has come to the forefront despite earlier reports that Gen. Geo. C. Marshall had initially been picked for the great command.

The impression here is that both had been found acceptable by supreme Allied leaders at the Teheran conference, but that since then American considerations have raised Eisenhower to the No. 1 choice.

It now appears Prime Minister Churchill's illness may be delaying the final agreement on the selection.

In the beginning Eisenhower's prospects seemed to suffer from some fear that his appointment would create an impression — however false — that the Italian and Mediterranean war would be wholly subordinated.

Against this objection these considerations now are offered:—

1. Some British general such as Sir Harold Alexander, veteran of years of action in that theatre and closely associated with Eisenhower and his methods, could take over with a minimum disruption of plans.

2. In Italy and in the Mediterranean generally the preponderance of Allied forces—both aground and at sea — is British.

3. It has been widely said here that after the first shock of the Allied western landings the armies on the new front are going to be predominantly American.

4. The Mediterranean, in the long view, is a greater preoccupation of Britain than of America and by a variety of circumstances is likely to become more and more of a British show as time goes on.

GEN. G. MARSHALL VISITS TROOPS IN PACIFIC ZONES

Long Battle Line Tense With Expectancy After Inspection Tour

AIRDROMES BOMBED

Army Headquarters, Central Pacific, Dec. 22 (AP)—The long Pacific battle line was tense with expectancy today after a visit from Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief-of-Staff.

Marshall, participant in recent Allied military councils held at Cairo and Teheran, flew along the entire line from the southwest Pacific to the central Pacific, but only the generals and admirals, Australian and American, knew what he had said.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today that Marshall had been at advanced Allied headquarters in New Guinea Dec. 15 when United States 6th Army units invaded New Britain, at Arawe.

Marshall also conferred with the staff of Admiral William F. Halsey, south Pacific commander, and Lt.-Gen. Willard F. Harmon, chief of army forces there, whose ground, sea and air forces are driving the Japanese from their last Solomons islands holdings, on Bougainville.

Stops at Honolulu

The chief-of-staff stopped for two days at Honolulu to see Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, United States Commander-in-Chief in the Pacific, and Lt.-Gen. Robert C Richardson, Jr., United States Commander of central Pacific army forces.

Nimitz' and Richardson's army and navy units took the Gilbert Islands from the Japanese Nov. 20 and their air forces have been hammering enemy airdromes and bases in the Marshall Islands, 300 miles north of the Gilberts, ever since.

The attacks on the Marshall Islands at first attracted little Japanese aerial opposition, but the latest reported attack, Sunday and Monday, by United States 7th Army air force heavy bombers, met a heavy enemy air counter-attack and on Monday three of the big bombers were lost and others damaged.

Fires Touched Off

The bombers, however, in striking at the Taroa airdrome on the Maloelap Atoll touched off fires and explosions among hangars and storage depots with 25 tons of explosives. They were met by 20 enemy Zero fighters, downing four and probably destroying five others.

Marshall flew to the Pacific stations by way of India, Ceylon and Australia. His stops in India and Ceylon took him into the new southeast Asia command of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, established to prosecute the war against the Japanese in the Burma sector.

KILLED CROSSING STREET TO POST CHRISTMAS CARDS

Toronto, Dec. 22 —(CP)— Mrs. Lucy Simons 59, was killed today when struck by an automobile as she crossed a street to mail some Christmas cards, bringing to 88 the number of traffic deaths in Toronto since Jan. 1.

TITO'S PARTISAN ARMY OF 250,000 SEIZES OFFENSIVE

Battle Half Million Nazis and Collaborationists in Yugoslavia

ON ENTIRE FRONT

London, Dec. 22—(CP)— Marshal Josip Broz' (Tito's) Partisan Army of 250,000, battling German and collaborationist forces twice its size, has taken to the offensive on every sector of Yugoslavia's irregular battlefront, a communique from the Yugoslav army of liberation announced today.

The German forces, spearheaded by the German 373rd Division, struck back with large-scale assaults in Croatia in an effort to regain the initiative, the war bulletin disclosed, but Tito's 7th patriot division decisively thwarted the enemy thrusts.

Battle Broadens in Scope

With Yugoslavia developing into a battlefront of broadening scope, a recapitulation of Hitler's losses in his efforts to clear his Balkan flank shows that he had 40,000 casualties in October and November alone. These figures were given in a Moscow broadcast, which said the casualties included 16,000 killed and 11,000 prisoners.

German broadcasts heard in Cairo claimed the capture last Sunday of the Bosnian town of Jajce, described as Tito's headquarters. The report said Tito and his government were in flight. There was no confirmation of this enemy report.

A Transocean dispatch, also broadcast by Berlin, took cognizance of the considerable amount of war material being ferried across the Adriatic from Italy to the partisans when it reported that Hitler's puppet forces in eastern Bosnia had captured 27 tanks and two anti-tank guns from Tito's forces.

The dispatch listed Tito's losses since the opening of the present Bosnian campaign as 2,926 killed, 4,000 wounded and 2,800 captured. Croat (Nazi) units in the same period lost 106 killed, 335 wounded and seven missing, the dispatch added.

A Cairo dispatch said Ivan Ribar, 26, son of Dr. Ivan Ribar, President of the Yugoslav National Council for liberation had been killed by a bomb dropped from a German plane as he was preparing to leave Yugoslavia to confer with Allied military leaders in Alexandria last month. Ivan was second son of Dr. Ribar to die within a month, was a colonel on Marshal Tito's supreme command.

SALAMIS DOCKYARDS ATTACKED BY R.A.F.

Cairo, Dec 22 (AP)—R.A.F. heavy bombers attacked dockyards at Salamis in southern Greece on the night of Dec. 19, it was disclosed today in a Middle East air communique covering a week's operations.

Hits were observed in the target area.

Two enemy aircraft—a Heinkel 155 and a Junkers 88—were destroyed during the period. No Allied planes were lost. Operations against shipping in the Aegean Sea were carried out night and day.

CANADIANS FIGHT NAZIS IN STREETS OF ORTONA PORT

5th Army Reaches Outskirts of San Vittore on Main Highway To Rome

FRENCH IN SECTOR

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press War Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 22—(AP)—Canadian 1st Division troops of the British 8th Army slugged it out with the Germans in the streets of Ortona, small Italian port on the Adriatic, yesterday, Allied headquarters announced today.

Canadians entered the port, eastern anchor of the German line guarding Pescara, on Monday following a heavy artillery bombardment and supported by tanks.

Fierce fighting developed in the running street battle, frontline dispatches said.

West of the Canadian position New Zealand troops who have crossed the Ortona-Orsogna lateral road fought off a heavy German counter-attack launched in an effort to dislodge the New Zealanders from north of the road. The Nazis used tanks and flamethrowers.

Further southwest British troops made slight advances after repulsing two strong counter-attacks.

Anglo-American 5th Army Forces, bolstered by artillery and mortar fire, captured several new heights and reached the outskirts of San Vittore on the main western highway to Rome. San Vittore is four miles northeast of German-held Mignano and its fall would outflank that strongpoint.

French Troops in It

American and French troops along the northern mountainous sector of the 5th Army front were reported attacking two villages, Acquafondata and Cardito, after occupying a high point in their push westward toward Cassino, another important town on the road to Rome. Acquafondata is 10 miles north of Mignano. Cardito lies four miles north of Acquafondata.

The announcement that the French forces under Gen. Pierre Juin were participating in the attack in this sector was the first disclosure of the location of the French whose presence of Italian soil was announced last week.

The French, who have been struggling for the past three days for possession of a vital mountain pass, were reported to have taken the southern half. Other short gains in this area were reported.

In their assault of San Vittore, the Americans were wiping out numerous pillboxes the Germans had built around the town. The enemy was using every house and every natural obstacle to slow the Allied advance.

Nazi Positions in Yugoslavia Hit

In the air war, Allied fighter-bombers swarmed over the Yugoslav coast and attacked German positions in support of the Partisan forces of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito).

Fighters and fighter-bombers ranged over the battle area and near Rome, blasting transport and communications. Medium bombers also struck at Terracina, 58 miles southeast of Rome.

One enemy plane was destroyed for a loss of one Allied aircraft.

A naval communique said British motor torpedo boats captured two German schooners off the Yugoslav coast Dec. 19, taking their crews prisoner.

Russians Advance Five Miles Closer To Fortress City

Enemy Bridgehead Opposite Kherson Taken and Drive on City Is Expected

35 MILES FROM POLOTSK

London, Dec. 22 — (CP) — The Russian Baltic Army, surging forward unchecked, has advanced another five miles and now stands 15 miles from the Nazi fortress city of Vitebsk, Reuters news agency reported today from Moscow.

Encirclement of this enemy stronghold thus became hourly more imminent.

This thrust and a companion drive toward the important rail junction of Polotsk, 60 miles to the west, threatened the stability of the entire German line defending the Baltic states.

20 Miles from City

A Russian communique earlier had reported the forces of Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian within 20 miles of Vitebsk from the north through capture of Griball and less than 25 miles away to the east.

His troops storming down from Nevel yesterday, blasted their way through a 50-mile gap in deep German defences, capturing more than 100 villages.

Other columns, swinging out to the west, were within 35 miles of Polotsk, fall of which would seriously weaken communications between the German northern and central armies and possibly force retirement of the Nazis' left flank along the shores of the Gulf of Finland from the Leningrad area.

At the extreme southern end of the 800-mile-long battlefront, meanwhile, Russian armies liquidated the Nazi bridgehead on the south bank of the Dnieper opposite Kherson, near the river's mouth, and dispatches said a full-scale attack against the city itself was expected momentarily.

Attack in 3 Sectors

In the centre of the line, the Germans were said to be counter-attacking in three key sectors. The Moscow war bulletin said the Nazis struck in the area between Zhlobin and the Berezina river in White Russia, south of Korosten in the Kiev Bulge, and in the Kirovograd sector in the Dnieper River Bend.

All attacks were repulsed with heavy losses, Moscow reported.

Kherson's capture would render untenable the German position in Nikopol, manganese centre in the Dnieper Bend, Krivoi Rog and Nikolaev, northwest of Kherson on the Bug river, together with large German forces scattered throughout the area. Freezing of the Dnieper along the southern front was expected to facilitate the Russian advance, advices said.

Some of the heaviest tank fighting of the war was reported raging as the Germans vainly tried to regain the initiative in central sectors. The Nazis were said to be using as many as 2,000 tanks in some areas.

DISEMBARKATION LEAVE EXTENDED

New Rules Now Permit Extension Up to 30 Days' Leave

Ottawa, Dec. 22 —(CP)—Defence Headquarters today announced an increase in the disembarkation leave granted to certain officers and other ranks returning from overseas.

In the past officers and other ranks returning to Canada were normally granted up to 14 days' disembarkation leave regardless of whether they were returned from duty or repatriation.

Now, Defence Headquarters said, the following rules apply:

"Officers and other ranks of the Canadian army returning from overseas for duty, repatriated prisoners of war and repatriated sick or wounded may, subject to the exigencies of the service, be granted disembarkation leave under the following conditions:

"1. To those who have been overseas for a period of two years, or who have served in a theatre of operations regardless of length of overseas service—30 days' leave.

"2. To those who have been overseas for at least six months but less than two years and who have not served in a theatre of operations—14 days' leave and one additional day's leave for each completed month served overseas in excess of six months, up to a maximum period of 30 days' leave."

Canadian Troops Near Campobasso To Observe Yuletide

Toronto, Dec. 22 —(CP)— Maj. Clarence Wiseman, Overseas Director of the Salvation Army War Services Department, arrived home from the Italian front with news that Canadian soldiers in the vicinity of "Canada Town" (Campobasso) in Italy will have a good Christmas—but probably the strangest one of their lives.

Maj. Wiseman, who was in charge of the Canada Town version of London's popular Beaver Club, said the Christmas party probably will be held in a building that was used previously by a Fascist Youth Organization. He said the meal would be cooked by Italians, with Canadian supervisors, and the entertainment will be provided by a travelling group of Italians who are practising "O Canada" specially for the event.

Cylinders of Tear and Sneezing Gas, That Chinese Say Japs Use, Exhibited

By CLYDE A. FARNSWORTH
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Headquarters of a Chinese Army Somewhere in Northern Hunan Province, Dec. 18 —(Delayed)—(AP)—Cylinders of tear and sneezing gas which the Japanese are accused of using on this front were exhibited today to visiting Allied officers and correspondents.

As interested as any correspondent was Lt.-Col. P. P. Voronin, Assistant Military Attache of the Soviet Embassy at Chungking, who jotted down details in a notebook as Lt.-Gen. Liang Han-Ming, commanding this army, talked about the cylinders.

Among the samples was a yellow-marked, two-foot-long cylinder, resembling a fire-extinguisher, which Liang's chemical warfare expert said once contained mustard gas. There was no claim, however, that the contents of this particular cylinder ever were used against the Chinese.

The tear and sneezing gas was used recently in the Hunan front, the chemical expert said. The most violent form of gas used by the Japanese in this theatre, according to Gen. Hsueh Yeuh, governor of Hunan and commander of the 9th war area, and his subordinate, Liang, was suffocating gas, from which no fatalities were reported. The effect of this gas is to incapacitate for an hour or more.

Liang disclosed yesterday that this army had taken only 10 Japanese prisoners since fighting started Oct. 29, but estimated that his forces had inflicted 3,500 casualties on the enemy.

Asked about disparity between the casualty claim and his report on the number of prisoners, the general replied simply, "It's not easy to take Japanese prisoners."

BOYS OVERSEAS SEND GREETINGS

Christmas cards by airgraph from the boys on the fighting front in Italy are being received by families in Belleville with sons in the fighting forces, it has been learned. The Christmas greetings are penned, pasted or drawn on the conventional airgraph letter form obtainable at the post office, the communication being then processed and forwarded in the usual manner. The Yuletide greeting symbol apparently is in the form of a stamp which is affixed to the airgraph form, with several different symbols having been seen on various cards received.

BLAZE IN COAL PILE IS EXTINGUISHED

A further five-hour siege of pouring streams of water into the burning coal pile at the Schuster dock is believed by firemen today to have extinguished the blaze which started over the weekend by reason of spontaneous ignition. Sunday firemen spent two hours or more at the scene and believed they had the blaze out but yesterday the fire broke out again necessitating a return trip. Firemen chopped a hole in the ice off the dock and pumped water onto the coal pile with the city pumper.

DRIVER CHARGED WITH CARELESS DRIVING

Skidding on the snow-covered pavement a motor car driven by Stuart Hartley, 226 Dundas Street, crashed into a bread truck on East Dundas Street Tuesday noon hour and careened 60 feet to the opposite side of the road, where the same automobile was in collision with an east-bound motor car driven by Freeman Thompson of Mountain View.

City police investigated and reported Hartley was proceeding westerly and when approaching traffic applied the brakes of his car resulting in the vehicle skidding into the parked truck driven by J. L. Wager of Frankford. Hartley's car then swerved sideways colliding with Mr. Thompson's car, that was coming from the opposite direction. Police stated today charges of careless driving had been preferred against Hartley.

SLIPPERY STREETS CAUSE TWO ACCIDENTS

Snow-covered streets resulted in two minor motor accidents in the city Tuesday. Early last evening Harold Masterson of Roslin walked into the path of a motor car near the McCarthy Theatre on Front St., and was knocked down. He sustained a cut over the eye and leg injuries and was treated at the surgery of Dr. J. J. Robertson.

At the intersection of Bridge and Coleman Sts., motor cars driven by Clayton Stratton, Belleville and Glen Hoskins, Oshawa, received in fender damage and the matter was amicably settled after police ascertained the collision was purely of the accidental nature.

BOYS USE AIR RIFLE CARELESSLY

The discharging of an air rifle on St. Charles Street was investigated by city police early Tuesday evening. Investigations revealed property damage resulting at No. 46 St. Charles Street. The guilty boys were apprehended and the air rifle confiscated. Police stated today the parents of the children responsible would be called upon to make restitution for damage, that included a broken window.

TRUCK AND CAR COLLIDE AT CROSSING

Breaking over the C.N.R. crossing knoll on Cannifton Road, a truck driven by Herman Griffin, Madoc, was in collision with a motor car driven by Russell Kitchen of Simcoe, early Tuesday evening resulting in considerable property damage. Police revealed today that Kitchen was proceeding north on Cannifton Road and about to turn into a private driveway when Mr. Griffin's truck came over the railway crossing knoll, giving him little chance to avoid the collision. The front fender, headlight and steering gear of the truck were damaged as well as a punctured front tire. Considerably less damage resulted to the fender and body of the motor car, police reported.

Car Tire Used Since Year 1938 In for Re-tread Job

An outstanding example of the service an automobile tire will give when given proper care and usage and under the right sort of conditions as demonstrated this week with a tire that had been in constant use since 1938 was brought in for a re-tread job. The tire was owned by Mr. J. J. McGraw, of Marlbank and was brought in to Baragar's Repair Shop for recapping.

Restrictions on the purchase of new tires are undoubtedly causing motorists to use tires which would not have been considered a few years ago, but in the above case the repairman reported there was not a break in the casing and was in good sound condition. Some tires that have received especially good care are coming in for their third re-tread job, it was stated.

300 HASTINGS MEN ARE DIRECTED TO CUTTING OF WOOD

75 Per Cent Are Engaged in Cutting Cordwood and About Half Are Farmers

LOGGING OPERATIONS

Substantiating the weekly report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture that farmers are taking advantage of favorable weather to cut fuel wood, approximately 300 Hastings County men have been directed through the Belleville office of the National Selective Service to pulpwood and fuelwood cutting operations according to H. H. Reed, local manager.

Approximately 75 per cent. of this number are engaged in cutting cordwood, with about one half of the total being farmers who have gone into the woods for the winter months following completion of the farming season, it was stated.

Reason for the majority of the men detailed to the woods choosing the cordwood cutting was felt to be because of the attractive wages offered by operators. Wages up to $4 per cord are being offered for cutting cordwood, it was stated. This rate is made possible by the $1 per cord subsidy granted for wood got out for the domestic market. It was felt that about 75c of this amount is paid to the cutters.

Despite the shortage of labor, log cutting operations are not entirely at a standstill, it was revealed through National Selective Service officials. From the Belleville office 65 men have been granted permits to work in lumber camps for the winter months, some of them in the county and others with operators whose timber limits adjoin Hastings.

Rebate of $36,000 May Be Granted Electrical Users If Permission Given

Resolution Forwarded to Toronto by P. U. C. for Consideration by Head Office

FINAL MEETING

In his last act before retirement from the Public Utilities Commission Commissioner George A. Reid, moved "That the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario be requested to make a rebate in January and February of 1944 to the electrical users of this city as large as possible depending on the financial condition of the utility". The motion was seconded by Chairman M. P. Duff and will be forwarded to Toronto for their consideration. Commissioner Reid explained that this could well be done as the Utility had a surplus and Toronto had ordered a rebate and it was allowed. If the rebate is granted for the full two months it will amount to approximately $36,000.

Gas Account Held Over.

The accumulated gas account was presented to the commission after a letter had been received from Toronto asking that the account be settled by the end of the year but the commission requested that it be left over until the new year when the council and the commission will meet to talk over the situation. It was shown that the gas department owes the electric department $2,733.39, and the water department $2,150.21, and special obligations, Stephens Adamson $970.73, loan from the water utility $5,000, due West Gas Company $1,000, making a total of $11,864.13, with cash on hand of $1,896.51 and a net amount of $9,957.62. The operating loss in 1942 was $4,887.97 and this year to date $2,863.71.

Manager O. H. Scott stated he went over the settling basin at the gas plant and that it would require between $250 and $300 depending on the rock encountered "I think a new settling basin will do away with the trouble' said Mr. Scott. "What about the drain?" said Mr. Duff. "It will have to be cleaned" said Mr. Scott. Mr. Duff intimated that if it had to be cleaned the council should be a party to the expense. "We will take that up latter on" said Mayor Rollins. It was decided to proceed with the new settling basin at once.

May Use Store as Showroom.

In discussion of the recent meeting of the Commission with members of the Hydro Electric Power Commission in Toronto recently Commissioner Reid thought it was intimated by Hon. George Challis that in the not too distant future, that the Front Street store would be used by merchants from the city and district as a showroom where they could bring their customers to sell them electrical appliances and in this way more power would be used. "That is what the Hydro is trying to do, sell more power", said Mr. Reid.

Mr. Reid also moved that a resident of the city be refunded for a charge made for lawn service. It was shown that the resident did not have an outside tap but that he was found using an inside tap to attach his hose to water the lawn and thus the charge was made. Mayor Rollins thought this was like sentencing a man to life imprisonment because he might have only committed the offence once. "I think the man should have been brought to the office and have his offence explained and if he persisted in the practice that he should be brought into court", said Mayor Rollins. 'I wanted to prosecute some of these cases once and the Commission would not hear of it", said the manager. The refund will be made.

Express Appreciation.

Before the close of the meeting Chairman Duff and Commissioner Rollins expressed their appreciation of the services rendered by Mr. Reid for the many years he has been in public life, as Mayor an Alderman and a Hydro Commissioner. "You have faithfully carried out your duties in all your offices", said Mr. Duff "and it is with regret that you are leaving public life". Mayor Rollins said "That Mr. Reid had been a loyal and hard worker for Hydro and his counsel would be missed in the commission".

Proposes Joint Meeting

Near the end of the meeting, Commissioner Reid stated that he was leaving public life for all time and that he had nothing to regret. "I have tried to faithfully do my duty as I saw it," said Mr. Reid, but I am sorry that I cannot leave in spirit of friendship with certain members of this Hydro office and in this I refer to O. H. Scott, manager of the utilities. I think Mr. Scott stepped out of his bounds, to assist my opponent in the last municipal elections. Addressing Mr. Scott, as your name has been frequently mentioned during my election campaign, in connection with Hydro and I took strong exception to the statements that have been reported, I will gladly meet you at a joint meeting in the City Hall any date, that you will mention and will pay all expenses of the hall. I feel that it is the only way we can clear up the situation. I will expect you to name the day and hour of the meeting, at the earliest possible time."

Mr. Reid stated it was an easy matter to make a profit in the waterworks department and the electrical division of the utilities but that it took a salesman to sell gas and he thought that the gas department had been neglected in the Utilities under the management of Mr. Scott. In the first eight months that the Utilities had the gas plant under their control the profit was $7,000 and since that time it has steadily decreased and nothing very much has been done to boost sales of gas fixtures.

Commissioner Duff: "That is not just fair."

Commissioner Reid: "I am not sore at you nor at the Mayor."

Commissioner Duff: "You are leaving us holding the bag."

Manager Scott absolutely denied all the charges made by Mr. Reid and stated "they are nasty accusations for a man to make who is leaving public office."

24,000 Magazines Have Been Shipped To Armed Forces by Kiwanis Club

Christmas greetings were extended to the Kiwanis Club of Belleville at their regular Tuesday luncheon by the management of the Hotel Quinte when they were guests of the hotel. The meeting was intended to take the form of a "sing-song" but after several Christmas carols had been sung a few matters of business were taken up. Kiwanian Dick Kuntze extended the greetings of the club to the visitors and wished the members, guests and visitors a personal season's greeting. Kiwanian Bill Hopson reported on the year's activity in the collection of magazines for the Armed Forces. He reported that 24,000 magazines had been collected since the commencement of the campaign on February 1, 1942 and that 187 cartons had been shipped only recently to personnel of the Canadian Forces in London, England, and 107 cartons to the Merchant Marine in Halifax. 2,000 magazines were received from the Navy League of Canada to be incorporated with the Kiwanis Club shipment. Kiwanian Jim Barclay reported further on the magazine collection saying that much credit was due to Kiwanian Charlie Bishop for the final stage of the campaign, when it was necessary to provide transportation to the station, Mr. Bishop put one of his trucks at the disposal of the committee and arranged for the services of three young men, who were the guests of the Kiwanians at today's luncheon.

Member Leaves Club

President Bruce Lattimer informed the meeting that this would be the last time Kiwanian Wes Moore would be attending the Belleville Club's luncheons. Wes Moore has sold his business in the city and is moving to Prescott, where he has bought another business.

A collection was taken among the members for the waitresses, who have served the luncheons during the year, and appreciation for this gesture was made to Kiwanian Fred Lewis, who extended their thanks to the meeting. A report was made by Kiwanian Norman Edwards on the theatre party the club arranged for the old folks at the House of Refuge and Home for the Aged at the McCarthy Theatre last week.

The meeting was enhanced by the attendance of two accomplished young ladies, Misses Sheila Burrows and Cecelia Maloney, who entertained the members with two delightful Christmas songs and a recitation. Miss Burrows sang "The Virgin's Slumber Song" by Max Reger and "When the Home-Bells Ring Again," a melody by Edward Lockton. Miss Maloney recited a Christmas story, "The Youngest Thief," which was most excellently presented, displaying the raconteur's ability to memorize and deliver most difficult themes. Appreciation was extended to Mr. Alec Gordon who has given his services as club pianist since the illness of Kiwanian Leo Riggs.

The guests were thanked by Kiwanian Gordon Barclay and the fullest appreciation was extended to them from the club by Mr. Barclay and by President Lattimer. A good deal of pleasant banter and good-natured joviality predominated the luncheon.

Franco Dissolves Falange Militia, Grants Amnesty

Washington, Dec. 22 — (AP) — Further clarification of the position of Spain's General Francisco Franco is expected here as a result of United States representations over Falangist vandalism in the United States Consulate in Valencia.

The incident, reported by Ambassador Carlton Hayes from Madrid, was the latest of a series of actions against Allied representatives in various parts of Spain.

The news came almost simultaneously with announcement in Madrid that Franco had dissolved the Falange Militia and granted an amnesty to all political prisoners except those held for murder. About 8,000 will be freed by Christmas, one dispatch estimated.

Hayes said two persons, later identified as Falangists, entered the United States Consulate at Valencia Saturday, tore pictures off the walls and made speeches to visitors at the Consulate. They were arrested by Spanish police. It was the first time, as far as is known here, that the Spanish government had moved against anti-foreign demonstrations by members of the Falange, only official party.

Indirect Warning

The unusual publication of Ambassador Hayes' report was regarded as an indirect warning to Spain that the United States government takes a serious view of the disturbances.

Last week, the British government in a strongly worded statement refused to accept the Spanish answer to its protest over an insult to the British Consul at Saragossa. Spain had said the government was not responsible for the Falangists actions, but the British officials said that since they were uniformed members of the official party, Madrid should account for them.

One source said Franco is apparently trying to appease the generals and anti-Falangist elements in Spain in an effort to circumvent possible overthrow of his regime.

Persistent rumors of an impending coup have been circulating.

Commander Decorated

Madrid — (AP) — Gen. Esteban Infantes, commander of the Spanish Blue Legion which has been fighting beside the Germans in Russia, has been awarded the Military Medal, one of the highest decorations of the Spanish Army, it was announced today.

The General returned to Spain last week along with a large part of the Legion.

The award was disclosed in a long communique covering five sessions of the cabinet over which Gen. Francisco presided.

The announcement said the cabinet had approved an unspecified number of "pardons for the Christmas fiestas" and that 3,200 political prisoners had been given their conditional liberty.

Franco had decreed earlier that all Republicans imprisoned under the law of military rebellion might be freed if they show "exemplary conduct and absence of malice."

A recommendation also was sent to the Cortes (Legislature) providing for re-establishment of the right of Spaniards to appeal decisions of the government.

Another decree announced today dealt with reorganization of the powerful Falange Militia which, it was indicated by an announcement two days ago, either will be dissolved or incorporated in the regular army.

Consider Matter Closed

London — (AP) — A foreign office spokesman said today there have been "further exchanges and assurances between Madrid and London over the Zaragoza (Saragossa) incident and the matter is now considered closed."

Madrid — The Spanish Foreign Ministry expressed deepest regret today to Ambassador Carlton J. H. Hayes of the United States over an attack by two Falangists on the American Consulate in Valencia Saturday.

Punishment of the two party members was promised, Secretary-General Jose Luis Arrese also apologized in the name of the Falange.

Tanks' Showing Is Highlight Of Canadian Drive

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Italy, Dec. 22 — (CP Cable) — The fine showing of tanks under Canadian command was one of the highlights of the Canadian 1st Division's two-week drive from the shallow Moro river to the Adriatic town of Ortona.

(Yesterday, William Stewart, Canadian Press war correspondent, reported that under cover of a terrific artillery barrage Canadian troops and tanks had entered Ortona, eastern anchor of the German defence line in Italy.)

According to the latest compilations 21 enemy tanks were destroyed during this period despite the fact that the weather and the condition of the ground were not suitable for armored fighting. Biggest obstacle was the muck that cemented itself to the tracks of the Canadians' Sherman tanks.

There were no large clashes between opposing tank forces and most of the Canadian victories were marked up in day to day patrols and during special tasks. And infantrymen claimed at least one of the enemy giants, a Mark IV destroyed by mortar fire.

Wherever the infantry went during the last two weeks they received support from their armor. Tanks crossed the Moro River as soon as engineers could build them roads and they led the way into San Leonardo when it was captured by Western Canadian infantrymen who first cut the lateral road at the western end of the Canadian front, opening the way for the push on Ortona.

Day and Night Bombing of Germany

Germans will never forget the events of the day and night of Monday, when over two thousand tons of bombs rained on Frankfurt, Bremen was struck by day and planes bombed the Mediterranean and Balkan theatres of war and targets in northern France.

So heavy were the blows that it is said over ninety Allied planes in the twenty-four hours of operations.

No sooner was the night ended than the raids started by morning on Tuesday.

Round-the-clock bombing has been a tragic revelation to Germany which listened to Hitler's siren voice some years ago guaranteeing through Goering immunity from Allied air blows.

Mr. Churchill Recovering

The good news from the Middle East that Prime Minister Churchill is continuing to improve cheers every heart in the lands of freedom and in Nazi-overrun lands where there is a spirit that defies Hitler of the aggression and oppression. Every free man, every free woman and every free child in the world must rejoice that the prayers of the democratic peoples for the recovery of the great British leader are being answered.

Mr. Churchill has been so powerful an agent for the inspiration of the nations at war against the Axis aggressor through the darkest period of the war and through the stirring events of these days that the world gives him a special place among the great leaders of humanity, one called to serve humanity and save the world. His devotion to the duties of his office has been marked by self-sacrafice of the highest and noblest order.

Mr. Churchill has been more than a great political leader and statesman, he has possessed the spirit of the prophet in word and in deed. He has been the type of his race with a courage and vision that have marked him as far above the average man in high calling.

No one can ignore the fact that when the blow of war struck the world, Britain and democracy had in Mr. Churchill the man destined to bear upon his shoulders a vast share of the burden of democracy. In that robust form and in that healthy mind and imagination were and are the strength and wisdom which have been so influential in bringing the course of the war to the stage in which it now moves to the final blows against the enemy.

There is no one in the free world that will not rejoice to do honor to this great man and rejoice with him and his family in his restoration to health.

Berlin Ghost City

Berlin, smouldering capital of Hitler's tyrannous empire, is now a ghost city in such a plight that it may be completely evacuated.

Well might it be called such for from it came that aggression which brought the Hitler curse upon the world.

Retribution has justly struck that capital city to which the Germans have looked for leadership.

For the first time, the Berlin which escaped the ravages of war in the conflict of 1914-1918 and thought to escape it again while it directed destruction upon humanity outside Germany, has been struck the blow it can feel. Brutal and cruel as the Hitlerites are, the Germans know when they are hard hit. These "supermen" have lost a great deal of that "super" nature since they find events turning against them. When they see Berlin struck down and realize that they cannot do anything to prevent it and that what has happened to Hamburg and Berlin is going to happen to the cities of Germany which Hitler has made the industrial strength of his war machine, the Germans will finally no doubt find it more than they can take.

Mr. Churchill and Newspapers

There was a brief note in a news dispatch on the condition of the British Prime Minister who is recovering in the Middle East from an attack of pneumonia, telling that he insists on getting the newspapers as usual, these being flown to him from London every day. Readers of newspapers will feel a kinship with Mr. Churchill especially at a time when he is recovering and when his alert mind craves the tonic effect and inspiration which a newspaper brings.

As former newspaperman, war correspondent and author, master of English in which he so often approaches the rugged strength, great beauty and majestic imagery and vision of the English Bible in the sweep of his use of his mother tongue, Mr. Churchill knows that the press reflects the pulse of events and thoughts in the great world at home and afar. To such a man it can well be an inspiration, an object of close study, a relaxation and a silent counsellor. To a man of Mr. Churchill's breadth of vision and mind, versatility which expresses itself in his inclination toward many lines of effort and callings, knowledge of history and of current events in the world in which he plays no small part as one of the great world leaders, and practical knowledge of warfare as soldier, as former Lord of the Admiralty and his supreme work in statesmanship, by which he will be best known no doubt to future ages, the newspaper has an important appeal.

The newspaper intrigues one greatly. As a record of opinion and fact, it can be referred to again and again. Then too the very form of type presents a picture which every reader knows leaps to his eye, as a picture in itself as well as being a symbol of a thought.

There is a familiarity, homeyness and companionship about a newspaper. It too gives a sense of possession and confidence.

Especially in this day when the world is forging the weapons of war to beat down the enemy, newspapers represent the clang and clamor of the strife, the shouts of battle and the cheers of triumph and the hopes of victory, they tell much in the great and big stories and inspire much by the shorter stories for all throb with the emotions of a people at war to preserve liberty.

It is not to be wondered at that a man of the giant mental and moral stature of the British Prime Minister wants his newspapers every day, especially those great English dailies which record the pulsation of the thought and spirit of the democratic world.

Like many millions the world over Mr. Churchill has his love for his newspaper for its facts, its opinions, and as a balance and a companion. Mr. Churchill has adorned the newspaper world.

Not Exactly Dead

One poignant paragraph stands out above everything else in the statement Jan Christiaan Smuts gave out at his press conference in Cairo the other day, says The New York Sun. He spoke of long, hard fighting ahead, of his hope that the war may be over by Christmas 1944, of the making of peace after the war. He added:

"The old order is passing. The old order to which I belonged is dead. It lies buried in the Western Desert. We have to build a new world. It may take a long time. We are passing through one of the great revolutions of history. The human family, after a long, arduous march, takes a new turn. Conditions must be built on the lives and souls lost which will be better, firmer and more lasting than the old order left behind us."

The old order may indeed have passed away, never to return, but while its influence animates the ablest of its sons it scarcely can be considered dead. The really forward-looking men who must give direction to a new order are not all fledglings of the instant era of change. Some of the best and wisest of them are to be found among elder statesmen whose imaginations have not hardened along with their arteries. Men like the Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa have much to teach that the coming order will find it profitable to learn.

One Man's Guess

(Minneapolis Star Journal)

Our own guess, based on the assumption that a war in which our goal is unconditional surrender will have to be fought to a military finish, is that the war in Europe will be won around Oct. 31, 1944, and the war against Japan around March 1, 1946.

THAT AFTER-50 WORRY

Time was you looked with hope to age,
  And every friend with every year
  Wished birthdays oft to reappear
And far away death's final stage.

Well, as 'twas prayed so is it now!
  Through fifty years and more you've sped,
  But since with them some strength has fled,
Pale worry sits upon your brow.

At thirty, health was yours to know.
  At five and forty still you danced,
  For pain your flesh had seldom lanced!
But after fifty 'tis not so.

Sit down content and unafraid.
  Time was for Age you made your prayer.
  Now every twinge of pain you bear
Is part of that for which you prayed.

Speculation Over Allied Unit

Ottawa, Dec. 22 — (CP) — Announcement from Algiers that a specially-trained, mixed Canadian-American unit is in action in Italy with the 5th Army aroused speculation here as to whether these troops might be a force which was set up some months ago and took training at Helena, Mont.

There was no immediate information on this point from Defence Headquarters.

Defence Minister Ralston, who now is overseas on an inspection tour, made the initial announcement of formation of a joint Canadian-American super - commando force. Subsequently tight secrecy was imposed on its training program.

However, from information in vious these troops would be trained the original statement it was ob- to the peak of assault efficiency, including skill in mountain opera- the present Italian operations. tions which would be valuable in

The Helena force also was understood to be taking paratroop training.

Monday The Toronto Star in a newspage story said relatives had been informed that six Toronto paratroopers were listed as casualties in Italy.

Besides the mixed Canadian-American force which trained in Montana, the Canadian Army has its own parachute troops. Training headquarters for the Canadian army paratroops is at Camp Shilo, Man., where extensive training facilities have been provided.

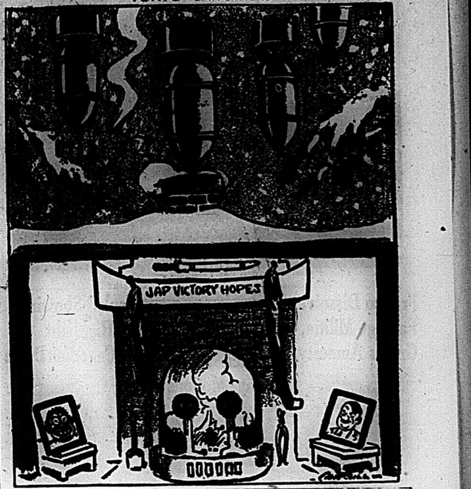
"TOKYO CHRISTMAS"



Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

By J. L. G.

Canadians of 100 years ago worked harder and had a more difficult time altogether than do present-day citizens. Just read on and see!

Santa had to hunt around considerably in the log cabins of yesteryear for stockings he wished to fill. He probably came across enormous wool socks hidden away in cupboards and behind loose bricks in the fireplaces . . . and these great socks heavy with the weight of coins! Breadwinners of that time had no other places of safe-keeping for their hard-earned sheckels. There were no Canadian banks until 1817, when the Bank of Montreal was opened. Montreal was already an important business centre, and it is natural that the first bank should be started there. The Bank of New Brunswick was established in 1820 the Bank of Upper Canada in 1923 at York late Toronto. By 1841 there were eleven banks in Upper and Lower Canadas.

Shoes were so scarce around the turn of the century that some homesteaders went barefoot in the house all winter. This was not as much of a hardship as it might seem, for the homesteads were kept cosily warm. Flames roared in the tremendous fireplaces all day long, emanating a heat most pleasant to the unshod. If the weather turned subzero the folk drew on home-made wool socks and stockings, pitying as they did so the neighbours whose sheep had been devoured by wolves and whose supply of warm hosiery and clothing was in consequence at a minimum . . . Of course leather shoes were slipped on in the wintertime when there was work to be done outside, such as milking or stalking game. But in summer nobody wore shoes indoors or out, always excepting the exceptional trip where the going was so bad that the feet needed protection.

The fact the Algiers announcement referred to a specially-trained, mixed Canadian - American force was considered here as an indication the Helena troops were more likely to be the ones mentioned.

Still Using Card First Sent in 1930

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 21—(AP)—In 1930 Maurice Luther, St. Louis, sent an expensive Christmas card to H. E. Pope, Tulsa. The next year Pope scratched out Luther's name, signed his own and mailed it back. Luther returned it to Pope the third year. By 1938 the card was a bit battered and so jammed with signatures that they began writing on the back. They figure someone will have to buy a new one by 1953.

The word "charity" occurs nowhere in the King James translation of the Old Testament.

The American Revolution was terminated by the Treaty of 1873, signed at Paris by representatives of Great Britain and of the United States. Article 8 of that treaty reads as follows: "The Navigation of the River Mississippi, from its source to the Ocean, shall for ever remain free and open to the Subjects of Great Britain, and the Citizens of the United States."

Since the 13 original states at that time were a loose federation governed by the newly adopted Articles of Confederation, the representatives of the United States of America included the names of all the states in the treaty of 1783 with Britain. The names of the states were not listed alphabetically or in order of size or importance, but from north to south—New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. When the names of the 13 original states were listed in the Constitution six years later to designate the number of representatives in Congress each was entitled to, they were listed in that same north-to-south order.

This order of listing the original 13 states seems to have been customary in those days. That is how Pennsylvania came to be nicknamed the "Keystone State." Under that method of listing the states there were six ahead of Pennsylvania and six behind her. She was in the geographical centre of the United States as then constituted.

Assault Charge Is Dismissed By Magistrate

"Apparently you don't think much of yourself or your family," suggested Magistrate J. L. Lloyd to Joseph Travers, of this city, as His Worship dismissed a charge of assault causing actual bodily harm preferred by Travers against James Cornell, 58 South George St. in city police court here today.

The charge arose out of altercations in Cornell's home last Friday night when Travers and Cornell became engaged in a brawl during which the former sustained a lacerated neck. Today Cornell appeared displaying a discolored optic and Travers' neck was swathed in bandages, both the result of the differences.

Travers told the court today it all started when he saw his wife come out of a local hotel with Cornell. Upon cross examination by R. D. Arnott, counsel for Cornell, however, Travers admitted his wife and family had been living with Cornell since away last Spring and he had been staying there of a recent date.

"What happened during this fight?" asked Assistant Crown At-taking my wife into hotels when he got back home. He struck me with his fist and later I felt the handle of a knife against my throat," stated Travers. Mr. Arnott objected at this point and later Travers admitted he saw no knife.

Sergt. Doug Ellis stated Travers came to the police station last Friday night complaining Cornell had attacked him with a knife. "It looked more like a wound from a jagged piece of glass," testified the officer.

In defence Mr. Cornell told the court he had previously ordered the entire Travers family from his home, but they refused to leave, especially Travers. Cornell denied using any knife during the struggle in his home. "Travers did break a window in a door, but I didn't even know he was cut until the police arrived," stated Cornell as he claimed Travers was the instigator of the whole trouble. "Yes, and I want them out of my house," concluded Cornell.

His Worship did not hesitate in dismissing the charge.

Three inebriates enriched the city's coffers after paying the usual "ten and costs" upon entering pleas of guilty to drunk charges.

AIRMEN IN HOSPITAL— BUT THEY GOT A SUB

Here are three of the survivors of one of the grimmest air-sea battles yet recorded in the North Atlantic. They were members of a big R.C.A.F. Sunderland flying boat crew which fought matters out with two U-boats. They sank one, then were shot down by the other's anti-aircraft fire, and later picked up by a British frigate. Left to right, they are Sgt. J. M. Rutherford and Flight Sgt. Douglas Mesey, both R.A.F. men, and Flying Officer Art Bellis, D.F.C., of 400 21st Ave., Prince Albert, Sask. During the action Flight Lieut. Paul T. Sargent of Toronto captain of the aircraft, and Flying Officer Chester B. Steeves of Elgin, N.B., lost their lives. Mortally wounded, Steves kept plotting the attack and gave the skipper his position and course. Sargent, after bringing the crippled flying boat down beside the frigate, sank with his aircraft, Warrant Officer W. F. Beals, D.F.C., of Vernon, B.C., the wireless operator, was another survivor.

1943 Chanukah Message

By Rabbi G. Felder

On Tuesday evening Dec. 21 Jews all over will light the first candle of the chanukah lights. No festival in the Jewish calendar is as great in significance as the feast of lights, but at no time has this festival in commemoration of the Maccabean achievements loomed so large as in the chaotic present.

The holiday of chanukah, recalls the first known struggle for religious liberty. When Antiochus ruler of Syria marched out in the year 169 B.C. for a world conquest, he tried to force on all the people of the provinces, that came under his rule, to follow the pattern of his new order. After two years fighting he succeeded and conquered Judah, and tried to paganize that little island of ethical monetheism in a sea of poletheism. At that time the aged Mathias with his five sons, the heroic Maccabees, led the revolt against the totalitarian philosophy and scourge of paganism.

For four years the Jewish warriors and patriots, fought against a well equipped and disciplined army of the conqueror. After a bitter struggle in 165 B.C. the army of Antiochus was defeated and the Holy Temple in Jerusalem was reconsecrated to the worship of the God universal.

Certainly today, as one worse than Antiochus seeks to impose his pagan will upon the world, the glory of the Maccabean is an inspiration and a banner to our generation. After two thousand years our nation is again demonstrating its pristine vigor, its ancestral valor. On the sea, on the land and in the air, our sons have chosen the course of the historic martyrs, and manifest once more, that spirt which in old time redeemed us from the machinations of the oppressor, and which today again, stand us in good stead. Whether we fight on the borders of Palestine, or with the United Nations in Italy, Russia or Pacific, it is with the same spirit of independence that spurred the Maccabeans, and with the same zeal for great truth as motivated our ancestors.

When we kindle on this "Chanukah", the holy festival lights, may we remember the words of the prophet "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit", (Zahariah 4:6), and hope that victory will soon be ours, and a new Chanukah, a new re-dedication of the world there will be, for which all good men and true, long and strive—our hope, our challenge, our reassurance in "Chanukah 1943".

Turning Tables On Gestapo Police

Barcelona, Dec. 21—(AP)—French guerillas and underground operatives are turning the tables on Heinrich Himmler's secret police (French branch) and collaborationists by using stolen Nazi search warrants, according to Paris newspapers reaching here today.

The newspapers carried front-page notices offering large rewards for information leading to the arrest and detention of French "terrorists" who have seized quantities of the warrants signed by Himmler's secret police. The guerillas were said to be using them in their war against collaborationists.

Guerilla columns were also reported to have laid siege near Lyon to a detachment of French legion militia, supposedly the main civilian support of the Vichy government but said to be, in fact, out-and-out collaborationists.

Probe Measures For Welfare Of Moved Japanese

Ottawa, Dec. 21—(CP)—A royal commission comprising three men and a woman has been set up by the government to investigate measures taken for the "maintenace and welfare" of Japanese living in interior British Columbia settlements, Labor Minister Mitchell announced today.

The probe was instituted, he said, after complaints from some Japanese—through the protecting power—that "provisions already made for their welfare are not as generous as they have a right to expect under established international practices."

Chairman of the commission, established under the inquiries act, is Dr. P. W. Jackson, Deputy Minister of Health and Public Welfare for Manitoba.

While some Japanese had entered complaints against their treatment, Mr. Mitchell said, the Department of Labor has received complaints in British Columbia "that the provisions made are, if anything, too generous.

"It was decided that a careful inquiry was indicated as necessary to establish the facts of the case," the Minister said.

The Minister said methods of administration are not an issue—that the inquiry relates solely to the policies adopted for the welfare of the Japanese.

After Japan entered the war it was decided it would be dangerous to leave Japanese in the British Columbia coastal area. The Labor Department was given the task of removing them eastward.

FIRE IN COPENHAGEN HARBOR

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—A Swedish broadcast recorded today by U.S. government Monitors said "a fierce fire" was spreading "with terrfic rapidity" in Copenhagen's harbor after a dockside explosion yesterday.

Turkey Dinners For War Prisoners Armed Services

Ottawa, Dec. 21—In a "reciprocal arrangement" between the Canadian and German governments, interned troops in each country this year will be served turkey for Christmas.

Ottawa pays a part of the cost of this Christmas dinner "special" —very special this year—for Canadian troops interned in Germany, and Berlin "reciprocates" on behalf of Nazis in Canadian prison camps.

Same as Troops.

Even without this "reciprocal arrangement," German combatants interned in Canada would have eaten turkey at Christmas, for the Geneva Convention governing the treatment of war prisoners specifies that they must be fed the same food as the country in which they are imprisoned feeds its own troops.

And the Canadian Army, Air Force and Navy this year will have turkey—rationed, but still turkey—on both the Christmas and New Year dinner tables.

Each man will draw a turkey ration "equivalent to 12 ounces of other meat" for the two holiday meals.

The usual "fixings" will go with the main course.

"There will be plenty to eat; of that you may be sure," said a spokesman for the armed forces.

Nothing "Elaborate".

"Fixings," too, will go with the Christmas dinners of the prisoners of war, but authorities said the repast while definitely falling under the heading of "adequately delicious," would not be "elaborate."

Civilians, majority of whom will satisfy themselves this Christmas with chicken, should remember that while German prisoners of war in Canada are being served turkey, so too will Canadian captives in Germany.

The "reciprocal arrangement" is strictly in tune with the spirit of Christmas and marks the one time of year the warring governments are on speaking terms and for the sole benefit of their captured troops.

Gen. MacArthur Has No Comment

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 21—(AP)—No comment was available from Gen. Douglas MacArthur or his staff today on the latest United States press stories suggesting that MacArthur would accept the Republican presidential nomination.

The Southwest Pacific commander and his senior officers were described as too occupied with the current New Britain campaign to have time or opportunity for comment on political issues.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) declared in Washington yesterday he would continue to assume that MacArthur would accept the Republican nomination for president "unless he says he would not."

The Indianapolis Star said it had been learned in Washington that MacArthur was making "tentative plans" to return to the United States in March for conferences.

Petroleum Jelly Used to Combat Immersion Foot

Ottawa, Dec. 21 — (CP) — A stocking impregnated with petroleum jelly has proved effective in combatting immersion foot, swelling and gangrene caused by prolonged exposure to salt water and often suffered by the victims of torpedoings far from shore, the Royal Canadian Navy medical research unit reported today.

The condition of immersion foot was produced experimentally in Albino rats by immersing the hind feet in cold water. Woollen stockings impregnated with white petroleum were successful in preventing the immersion syndrone in 83 per cent of the animals. A spiral stocking was developed for similar use in humans, and the first 5,000 pairs for use on merchant navy ships have been donated by the Navy League of Canada.

Packages containing the stockings bear printed instructions that they be put on immediately after abandoning ship, and the boots then replaced.

The effect of diet on the incidence of immersion foot also is being investigated.

Other research activities reported on by Surgeon Capt. C. H. Best and Surgeon Cmdr. D. Y. Solandt, both of Toronto, were:—

1. Work is continuing on the preparation of fresh water from salt, with most of the studies concentrated on the design of a hand-operated pump for freezing salt water and obtaining relatively fresh water for use.

2. A new life-saving jacket has been designed which, in addition to providing filtration and warmth, offers considerable protection against under-water blast caused by nearby explosions. These new jackets now are being manufactured and it is hoped some 30,000 men will be equipped with them by summer.

3. In collaboration with the R.C.A.F. a lamp to be built into life-saving jackets has been designed which can be seen for a much greater distance than any other lamp of similar power, thus facilitating rescue at night.

4. A variety of gloss filters are being examined to determine the filter best suited to permit visualization of tracer bullets when fired into the sun.

5. An apparatus has been developed to test night vision of Navy men.

Air Cadet Corps Given Instruction On R.C.A.F. Lines

Assurance of instruction along approved and designed R.C.A.F. channels is being afforded members of the Belleville Air Cadet Corps through training being supervised by special officers from No. 1 Training Command of the Royal Canadian Air Force, it is revealed by local air cadet officers. Each Thursday evening at least one officer of the Air Cadet Corps of the R.C.A.F. comes to Belleville to supervise instruction given members of the local Air Cadet Corps.

In addition to supervision of instruction given to Air Cadets, officers of the Air Cadet Corps give I.Q. tests, both to Air Cadet officers and corps members. The above policy has been in vogue since the local squadron began its fall term of training during September.

While there is no compulsion for Air Cadet Corps members to later enlist in the R.C.A.F., already since the inception of the Belleville squadron five members have enlisted in the Air Force, it is announced by Commanding Officer Dawson Boyd. Five others are on the "deferment" list and will enter the R.C.A.F. following the completion of their Air Cadet training.

Since the inception of the principle of granting the King's commission to Air Cadet officers, five of the eight officers connected with the local Air Cadet squadron have been commissioned, it is learned. Such officers are placed on the reserve list and are granted pay on the same basis as that of the Reserve Army.

With recent enrolments the strength of the Belleville Air Cadets is approximately 75 members despite the fact that quite a number was lost to the corps through Albert College students not coming back to school for the current semester. There is still room, however, for a few more members on the list and interviews will be welcomed by the commanding officer.

WADES THROUGH HEAVILY CHARGED WIRES

Farmersville, Calif., Dec. 21 (AP)—Amene Romos' automobile skidded, knocked down a pole and all the city lights went out. In darkness Romos scrambled through a tangle of wires and went for help. Returning, he learned the wires he'd waded through so calmly carried 11,000 volts.

Flandin and Four Others Arrested On Treason Charge

Algiers, Dec. 22. — (AP) — Five Frenchmen formerly high in their nation's political life, including former Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin, paced cells in Algiers' military prison today, charged by the French National Committee with treason.

Justice Commissioner Francois de Menthon, who acted at the direction of the committee following an investigation of the five cases, said the arrests of the five—Flandin; Marcel Peyrouton, former Vichy Interior Minister; Pierre Tixier-Vignancourt, former Vichy secretary-general of Information; former Governor General Pierre Boisson of French West Africa and former French Deputy Andre Albert—began two days ago and were completed this morning.

The commissioner declined to divulge details of the charges against them except that they were accused of crimes against the French nation.

Flandin had been under surveillance pending investigation by a commission probing suspected collaboration with Vichy.

The charges against Peyrouton concern his action while Interior Minister when he allegedly suppressed underground pro-ally and pro-de Gaulle organizations.

The charges against Boisson mainly concern his refusal in September 1940, to turn Dakar over to a British-deGaullist expeditionary force, which precipitated a short, sharp battle between shore batteries and a naval squadron. Subsequently, it was alleged, Boisson directed the suppression of pro-ally and pro-de Gaulle groups in West Africa.

Warrants were issued by the justice commissariat on recommendations from the purge commission which investigated the Dossiers against Peyrouton, Boisson and Flandin earlier this month.

Flandin, a pre-war premier of France and formerly Foreign Minister of the Vichy Government, was in North Africa at the time of the Allied landings.

Use War Stamps Instead of Stamps

Shreveport, La., Dec. 21 —(AP)— Something was wrong, officials decided, when Christmas cards came through the Shreveport post office bearing 25-cent United States war stamps instead of the one-cent postage stamps.

They investigated, learned that both types of stamps have the same hue of green, which contrasted nicely at the Christmas season with the color of a red-faced temporary clerk at a post office sub-station who had sold $400 of the stamps as one-cent stamps.

Hurried patrons had stuck the stamps on Christmas cards without noticing the difference.

440,000 Cigarets Gift of President Lescot of Haiti

Ottawa, Dec. 21 —(CP)— Canadian servicemen and women overseas will receive 440,000 cigarettes this Christmas, through a gift of President Elie Lescot of Haiti.

Following a visit to Canada this fall President Lescott sent $1,000 in American currency to Prime Minister Mackenzie King suggesting it be used for Christmas gifts for Canadian troops.

Defence Headquarters said today the money—$1,100 Canadian—was used to buy 440,000 cigarettes for distribution among Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen overseas.

STRANGE HAND GETS THE MONEY

Los Angeles, Dec. 21 (AP)—Theatre Manager Larry Sharp stood upstage explaining the Keeno game. Fifteen hundred patrons thought the hand, reaching through the backdrop and lifting something from a stage chair, was part of the show. Sharp turned to the chair for the $200 award money. There was no money, no hand and no one backstage.

Torquay, England — (CP) — Miss Caroline Day received congratulations from the King and Queen when she reached her 100th birthday recently.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Married Life at Concert Pitch Has a Way of Folding Up

"We've been married two years and life seems to have become as dull as it was in mother and father's home and I'm bored to tears."

This extract from a young wife's letter is fairly typical of young people who feel they're being short-changed if they don't live in a whirl. Let me remind them that life in general—at least a good deal of it—is apt to be dull.

A brilliant psychiatrist in charge of one of the largest institutions for the mentally ailing, once said to me: "The only people thrilled every moment with living are those who imagine themselves to be Napoleon, Theodore Roosevelt, Queen Victoria, Sarah Bernhardt or some other world figure."

Life at concert pitch is not for normal folk. There must be letdown periods. A constant state of extreme exultation and delight would soon land one in the psychiatric ward, where he would have plenty of time to impersonate Napoleon or anyone else. Happily married people must become reconciled to settling down once in a while to matter-of-fact living.

If there are children, endless interest is furnished in planning for them—even if the little dears never follow the parental plan. Such questions must be taken up, as post-school jobs or professions, hours at which the youngsters should return from parties, even though parents and children may not agree on this point.

It's to be hoped these pros and cons are discussed in a restrained and civilized manner, for, believe it or not, a number of letters have come to this column in which children criticized severely the bickering of their parents, and want to get away from home to escape the arguments.

Sensible married couples, who have cultivated the art of enjoying each other's company in a quiet way, take refuge in hobbies, or they may enjoy practicing economy for some deeply cherished plan. A little farm in the country, a cottage at the seashore, a new car when the gasoline famine ends. Such economies contrived in an all-in-the-day's-work spirit, can furnish endless pleasure and enjoyment in family life.

And last of all, there is that great mistake that contributes to the dullness of every-day life. Once married, people give up their reserves. They have lost the art of keeping a little mystery, that charming aura which was part of the thrill of courtship.

Parents Think They Failed, But Who Can Decide Such a Problem?

A letter to this column in the morning's mail shows decisively that one rule can't govern all cases. Should young draftees marry their younger sweethearts, or wait 'til the war is over?

In this case the girl was 17, and the young soldier 22. Their families were friends, and they'd been school mates, though he was in high school when she was still in the grades. The parents insisted "Wait 'til after the war is over", and the girl and boy reluctantly agreed.

He came to his fiancee's house on a furlough before being sent to the Pacific. He had been in danger zones before, and came out happy-go-lucky, but this time his mood was fatalistic. A conviction that he was not coming back had taken possession of him. The boy's moods varied from terrific depression to unaccountable exultation which convinced the girl's parents, as much as anything else, that now was not the time for their daughter's marriage.

"Wait; The war will be over soon and we'll give you a lovely wedding when J. comes back". The young people looked at each other and smiled bitterly, and said nothing. In a few days orders came and the boy sailed for some undisclosed destination in the Pacific. The girl, utterly unlike her old joyous self, seemed to be waiting.

Then what she was waiting for and had actually expected came to pass. The brief communication from the War Department that the boy had been killed in action. This happened at the end of last summer.

A couple of weeks ago the girl told her mother she is going to have a baby and she'd better leave home and not be around the younger children. She didn't care where she went or what happened. It would be better if she and the baby both died.

The mother and father were grief-stricken, not so much because their daughter was to be an unwed mother, but because they had prevented the girl and boy from marrying. They told her they'd stand by her and that she is to bring her baby home, and they would adopt it as their own, but the girl didn't seem to care what provision was made for her. She told her mother her heart had gone down in the Pacific with her lover.

The mother and father have argued day and night. They feel they are to blame. They didn't do the right thing. But at the time, in using their influence to defer their daughter's marriage, they felt they were acting only in the young couple's interest. Who are we to pass judgment on today's sorrow-stricken world?

Advice for Bride Who Wants More Festive Second Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm going to be married for the second time and since I'm still in my twenties and since I had none of the details of a "real wedding" when I was married the first time, my mother and father would like to have me have as many of the details as are proper for me to have at this wedding.

In a second marriage is it proper to have a regular wedding party, music, the wedding procession entering the church and the recessional? I know it is not correct for me to wear white, but would a dressy afternoon dress in a pastel shade, and a hat with veil, be correct. My Dad wants to give me in marriage. This does not seem to me to be proper, but I should like to have your advice?

P. R.

You and your father and mother can plan a lovely and uncriticizable wedding for you, if all the details are kept as simple and informal as they should be for this occasion. Your invitations should be given orally or by informal notes. And, if you wish, your parents may sent out announcements. You may have a maid or matron of honor and your bridegroom a best man.

It is entirely proper for your father to give you in marriage. (In the procession, your attendant would walk first, then you follow on your father's right arm. In the recessional, first you and your bridegroom, then your attendant, either walking alone or with the best man.)

You may have some simple floral decorations in the church and you may indeed have music. You may wear either a pastel or deep-toned formal afternoon dress (floor-length, if you wish), and a small harmonizing hat.

On Use of Titles

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to have you answer two questions about Christmas cards:

1. Why should army men (officers and non-commissioned officers) sign their titles before their names on cards addressed to office associates? When the cards are formal, engraved ones, we understand, of course, that using the title is all right. But when the name is signed, what about that? Doctors, ministers and priests don't sign their titles to a personal greeting-card. That is why we cannot understand why a man would sign himself "Captain John Smith," or "Corporal John Smith" on cards to people with whom he is constantly associated and who would, of course, know his rank.

2. And why should a man send cards signed "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith" (not formal cards) to his friends with whom he works or has worked? Or why should a woman send cards signed "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith" to people whom she knows well enough to send Christmas greetings to them. Why not? in both cases, "Mary and John Smith?"

Persons who sign a formal name to a greeting-card or letter, undoubtedly don't think of this name-with-a-title as formal. They don't realize that it is incorrect. They don't take the trouble to inform themselves as to how they should sign that so-personal possession, their own name. And they hang on to that handle before their name as if it were something that must be held onto at all costs!

If it's necessary (as very often it is) to inform the recipient of your greeting-card or your letter what your formal name is, write your formal name in parentheses under your informal name.

DOCTORS VISIT IN ENGLAND

London, Dec. 22 —(CP Cable)— Doctors T. D. Bain of Ottawa, director of Medical Services for the Canadian Department of Pensions and National Health, and Gordon Dale of Toronto, Orthopaedic Surgeon, have concluded a five-week visit in England. They inspected Canadian army hospitals here and surveyed the British Emergency Medical Service and British and Canadian rehabilitation projects. They are leaving for Canada shortly.

The Marry-Go-Round

Mixed Drill

The world would be full of millionaires if all that energy, ingenuity and indomitable purpose which a man now concentrates on finding a turkey and something to drink for Christmas were devoted to making fame and fortune.

The man who steals a chicken gets a jail sentence; but the chicken who steals a man sometimes gets a wedding-ring.

Today's marriage differs from the old-fashioned marriage chiefly in the fact that there are two pay-envelopes and two brands of cigarettes and sometimes two dogs around the house instead of two cribs and two high-chairs.

King Solomon, the wise, is dead, but the world is still full of men who have not the slightest doubt that they can string along a few hundred girls without getting their wires crossed.

The electric grill has replaced the old kitchen stove and the radio has crowded out the old piano, but to-date no adequate substitute has been found for gasoline, love or a military shoulder to cry on.

An old retainer these days is a maid who has "seen service" in the same kitchen for more than a week.

No man can understand how a girl may be fed up on attentions, kisses and masculine flattery—and at the same time be "starving for love."

There are three times in an honest man's life when he hates to meet his wife's eyes; when he's making a public speech, when he's making a private confession, and when he's trying to thank her for the weird ties and pajamas she gave him for Christmas.

You can never judge a man's courage by his attitude toward his wife. She may be the only thing in the wide wide world that he is afraid of.

Basal Metabolism Test Helpful in Diagnosis of Toxic Goiter

The thyroid gland, located in the neck, is the chemical regulator of the body. When that apparatus begins "acting up," many things can happen. If it works too fast, and an excessive amount of its secretions is formed, toxic goiter develops.

As a general rule, it is not difficult to diagnose toxic goiter. In some patients the thyroid gland is enlarged, but in others it is not. However, the patient with toxic goiter is nervous, irritable, loses weight and strength. He often exhibits protruding eyeballs, rapid beating of the heart, and excessive sweating. A test known as the basal metabolism test is often helpful in making a diagnosis. This test is made by having the patient breathe into a tank whose mechanism measures the amount of oxygen which he uses up in a given period of time.

Another test which Doctor Thos. C. Davison, of Georgia, thinks is even more dependable, is to measure the amount of a substance in the blood known as cholesterol. Since the amount of cholesterol is increased in toxic goiter, this test is of value.

Once a diagnosis of toxic goiter has been established, Doctor Davison believes that the only sound treatment is operation, with removal of most of the thyroid gland. He does not think that medical treatment ever brings about a cure, and that its continuation over a long period of time will only allow the condition to become worse, even dangerous.

However, a period of preparation for the operation is often of value. The patient should be put to bed at complete rest. He should be given a diet rich in starches and sugars, and should be given iodine in the form of Lugol's solution. He should also be given, by the physician, drugs which will help in producing rest and sleep.

As a general rule, this period of preparation for operation requires about two weeks. In some cases, however, the patient's condition may be so serious that this prolonged preparation period is not advisable.

In one type of toxic goiter, lumps —or nodules—form in the thyroid gland. The use of iodine in this kind of goiter is of little value, according to Doctor Davison. In fact, taking iodine over a long period of time may only make the patient worse.

After the operation is completed, it is usually a good idea to continue giving the patient iodine for several days. It is suggested that it be given in salt solution or in a solution of glucose, by injection under the skin. These injections of large amounts of salt or sugar solution may be repeated every six to eight hours if the patient's condition is not good.

Toxic goiters sometimes develop in pregnant women and in persons with diabetes. Operation should be carried out even in such instances.

Witnesses hurried up and asked what he was hunting. Almost as soon as he had explained that his companion, Louise Wisley, also of Garden City, was missing, she was found—she'd been tossed atop the porch of a nearby house, and was sitting there virtually unhurt.

Fashion Flashes

BEST BET to achieve a dressed-up appearance with a street-length or a long skirt is through the medium of a glitter jacket. White doeskin flannel, snugly fitted and trimmed with scrolls and arabesques of jet and gold sequins is both pretty and warm.

A NICE WAY to dress up a black sweater is to embroider a tiny collar or simulated yoke with tiny colored beads, pink or blue or gold.

SLIM AS A WAND dinner dresses are best sellers, so no one seems to mind the government fabric restrictions. A floor-length sheath of vivid red crepe has bodice top and short sleeves of red silk chiffon embroidered all over with matching bugle beads.

LOOKING ABOUT recently we noted plenty of velvet and jet combined in frocks or used in accessories such as a black velvet calot with jet fringe at sides and in back.

ALL READY to bloom in the spring is the 33-inch topper, one of the best coat types. We liked this length done in sunshine yellow with fake tortoise shell buttons, raglan sleeves and rounded revers. The seams have a thickened, welted look.

ROSES OPEN on many a lovely hat to bring color into the winter scene. A burgundy felt calot is trimmed with two enormous roses in apricot pink velvet, stems tied with green velvet streamers to match a misty green veil.

RESCUED AFTER 50 DAYS ON RAFT

Kenneth Cooke, ship's carpenter, and Colin Armitage, both of England, muster all their energy to stand erect on the raft where they spent 50 days in the south Atlantic. The two survivors are shown as they were rescued by the H.M.S. destroyer Rapid. Of 16 men that survived when their vessel was torpedoed, they were the only two men to live through the 50-day ordeal of deprivation.

Christmas Tree Supply On Par With Other Years

By The Canadian Press

Despite labor shortage, transportation restrictions and other widespread dislocations of war, Santa Claus probably will find just as many Christmas trees in Canadian homes this year as he ever has.

A nation-wide survey conducted by The Canadian Press indicated today that almost every Canadian who wanted to make the white bearded fat man's job a little easier by marking the spot for deposit of his booty has been able to do so. And in addition, a large export trade to the United States sent out of the country almost 1,000 carloads of trees from the Maritimes and more than a million trees from British Columbia.

Higher Price

All through the nation, householders have been able to pick their trees from stock-piles on corner lots — at a price quite a bit higher than that of peacetime, but little increased from last year. Towns and cities have been supplied by almost every possible means, from the large-scale dealers of Canada's coastal provinces to the farmers who cut only a few dozen, or few hundreds, of trees for this annual market.

Regulations were unchanged from previous years. The orders governing commercial trucking prohibited shipment of trees by truck for more than 35 miles, but many farmers hauled their trees to market on sleds and other horse-drawn vehicles. Railways couldn't carry trees in flat or open-top cars, or box-cars suitable for other purposes, but the export trade was maintained at its reduced wartime standard. The railways did not issue statistics on the exact quantities handled.

Dollar Average Price

Prices generally ranged from 50 cents to $2 or $3 (for the biggest ones), but the common price for a good home tree was about $1. Quality was about the same as in other years.

In the Maritimes, prices on Prince Edward Island started at 25 cents, lower than in most other parts of Canada. But on the island, as in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia — and, indeed, all over Canada—people in rural areas usually cut their own. Dealers in Montreal and Quebec reported a fall-off in quality, but Ottawa said both quality and quantity were about normal.

In Toronto, education authorities thought at first there wouldn't be enough trees to supply kindergartens, as usual, but changed their minds later when it became apparent plenty of trees were available. Throughout Ontario, there were scattered reports of children cutting trees in parks — a highly illegal, but traditional, procedure — although the supply was normal throughout Ontario cities.

Winnipeg reported the usual supplies, and the usual demand, with prices from 40 cents to $1 for the most popular sizes. The trees were plentiful in Regina, Edmonton and Calgary, too — with prices just slightly higher.

20 LOST TEEN-AGERS RETURN

Los Angeles, Dec. 22 — (AP) — Twenty lost 'teen-age youngsters, some missing as long as three months, have returned home. Detective Monrad Randeburg, juvenile missing persons detail, has a theory: "Christmas is coming—"

ROOSEVELT POLICY ON SOLDIERS' VOTE

Washington, Dec. 22. (AP)—President Roosevelt declared Tuesday he had a simple policy on the question of votes for United States soldiers—that every soldier should be given an opportunity to vote in the 1944 elections unless combat circumstances prevented it. He enunciated the policy at a press conference in response to a request for comment on the soldier vote bill pending in Congress

LAND ON FROZEN LAKE

St. Catharines, Dec. 22 — (CP) — PO. Alan C. Davies, pilot, and PO. Lloyd Garrioch, observer, are believed to have been members of the crew of a Canadian Lancaster bomber which landed on a frozen lake in Sweden after last Thursday night's attack on Berlin.

Relatives here of the two officers were notified yesterday that they are "missing, believed safe and interned" after Thursday's operations.

PRESIDENT'S COMMENT

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Reports that British and American censors were preparing to ban speculation on a new fighting front were dismissed yesterday by President Roosevelt as just another London story. The question was raised at his news conference.

THE WAR TODAY

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press War Analyst

The conferences Gen. George C. Marshall has just concluded with Allied commanders in the Pacific inevitably call to mind the statements of Gen. Douglas MacArthur about the men, equipment and supplies he needed and wasn't getting.

The tempo of the war against Japan has stepped up importantly in recent weeks in both the Central and the Southwest Pacific — Marshall's conference with MacArthur in New Guinea coincided with the landings of U. S. 6th Army forces at Arawe on New Britain.

But the apparent promise of this operation, as well as the seizure of the Gilbert Islands and the mounting air attacks on the Marshalls in the mid-Pacific, is tempered somewhat by the recollection that only a month ago a spokesman at MacArthur's headquarters declared that the forces reaching that combat zone were not sufficient to mount a large-scale offensive.

Within the last few days there have been published reports that MacArthur would go to the United States in the spring. These reports were linked with MacArthur-for-President moves, but it seems highly unlikely that the General, who has said his only ambition was a United Nations victory, would make such a political journey.

There has been, however, considerable speculation that MacArthur was planning the trip, but for the purpose of presenting once more—and this time in person — his demands for greater supplies of men and equipment, particularly air strength, for his theatre. This speculation has persisted despite lack of anything approaching official confirmation.

If such a trip was planned, Marshall's conference with the big man of the Philippines defence may have given him sufficient detailed information about present war plans to head it off.

For Marshall was at Cairo with Churchill-Roosevelt-Chiang, at Teheran with Churchill-Roosevelt-Stalin. Cairo produced the promise that Japan would be stripped of the last shred of her stolen empire. Teheran presumably fixed the timing of the European show that must be played out before the cast can be shifted in sufficient numbers to get real results in the Pacific theatres.

Second Network Of CBC to Open New Year's Day

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 22 — (CP) — More Canadian radio programs featuring more Canadian artists will be in store for listeners from coast to coast when the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation inaugurates a second network Jan. 1.

Dr. Augustin Frigon, acting chairman of the CBC, told The Canadian Press today the Corporation will spend more money than ever next year on programs and artists, with artists' fees alone amounting to $1,000,000, an increase of $100,000 over 1943.

The new network will be inaugurated on schedule but will operate on a temporary basis only until next autumn when most of the program contracts expire. The network then will operate on a permanent basis.

Under the new set-up, the CBC will operate a "trans-Canada" network and a "Dominion" network.

Will Operate 16 Hours

The trans-Canada network, now known as the National network and made up of 35 privately-owned stations and six CBC stations, will include 28 privately-owned stations and six CBC stations which will operate 16 hours daily.

The new Dominion network, to be made up of 24 private stations and one of the six CBC stations now in existence, will operate for three hours every day until it is established on a permanent basis next fall.

All the private stations will not remain continuously on the CBC networks, nor on the same network. Some which carry national network programs during the day will switch to the Dominion network at night and at other times may carry their own features.

To Encourage Artists

"We plan to encourage and help private broadcasters to build up local programs good enough to be carried over the CBC networks," said Dr. Frigon. "We know that most artists converge toward big centres, but if there are good pianists, singers, or musical units in our smaller cities we would like to have them heard over our networks.

"In fact, we would like to get good artists anywhere in the Dominion on our networks through local stations."

JAPANESE CLAIMED UNCONFIRMED

London, Dec. 22 — (CP) — The Tokyo radio broadcast an Imperial Headquarters communique today claiming that Japanese aircraft had sunk nine Allied transports and two cruisers in an attack yesterday on a convoy off Cape Merkus, New Britain. The broadcast was not confirmed by Allied quarters.

Prisoner Captured For Third Time

North Bay, Dec. 22 — (CP) — Eckhert Brosig, 23-year-old German prisoner-of-war in the prison camp at Monteith, Ont., was recaptured here last night after his third escape from the camp since June, 1942. The Nazi made his third break from the camp last night. The prison camp is located in Northern Ontario, 40 miles east of Timmins.

North Bay police said today the former German airman reached North Bay hiding in a railway mail car, where he was captured by Skip Andrews, mail clerk, and Henry Berry, mail inspector.

He was turned over to the Provost Corps, police said, who released him after questioning but later picked him up again. Brosig was held in the city jail.

Brosig first escaped in June, 1942. He was nabbed in New York and returned to Montreal after travelling more than 50 miles through Canada and the United States wearing his German air force uniform, which is similar to that of the R.C.A.F.

During his initial period of freedom Brosig passed through North Bay and spent several hours with a family. He was brought to North Bay by a relative of the family who picked him up on the highway. Brosig claimed then he was a Greek airman.

A statement later by Miss A. E. Smyth that North Bay police had been informed Brosig was in the city but took no action brought on two investigations into the police department.

On Aug. 8, 1943, the Nazi escaped for the second time, authorities describing him as the ringleader of a plan for a mass break by prisoners.

Alertness of an Ottawa detective led to his recapture in the capital Oct. 3 when the detective saw Brosig eating in a downtown restaurant and followed him to the Union station, where he was arrested.

PENALTY LEADER IN NATIONAL LOOP IS MIKE McMAHON

Canadien Player Has Served 40 Minutes in "Cooler" Since Season Started

COWLEY BEST SCORER

Montreal, Dec. 22 — (CP) — It seems as if it's going to be quite a chore for somebody to blast Boston's Bill Cowley out of the leadership in the National Hockey League scoring race.

Official figures released today, and not covering last night's Toronto-Boston game, show Cowley still maintaining the three-point margin he held the week before, with his 36 points comparing with the 33 of team-mate Herbie Cain. Each picked up three points during the week.

Trailing the leaders are Chicago's Bill Mosienko and Lorne Carr of Toronto, with 30 points each or two more than Doug Bentley of Chicago.

Cain continued to lead the goal column, his 19 red lights giving him a comfortable margin over Mud Bruneteau of Detroit who had 15, one more than Mosienko and Gerry Heffernan of Canadiens. Cowley stayed nicely ahead in the assist department with 25, compared with 21 for Carr and 20 for Budy O'Connor of Canadiens.

Mike McMahon continued as penalty leader with 40 minutes, two minors more than his Canadiens' team-mate 'Murph Chamberlain. Pat Egan of Detroit was third with 34 minutes in the box.

Hockey's Big Seven

Another Bruin player, Herb Cain, holds second place with a total of 35 points. Leafs' Lorne Carr climbed into sole possession of third place with his goal and assist.

OSHAWA HOLDS SLIM EDGE OVER REST OF FIELD

Defeat Toronto Marlboros 7-4 While St. Mikes Beat Hamilton

RANGERS WIN

By The Canadian Press

Oshawa Generals continued to hold their slim edge over Toronto St. Michael's in the Ontario Hockey Association junior A's group 1 after their 7-4 victory over Toronto Marlboros last night at Toronto. St. Mike's pressed close to the leaders with an 8-4 triumph over Hamilton.

In other games last night, Toronto Young Rangers earned their first victory of the season over Galt Kists with a 1-0 shutout, while Port Colborne swamped Brantford 8-2. St. Catharines, idle last night, held onto the first place spot in group 2.

Chambers scored three for Port Colborne while Gravelle added two with the other three counters coming from Kaiser, Simpell and Piper. Evanshen and McGuire scored for Brantford.

Toronto St. Michael's led throughout the game at Hamilton, with Joey Sadler getting four goals for the Irishmen. Bob Schnurr, Marzalik, Lindsay and McLean each counted one. Hamilton goals came from Tomiuk, Whitworth, Zuk, Laidlaw and Comfort.

In the doubleheader at Toronto, Frank Rutledge provided the surprise of the evening, when he whipped a shot past Bill Brennan in the Galt nets to give the Young Rangers their first victory of the season. The goal came midway in the second period.

Barker was the only Oshawa player to register two goals. Others were scored by Smith, Curry, Love, Taggart and Batten. Shewchuk got two for Marlboros with Junkin and Harding adding the others.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

New York—Johnny Colan, 175 1-2, U.S. Coast Guard, outpointed Buddy Knox, 207, U.S. Army Air Force (8).

New Bedford, Mass— Leo. Sawicki, 147 1-2, Worcester, Mass., knocked out Verne Atkins, 147, New York, (6).

Jacksonville, Fla. — Bill Wilson, 205, Wilmington, N.C., stopped Jim Bowden, 202, Jacksonville (7).

LEAFS RECEIVE 8-5 BEATING BY BOSTON BRUINS

Cowley Leads Team Mates With Three Goals and an Assist

ONLY GAME PLAYED

Tommy Gorman summed up the Canadien feeling last night with the remark "That's what we like to hear" when informed the Bruins had polished off the Leafs 8-5 at Boston in the only scheduled league game.

The result put Bruins within a point of the second-place Leafs. Bill Cowley led the Boston attack. He scored three of the goals himself and drew a single assist, instead of following his usual tactics of setting up the plays and letting his linemates score the goals.

Bep Guidolin with two, Dit Clapper, Don Gallinger and Flash Hollett were the other scorers for the winners as Bruins marked up their ninth straight game on home ice without defeat.

The Bruins functioned smoothly under defenceman Clapper, who took over for manager Art Ross, who was ill.

The Leafs spread their goals among Lorne Carr, Jackie Hamilton, Bob Davidson, Elwyn Morris and George Boothman.

Tonight, in the only Wednesday night fixture of the schedule, Detroit Red Wings invade Chicago in an effort to pull up within striking distance of second place.

SASKATOON NAVY TEAM REMAINS UNDEFEATED

Calgary Army Team Paced by Max Bentley, Formerly of Chicago Hawks

REGINA FAVORED

Saskatoon, Dec. 22—(CP)—Since hockey league competition began this season in Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Saskatoon Navy sextet is the only senior outfit yet to be defeated.

The sailors from H.M.C.S. Unicorn—a gang of veterans and youths—are making the Saskatchewn senior league a one-team affair, having five straight wins compared with one win each for Moose Jaw Vics and Flin Flon Bombers.

In Alberta, Calgary a 16-Currie Army and Red Deer Army Wheelers are in a neck-and-neck struggle in the senior division while Calgary Tecumseh-Mustangs have one victory in five starts.

Among leading snipers in the Saskatchewan loop are Harvey Fraser of Moose Jaw, former Yorkton Terriers veteran; Bob Wiest and Freddy Bowman of Flin Flon Bombers and Lundy, Couture, OS. Tony Leswick and OS. Clayton Lavell of Saskatoon. Lundy sniped five goals and assisted in two others as the Sailors downed Vics 10-5.

Calgary Army, with three wins and one loss, have been paced by Pte. Max Bentley, formerly of Chicago Black Hawks in the National League. Max has seven goals and eight assists to top league marksmen.

Regina Navy have become favorites in the fiv-team Southern Saskatchewan Junior League with five wins, most easily triumphs, in six starts. At present they are pressed by Regina Commandos who have lost one and tied one in as many contests. Notre Dame Hounds and Moose Jaw Canucks are within striking distance while Regina Abbotts have just a single victory in seven games.

In Alberta, the Edmonton Junior League play is expected to begin shortly between Edmonton Athletic Club, Canadians and Edmonton Navy.

What's Doing in Sport

New York, Dec. 22 — (AP)—Beau Jack and Sammy Angott, holders of the two shares in the world lightweight title, will meet in an overweight match at Madison Square Garden Jan. 28. Jack, who is recognized by the N.B.A., has a tune-up fight with Lulu Costantino January 7.

Montreal, Dec. 22 — (CP)—Geo. Slater, president of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, said last night a committee will report to the League Thursday night on the advisability of allowing Valleyfield Braves and Montreal University O.T.C. into the league to enable it to carry on since it lost Cornwall Army and Montreal R.C.A.F.

Smith's Falls, Ont., Dec. 22—(CP)—Town league hockey will be revived in Smiths Falls this season with a four-team loop virtually assured, it was learned last night. The league has not operated since about 1936 but a Smiths Falls-Perth team last year operated in the district intermediate play-offs.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—Americans and Britons in the Chapel internment camp near Shanghai had a pretty good time playing against each other in softball (the Americans generally won) and soccer (the Britons won), so the Jap guards decided to get in on the fun ...Royal Arch Gunnison, the foreign correspondent and radio commentator who recently returned on the Gripsholm after a year and a half of internment, tells what happened. As a member of the camp committee, Gunnison had to arrange the ball game.

The Japs, proud of their baseball ability, insisted on playing against an all-star team and they brought in some 30 or 40 officials from other camps to see them win...After the first inning the score was about 27-0 in favor of the Americans and the internees decided that they'd better not win too easily or they might lose the few privileges their captors allowed them . . . so they began muffing easy flies, booting grounders and making wild throws ...That only made things look worse and the Japs were losing "face" faster than you can lose your bankroll in a crap game ... The score was about 28-12 after six innings when the captain of the guard, a big, hard-boiled husky who was playing centre field, approached Gunnison and suggested: "Maybe it is more better that we do not keep score, that we just play this game for sportsmanship."

A matter of timing.

"The Japs didn't make it hard for us to get equipment for sports," Gunnison explained. "Frequently someone had to go into Shanghai to buy extra food or medical supplies, and they'd usually let us stop and buy a few softballs or bats. The Japs never objected to our sports except when they interfered with their work projects. They tried to make us work for them, setting up fences and construction camp buildings. We could play seven innings of softball at twilight, but somehow we'd get a post-hole half dug and it would be too dark to finish."

Settled in Advance.

Gunnison also managed to get a look at the sports activities of the Japanese troops . . . Sumo wrestling was one of the big events. It's a special kind of wrestling between big, bulky fellows who twist their hair into heavy pads and butt one another around...He also saw a track meet involving Jap army team, a team of Korenas, some Italian marines and some Nazis... "The Italians were best," Gunnison added, "but the Japs won."

Phillies in the Market For Scouts, Ball Players

(By The Canadian Press)

The Philadelphia Phillies are in the market for baseball scouts and "big and rangy" players.

"We don't want any midgets on next year's team," said General Manager Herb Pennock at Philadelphia. "We want the big, rangy fellows who pack a punch when it is needed and are no powder puffs at the plate."

Pennock said the Phillies also are on the prowl for scouts who can be depended on to bring in the material to build up the club's farm system. A capable group of ivory hunters will get busy looking for talent as soon as the Phillies select the men they want, Pennock said.

Pennock admitted that the Phillies will "probably get some midgets" for next season's team, but added "if they are little fellows we want them with speed and plenty of power."

"I guess I'm partial to big players because I was with the Yankees," Pennock said. "Every time I turned around there I bumped into men like Bill Dickey, Lou Gehrig and Bob Muesel."

Connie Mack will be 81 tomorrow. In his office at Shibe Park in Philadelphia yesterday the granddaddy of the Athletics talked old times with the newsmen, told how he could have had Babe Ruth and Ernie Shore for nothing, how he actually got Chief Bender for only $100. He thinks Jimmy Foxx was his greatest bargain. As for next year—"You can't figure on anybody," says Connie.

Gene Venzke, one of the great milers of the United States, said at Reading, Pa., yesterday that he has definitely quit the cinder-track and is taking up golf. Venzke is working as a tool-maker at the army Air Field at Reading. He's been golfing regularly and recently had a three-under par.

All the football bowl games in the United States New Year's Day will contribute something to the war services. Largest contribution will come from the Rose Bowl, where $45,000 from receipts of the game between Washington and California will go for improving recreational facilities for troops overseas.

Toronto, Dec. 22 — (CP) — Return of 35-year-old Normie Smith to Detroit Red Wings goal after five years absence from hockey inspired Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara to recall how Normie's pretty wife used to drill him on low shots in their apartment in Windsor in 1930-31 when Smith was in the minors. The Smiths occupied the top apartment and tenants below were often startled by thudding sounds from above. One evening a lower tenant decided to make a social call. The door was open and there was Normie in pads and equipment with the chesterfield piled against the window while his wife shot pucks from the living room floor.

Puck Patter:

Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll quotes coach Dick Irvin of Canadiens as stating Glen Harmon is one of the National Hockey League's top rearguards although he is underpublicized...after Army Service Corps bowed 3-0 to Mahers in the Toronto Hockey League at Varsity Stadium the other night, one of the Army team's officials and a crowd of angry fans chased referee Pearcey Allen from the ice but Allen showed nice early footwork and beat them to the officials' dressing room where he waited behind locked doors until the mob broke up.

Long Road:

When Dalton (Nakina) Smith played centre for Detroit Red Wings in Toronto last week it was his first appearance in the National Hockey League although he turned professional in 1935. Nakina was the most publicized player with Sudbury Wolves who won the Canadian junior title in 1932 at Winnipeg. That Wolves team included the present Canadiens' star, Toe Blake, Max Bennett and the two smooth-skating LaFrance brothers.

Incidentally:

Porky Andrews, former Victoria Dominoes basketball star who helped Saskatoon R.C.A.F. win the Saskatchewan hoop title last season, has been posted back to Vancouver Island ... Bill Klepper, business manager of Portland Beavers of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, visited Vancouver last week and got the newspaper boys all steamed up over prospects Vancouver may get the Sacramento franchise after the war. Jim Lander, former Kansas State, Regina and Winnipeg football star, has been playing semi-pro football with Los Angeles Bulldogs. Lander works in a California war plant ... all 13 members of the Bentley family of Delisle, Sask., played hockey. Youngest is Max, 25, last year with Chicago Black Hawks and now with the Army at Calgary. Oldest is Ruth, 50.

DOLAN THE DRUGGIST

Casual Comment
by K.J.C.

Remember the young man who pawned his nice suit of clothes and didn't want his mother to know about it? He finally redeemed them and brought them home in a suitcase. While he was busy in his room, his mother, in the living room, started to unpack the suitcase. She found the pawn ticket on the coat, and called: John, what is this little tag on your coat?

John (losing no time in calling back): Oh, I was at a dance last night, Mother, and I checked my coat.

Mother (coming across the trousers, tagged in the same way): John, what kind of a dance was that?

When writing love letters it might be well to begin with: "My dear sweetheart and gentlemen of the jury."

(Had to come.)

A bunch of the boys were discussing the local hockey situation around the cracker barrel at Baker's fruit market Monday night when we hove into sight.

"So there's to be no senior or intermediate hockey in Belleville this year?" asked Johnnie Baker as he continued with the answer—"Just junior, I hear."

"That's right," says we.

"Well, how about some city league puck chasing. I'll equip one team and get the players," suggested Johnnie, as Henry Canning and Cy Barriage entered upon the scene.

"Count us in and we'll get 'Derby' Jeffery to tend and 'Toots' Holway to help on the defence," suggested Henry, who played O.H.A. hockey here a decade ago or more.

"I'll bet Ken Watt could rustle up a good city league at the Alemite and I hear Stephens-Adamson are interested in city league hockey," interrupted Cy Barriage.

This was all very interesting, but what puzzled this corner was how Johnnie and Henry could get back, once they made a rush.

"That's easy to answer—didn't Frankie Boucher make a comeback with the Rangers after passing 42 summers," related Johnnie Baker as he agreed to outfit one city league squad. (It looks as though the boys meant business up to this point.)

"Why to show I was never biased in the old days of city league hockey, one year I played for the Young Conservative Club and the next season with Bill Ross' 'Booster' Club that was sponsored by the Liberal party," added Johnnie to prove his versatility as a hockey player.

Yes, in years past Belleville has had some good city hockey leagues and as Johnnie and the boys point out, with the absence of senior or intermediate teams in the city the time looks about ripe for another good city puck loop.

(This and that.)

When it comes to gambling, the Brooklyn Dodgers of a year ago were pikers to old Grover Cleveland Alexander, the all-time pitching great. . . Charley Grimm, who was a teammate of Old Pete's for many years, tells of seeing him drop $2,500 in a clubhouse poker game and then go out and pitch as if he had nothing on his mind . . . I've also seen him lose just about as much at a sitting," adds Grimm . . . Bill Killefer adds his testimony to show what kind of a guy Bill Cox, former owner of the Phils who was kicked out of baseball by Judge Landis, is. . . "Last summer before he sent me on a scouting trip, Cox called me into the office and informed me I would have to take a salary cut," says Killefer . . . "I agreed to a $1,000 slash but when I returned to Philadelphia it was to discover that $2,500 had been pared from my pay cheque" . . . And speaking of the Phils, the reason they didn't declare a dividend on the profits of the past year is because the operators are so determined to have a winner next season that they are going to spend all the cash in buying players . . . Have you ever wondered why a baseball costs so much? . . . The answer is that no machine has yet been perfected for stitching the covers. . . Working entirely by hand, the average artisan can produce only 42 baseballs a day.

(Remember when—)

William T. Tilden refused an offer of $60,000 to turn professional and play a series of exhibition tennis matches in the United States and Canada, 17 years ago today. However, William finally entered the "moneyed ranks" of tennis in 1931 at the age of 38.

(Name referees.)

The management of the Marmora-Stirling "Combines" communicated with Secretary Wally Berry, of the Belleville Juniors to name R. G. Paul and R. E. Fox as their official referees in the junior "B" O.H.A. series.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 259

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

No-trump hounds are bridge players with a stubborn streak. They work on a unique partnership basis. You must tell them what you have; what they have, they keep to themselves.

As a result, many of your partnership contracts are wrecked on the rocks of distribution. Hands are played at no-trump that should have been played in some suit. And suit contracts fall far short of their goal.

Habitual no-trumpers are always telling you "my hand looked as if it should play in no-trump from my side." Or, "I didn't think we could make game in a minor."

In all other respects, they look like human beings. They had sense enough to say yes to their wives. But they like to wallow in no-trump bids up to their neck.

It is always better to start with one in a suit than with one no-trump That goes no matter what type of hand you hold. Providing, of course, you have a biddable suit to show.

If you open with one no-trump, partner must repsond at the level of two. Whereas, if you open with one in a suit, he can always respond at the level of one.

Furthermore, he has a greater selection of responses to choose from. He has an easier chance to give and get information about your combined suits.

If your partner can make any responding bid to your no-trump opening, he certainly has enough to answer your suit bid. And if your hand belongs in no-trump, you can still get there.

You have this hand:

♠A Q 8
♥K Q 10 4
♦K 8 3
♣A J 10

Your opening bid with that hand should not be one no-trump. It should be one heart. There is absolutely no question about that.

And now, we start a new series. You may not be ready for it yet. But ready or not, we are crossing the border into slam territory.

AT THE BELLE

"Tornado," Thrilling

Paramount's new action-romance, "Tornado," featuring Chester Morris, Nancy Kelly and Bill Henry is now at the Belle Theatre.

Comedy, and plenty of it, is the theme of "The Good Fellows" a romantic comedy, featuring Cecil Kellaway, Helen Walker and James Brown, announced as the added laugh feature. The Canadian Movietone News described by Lowell Thomas completes the program.

"Mexican Spitfire's Blessed Event"

Again those indefatigable funsters, Lupe Velez and Leon Errol, bring another of their hilarious offerings to the screen in "Mexican Spitfire's Blessed Event," which opens next at the Belle Theatre.

This time the complications revolve about a non-existent baby, Carmelita, vacationing at an Arizona dude ranch, sends a telegram to Dennis, who is trying to wangle another contract from Lord Epping at the latter's hunting lodge, and Dennis misinterprets the message to mean that he has become a father.

Lord Epping is intrigued at the news, and insists on the whole party starting immediately to view the new arrival. Of course there isn't any baby to view, and the subsequent happenings deal with the noble Britisher's indignation at being grossly deceived, coupled with frantic attempts on the part of everyone else to assuage his feelings and adjust matters satisfactorily.

Lupe is her usual excitable self, and provides much of the fun of the picture, while Errol again demonstrates his amazing versatility in enacting the three-way role of Lord Epping and Uncle Matt posing as Lord Epping. Walter Reed, Elizabeth Risdon and Lydia Billbrook also repeat their featured roles, with Hugh Beaumont, Alan Carney and Wally Brown providing additional comedy moments.

"Murder on the Waterfront"

"Murder on the Waterfront," which is announced as the added feature attraction, is guessing drama that creates and holds a breathless mood of suspense and excitement throughout. Featuring Warren Douglas, Joan Winfield, John Loder and Ruth Ford, this new Warner Bros. picture is woven around a plot of espionage at work in the United States Navy and it strikes for the interest of every Canadian, giving authentic illustrations of our struggles against the ingenious enemy agents.

It is the story of our country's resistence against spies, who try desperately, through torture and murder to wrest a secret invention from the Naval authorities—a thermostat to keep bombsights functioning at maximum efficiency at high altitudes.

The inventor of the gadget is murdered after all forms of inquisition fail. Before the killer is apprehended and the spy ring broken up there is plenty of action, thrills and drama.

Warren Douglas, Joan Winfield, John Loder and Ruth Ford give convincing performances as the key figures involved in the maze of events leading to the successful apprehension of the criminal.

The picture marks a definite achievement for B. Reaves Eason who directed adroitly from the excellent screen play by Robert E. Kent, who based his script on the play by Ralph S. Zink.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Broadway Big Shot"

The man who is solidly established with film fans as the screen's number one detective, Dick Tracy, is behind bars for a change in "Broadway Big Shot" at the McCarthy next with Virginia Vale in the feminine lead.

He is handsome young Ralph Bryd, who first won screen fame as the iron-jawed detective of the comic strips in a Republic serial, and who has returned three additional times since then to continue on in the role.

In "Broadway Big Shot," however, Bryd plays the part of a reporter, who is sent to prison, as a convict, to obtain a story from a prison inmate. When he arrives at the penitentiary, he discovers that the man he is looking for had died that morning and he is forced to serve out the balance of his sentence when the district attorney refused to admit that he had deliberately sent him to jail.

Others in the cast are Virginia Vale, William Halligan, Joe Oakie and Cecile Weston.

Hoosier Holiday is the second feature hit opening at the McCarthy Theatre next, presented great difficulties during the filming of the picture, owing to the fact that so many of the big cast were radio stars, who had to appear on their various programs while making the picture.

Trying to arrange schedules to fit in with everybody's broadcasts nearly turned the producer's hair white, but somehow he managed, and reports of the finished product are wonderful.

Dale Evans stars, supported by George Byron, The Music Maids, The Hoosier Hot Shots and Isable Randolph.

HOCKEY INTEREST REACHES NEW TOP IN HECTIC YEAR

Soldier Participation in Major Sport Restricted by Defence Department Ruling—Youngsters Fill Professional Gaps

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.

War's impact hit hockey with full force in 1943 as the armed services supplied most of the big moments on the ice and in committee rooms.

Spectator interest reached new peaks across the country. Junior and professional hockey established attendance records. The National Hockey League weathered the threat of collapse to become more popular than ever. But, still, service hockey provided the fireworks.

For the first time, civilian clubs failed to figure seriously in Allan Cup play-offs. Enlishments had loaded service teams with former professional tars and, of the nine clubs entering interprovincial competition, only Port Arthur Bearcats were civilians. Bearcats faded in the first round.

Ottawa Commandos, an army team featuring 11 former N.H.L. players, won the championship by beating Victoria Army in the final. As they were presented with the Allan Cup at Calgary, the boos of fans fore-shadowed a wave of opinion which seriously curtailed service hockey before the current season began.

Criticism of policies which had permitted service athletes to remain in Canada playing hockey brought defence department action in October. It was announced participation in sports would not be allowed to interfere with "normal training and duties of soldiers" and that those qualified would be sent overseas immediately on completion of training.

Clubs Withdrawn

Results were startling. Within a few days loss of players forced withdrawal from senior leagues of army teams in Halifax, Montreal, Cornwall, Ont., Toronto and Regina. Calgary R.C.A.F. Mustangs folded and later combined with Calgary Navy to form one team. Air Force teams in Ottawa and Yorkton, Sask., collapsed.

Where possible, service teams are continuing but in most cases are not so super-charged with stars that civilian clubs are outclassed.

Increasing popularity of the seniors reduced attendance at junior games, particularly in Winnipeg where the youngsters had long been favored. But the juniors made a stirring comeback in the Memorial Cup final at Toronto where Winnipeg Rangers beat Oshawa Generals before a six-game paid attendance of 73,839, a record for any hockey series in Canada.

Detroit Red Wings won the N.H.L. championship and the Stanley Cup in a season which saw a new league attendance record of 1,446,827. Then dozens of professional players were called into the army during the summer and collapse of the league was threatened by player shortages.

Finally, the new season opened in November with teen-aged youngsters and military-exempt veterans filling the gaps. Continued N.H.L. popularity was proven by Mervyn (Red) Dutton's announcement that attendance is up seven per cent over the same period of last year. Dutton, who succeeded to the N.H.L. throne when Frank Calder died in February, had safely leaped the chasm between fiery player-manager and shrewd businessman.

German Press Publishes Pictures of U.S. Flier

Stockholm, Dec. 22—(AP)— The German press has published two pictures described as showing an American flier, Kenneth D. Williams, 21, Charlotte, N. C., and attacking him as "typical of the cynical manner of the American youth which now is bombing Europe's cultural monuments and cities," the German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau reported today from Berlin.

The pictures showed Williams with the words "murder incorporated" printed on the back on his coveralls. Williams was flying a fortress called "Murder Incorporated" which was shot down in a raid on Emden Nov. 26, the German Press said.

The name of the German-reported plane evidentally is from "Murder, Inc.," the title applied to a gang of Brooklyn, N. Y., killers estimated to have killed 100 persons for a group of gangsters which dealt in liquor, slot machines, gambling houses and other rackets.

Testimony at trials of the gang members pictured the organization as one of the largest and most incredible crime rings ever exposed. A number of the gang's members were executed.

Bomber crews run the gamut of imagination in picking names, most of them facetious, for their ships. Any such facetiousness would of course be lost on the Nazi mind. Among names of other bombers are "hell's angels," "wabbit twacks," "suzy Q."

HIS MAJESTY RECEIVES EDWARDS IN AUDIENCE

London, Dec. 22, (CP Cable)— The King on Tuesday received in audience Air Marshal Harold Edwards on the occasion of his relinguishing his appointment as air officer commanding the R.C.A.F. in Britain.

Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, formerly chief of Air Staff, Ottawa, has arrived in Britain to succeed Edwards whose next appointment has not been announced

AT THE BELLE — These two great comedians, Leon Errol and Lupe Velez in a scene from the new rib-tickling feature comedy, "Mexican Spitfire's Blessed Event," comgin next to the Belle Theatre. Breathless suspense and excitement blend in "Murder on the Waterfront," the second feature attraction.

London, Dec. 22. (CP)—London in her detached, disinterested way, knows there are a lot of people from Gibraltar in these parts and she hears they are crazy about movies.

She vaguely recalls that the kids haunt Kensington bus drivers with their chattering Spanish energy and that the dark, young women are working here and there.

Otherwise her knowledge about them is no greater than her knowledge about the other communities of Europeans which have made this a wartime home.

It is more than three years since these chips off the old rock fell on London in the blitz, waited in vain for the Atlantic shipping crisis to permit passage to the West Indies, and finally grew into a fixture. London, unruffled, simply absorbed them as she has absorbed Netherlanders, Czechs and Poles.

In three years, 12,000 women, children and old men evacuated from Gibraltar have grown into a community all their own, probably the most concentrated community among London's multitude of minorities.

The others came individually or in small groups. The Gibraltarians came in one excited mass.

They survived the blitz and slowly worked into the London way of life.

The Ministry of Health took them under its wing established 34 centres some in hotels some in blocks of flats provided each centre with a sick-bay and child-care reserve nurses, and put over it a manager responsible to the ministry.

The women's voluntary service made itself responsible for extra clothes for the needy, libraries and other amenities. The British Council, an industrious organization which fosters relations between Britons and other peoples, took over the educational problem.

It pays for the education of boys and girls at the Secondary and Technical schools of the London County Council and at evening classes in the centres organized by the L.C.C.

At Technical College, the boys often specialize in engineering, woodwork, carpentry and the like. When they leave school they find work within the wartime British economy easy to obtain.

The British Council and the Ministry of health sit with representatives of the Gibraltarians on an entertainment committee. The people have their own symphony orchestra and have given concerts at Westminster's central hall.

Father of Youth, Executed As Darlan's Slayer, Clears Mystery From Case

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, Dec. 22 — (AP) — An anguished father, seeking to clear the name of his son, who a year ago Christmas eve ended the life of Admiral Jean Francois Darlan in a flurry of gunfire, has lifted some of the secrecy thrown over the death of the little man who tried to be all things to all men.

One year of untiring effort by Eugene Bonnier de la Chapelle, newspaperman, has won partial vindication of the name of his 20-year-old son, Fernand Bonnier de la Chapelle, a frail university student who died before a firing squad.

As the result of the father's appeal, the Justice Minister of the French Committee of National Liberation has issued a communique saying a re-examination of the case revealed that the youth had not been connected with the Axis.

If leaders of the French underground movement have their way, the youth soon may be hailed as a martyr in the fight to liberate France.

Facts Apparent

Gradually through the year, these facts have become self-apparent, although the full story may not be told until the many persons involved in the plot are dead:—

1. The fierce emotional idealism of the young student, who was an ardent follower of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, was used by older men who never have been brought to trial.

2. These men supplied young Bonnier de la Chappelle with a gun, and the opportunity to shoot Darlan.

3. The youth was tried hurriedly awa. and shot within 46 hours of the assassination.

4. A story spread around Algiers, to the effect that the assassination was a Royalist plot to install the Prince of Paris, a Morocco pig farmer, as the king of North Africa, was a smoke screen raised to confuse the situation.

Protested Implication

In a letter to Gen. deGaulle, Gen. Henri Giraud and French Minister of Justice Geo. Catroux, the father protested the implication that his son was the tool of the Axis.

Asking that his son's name be restored to a place of honor, the father outlined the youth's life: —

Fernand as a boy scout had helped in the ambulance corps during the fall of France, and after the Germans occupied Paris he joined the French underground students movement, first in Paris and then in Algiers.

He joined the Chantiers de la Jeunesse, a youth organization which helped the Allied landings of Nov. 8, 1942.

"For his country, he was ready to do anything," the father wrote.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was in my room going over my stamp alban, and ma looked in, saying, Benny, I want you to run around to the store for me.

Aw G, the weather is fierce out, I said, and ma said, Well then you'll appricate your nice comfortable home all the more when you come back in.

Well jimminy, ma, I mean heck, I appreciate it perfect right now, I said. G roozlem, ma, do you realize it's almost drizzeling outside? I said, and ma said, Well no, I must say I didn't realize that. Almost drizzeling, goodness. A super sensitive person might half imagine he felt a few drops. I hope I'll never be accused of being so thoughtless as to expose you to any such problematical weather conditions. Your father can just do without a sweet dessert for one day in his life. Some nice fruit would be better than pastry for his waistline, anyway, she said.

Me thinking, Pastry, G, good night. And I quick said, Well hay, ma, gosh, I mean after all, there's no use disappointing pop after he's been working hard in his office all day thinking about what kind of dessert he's going to get for dinner.

I wouldn't dream of allowing you to go, such recklessness, ma said. Do you realize weather that starts by almot drizzeling may finish by practically raining? Before you knew it you'd nearly sneeze, and that's only a short step from being on the extreme verge of a sniffle. In other words I certainly dont intend to have you threatened with a possible cold within a few degrees of a fever, and your father is the last man in the world to enjoy any dessert that was obtained at any such comparative sacrifice. So dont give it another thought, she said.

The result being I had to argue all my might before ma would leave me go around to the baker store and buy a half a dozen cream puffs.

Ottawa, Dec. 22.—(CP)—Anxious to be home by Christmas a group of more than 100 R.C.A.F. repatriates arrived in Ottawa yesterday from overseas.

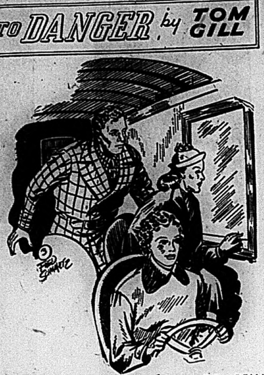
CHAPTER 3



EARL SCHUTZ

Irina quietly announced, "I am going to marry Rodney Selkirk."

His face mirrored his disappointment—to turn back now and fly into Dove's arms. "Blair," he said "it means a lot if I could get to Learmonth. Can't we take a chance?"

"Okay." She did not even hesitate. "If you say so, we'll try going under those clouds or around them. But don't ever think it's funny to be lost in a snowstorm."

Blair was a grand person! She was acting against her better judgment, but she was going through with it for him. He remembered a time, years back, when their canoe snagged and they had swirled down through white water to climb out more dead than alive on a granite shore. She was frightened then, too, and wet and cold, but she had tramped miles back to camp without a murmur. She was the kind to count on.

Colin turned to Irina. "We're in for a storm. It may be bad going."

"Is it safe to smoke here?" she asked.

"Put your ashes in that paper cup."

They headed straight for the cloud bank. Already it was snowing beneath them as Blair dropped lower — great wet flakes slanting before a rising gale — then suddenly it was on them, wrapping them in a blanket of white that blotted out the world, while the plane quivered like a stricken thing, and the drone of the motor raised to an angry whine.

Colin glanced at Irina—she sat quietly smoking, her eyes on the fast-frosting window.

Still lower. Blair was feeling her way down through a break in the drifting clouds they caught sight of the river again; then the clouds closed and they were lost once more in blinding whiteness.

No sign of land or water now, yet the altimeter showed barely five hundred feet. They dared go no lower, and Blair pulled the nose of the plane level while her eyes strained hopelessly into that swirling wall of snow. She banked sharply to the west.

"We just can't go under it," Colin heard her say. "Let's try going around."

For more than twenty minutes she flew through snow so thick she could barely see her wing tips, blindly following a compass course due west, while the plane bucked like a frightened horse and Colin wondered how soon ice would begin forming on the wings.

Then the clouds ahead lightened. Cautiously Blair lost another hundred feet of altitude. They were dangerously low, but they were beginning to catch intermittent glimpses of ground.

A maze of endless muskeg swamp and low jack-pine ridges—no sign of either lake or river. Minutes passed, while they peered anxiously ahead, hoping to pick up some known landmark; then in a small, terror-stricken voice Blair said, "We're lost."

Colin tried to reassure her. "We can always make it back to the lake."

"Not against that wind. We're too low on gas to buck it very long."

"Let's see if we can pick up the river."

Obediently she banked and headed east toward the fringe of the storm. He could see her hand trembling—no time now for nerves. He scraped the frost from the window. If only —

Suddenly he pointed. "That's Long Portage, Blair. We're ten miles west of Trappers Lake."

"Then Learmonth's in the centre of the storm. Colin, we can't go back into that."

"Let's land at Trapper's Lake and wait till the storm's over. The old cabin's still there."

Doubtfully she frowned at the map. "It's a pretty small puddle to land in." She opened the throttle. "We'll look it over."

Folding the map, Colin turned toward Irina. "We were lost," he told her.

"I know." Carefully she crushed her cigarette and dropped it in the paper cup while Colin watched her curiously.

"Doesn't anything throw you off your stride?" he asked. "A man rushes into your room, a plane is lost in a snowstorm—are you really fearproof?"

Unsmiling, she shook her head. "No, my friend. Only I have learned at some expense that all things pass."

That was it. That was one of the lessons life teaches. But never gently, never without blows. Perhaps that was why those green, slanting eyes of hers seldom smiled and, even when they seemed most friendly, remained always on guard. Perhaps— He gave it up and looked out at the snow-heaped fringe of pines.

Keeping good flying speed, Blair was circling Trappers Lake. Black, slushy ice had begun to crust the edges but the lake itself was still open—they could see the water whipped to tiny waves.

"Hold everything," she cautioned. "I'm going in for a landing and I'll need all the room there is." She cut the motor. "It's like landing in a bathtub."

Even before she leveled out, Colin saw they wouldn't make it. They were coming in too fast; at that speed they were bound to crash on the farther bank.

But Blair had seen it sooner than he. Jamming the throttle wide open, she pulled back on the wheel and with a deep roar of the motor they zoomed over the stunted pines. This time Colin saw she was plainly shaken.

"I don't like it. It's too tight a squeeze." Blair bit her lip and steadied herself. "Well, here we go again."

Circling wide, she cut the motor to a glide and came in slowly, almost stalling, drifting lower, closer to the trees, until to Colin it seemed that the pontoons must be brushing the tops of the pines. But now she cleared them and, swooping down over the lake, held the pontoons just above the surface while the plane settled. A moment later Colin heard the swish of water and felt the sudden drag in speed. His eyes strained ahead to the opposite shore; it was coming toward them at an alarming pace.

Blair's face had paled; he saw her kick the rudder to swerve the plan around and in the same second heard the rip of torn metal from beneath. Lurching, the plane stopped with its left wing against the bank.

Blair cut the switch.

Colin had flung both arms about Irina to protect her from the shock of a crash, and now releasing her, he pushed open the door.

"It's only the pontoon," he called back. "You didn't even touch the wing."

"What happened?"

"A rock, I think."

For just an instant Blair laid her face down on the wheel and when she raised it her eyes were wet. None too convincingly, she tried to smile. "You picked a nice careful pilot, didn't you?"

Colin laid his hand on hers. "You're plenty good enough for me. Not many pilots could have fought that st[illegible] and then squeezed a plane do[illegible] here."

He jumped to the rock, and pulling the nose of the plane forward, felt the pontoons scrape quietly on the sand.

Climbing out on the edge of the wing, Blair lay at full length and looked into the water. "The pontoon's split wide open." She rose to her knees. "Well, here she stays until I bring an extra over from Learmonth." And to Irina she added, "You won't see Rodney Selkirk until tomorrow."

Pulling her cloak about her, Irina looked up at the long granite ridge, where snow lay melting against the base of the trees.

"Where do we stay?" she asked.

"With an old friend, Alec Gunn," Colin answered, "if he's not away trapping. The cabins are still here. I saw them from the air." He looked up at the sky. "Cheer up, Blair! Even without a smashed pontoon we wouldn't be able to take off. There's more snow back in those clouds. Let's see if anyone is in the cabin."

The question was soon answered. Even before Colin had lifted Irina from the plane, footsteps came splashing down the soggy trail and a man in his middle fifties ran toward them. Wind and sun had carved a network of fine wrinkles about his eyes; he was hatless, with coarse grizzled hair, cut in a short bob; and he wore a pair of blue overalls, a sweater and beaded moccasins under heavy black rubbers. The hair, the high cheekbones, and texture of his skin pronounced him Indian, but the gray eyes told of white blood.

At sight of Rae, he let out a delighted whoop. "Colin Rae—you're back!" Eagerly he clambered down the bank.

Colin held out both hands. "How goes it, Alec?"

"Fine." The white teeth flashed and Colin turned to Irina. "This is my friend, Alec Gunn. He taught me how to trap before I was tall as a candoe paddle." Rae laid a hand on the breed's shoulder. "We will have to bunk with you tonight, Alec. Can you put us up?"

"Sure. Plenty room. What happened?"

"We smashed a pontoon. You help Miss Meredith up with her bags while Blair and I put the plane to bed."

It was the work of a short half hour to moor the wing skids and cover the prop, but it was snowing heavily before they finished, and while the water drained they sat in the warmth of the plane's cabin.

A shadow of past tension lingered on Blair's face.

"I made an awful fool of myself getting lost, smashing the pontoon, and then blubbering. What do you think of me?"

Says Japs Never Give Torpedoed Seamen Chance to Survive

Toronto, Dec. 22 —(CP)— Men who sail on Allied merchant vessels would rather be torpedoed by the Germans than the Japanese because the latter "never give you a chance," Chief Steward Herbert Tuck, 23, of the Canadian Merchant Navy, said here today.

Tuck, who was torpedoed three times by the Germans and once by the Japanese in the South Pacific said:

"It is the usual thing for Japanese to machine-gun lifeboats when they sink a ship. I have talked to a lot of men in the South Pacific who have been torpedoed by both the Germans and the Japanese and they all say they'll take the Jerries every time."

Baby Wayne Lonergan Is Sent Christmas Gift From Father in Prison

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—Baby Wayne Lonergan was sent a Christmas gift today from his father, Wayne Longergan, who is awaiting trial for first degree murder in the slaying of his wife, Patricia Burton Lonergan.

The 26-year-old former R.C.A.F. aircraftman held in City prison, sent his son an imported Swiss music box made of walnut. His lawyer, Edward V. Broderick, said he furnished the $12 to pay for it and arranged for its purchase by a Red Cross worker. The gift was accompanied by a card reading "to Wayne from dad," the lawyer said.

Broderick said Longergan had received more than 40 Christmas cards thus far in his prison cell.

Ask Representations Be Made to Godbout For Salary Readjustment

Montreal, Dec. 22. (CP)—Montreal employees of the Quebec Civil Service today asked that representations be made at once to Premier Godbout for a readjustment of salaries.

At a meeting they instructed Dr. Jacques Archambault, president of the Quebec Civil Servants Association, and provincial Councillator Clovis Bernier to call on Mr. Godbout "stressing the fact that the civil servants have waited long enough for an improvement of their situation".

They ask a readjustment of salaries and of the cost-of-living bonus as well as a revision of pension fund regulations.

Washington, Dec. 22 — (AP) — There won't be any fancy wrappings on the Christmas gifts which President Roosevelt will distribute tomorrow to the White House staff.

5 LOCOMOTIVES ARE DESTROYED

C.N.R. Roundhouse at Point Tupper, N.S., Burned, 3 Engines Saved

Point Tupper, N.S., Dec. 22—(AP) —Five locomotives and other equipment were destroyed early today as fire razed the Canadian National Railways roundhouse, here, causing damage estimated unofficially at $500,000. Three other locomotives were hauled to safety by a shunting engine before the flames halted salvage work.

Also destroyed in the fire, which broke out about two o'clock this morning, was a new enginemen's resthouse. Cause of the blaze has not been determined.

As flames roared through the roundhouse, explosions shook the building, impeding fire fighting efforts, as oil drums and other inflammable material ignited.

A.R.P. crews from nearby Port Hawkesbury and all railway employees in the area were called out to fight the flames. The train ferry S. S. Nova, which plies Canso Strait between this Cape Breton community and Mulgrave on the Nova Scotia mainland, was also pressed into service, playing streams of water on the fire from the waterfront.

Train service was held up for seven hours until the fire was brought under control. Although threatened for a time, the power-house and engine boilershop were saved from destruction.

Christmas Mail Flown to Italy And Middle East

Ottawa, Dec. 22 (CP)—Santa Claus has exchanged his reindeer for Flying Fortresses and his brilfor flying fortresses and his brilliant red costume for the blue of the R.C.A.F., to make sure that Christmas mail reaches Canadian troops in Italy and the Middle East on time.

A new R.C.A.F. airmail service was inaugulated Dec 14, when two huge Fortresses—their bomb bays bulging with mail—took off from nearby Rockcliffe airport and headed for Britain.

News of the inaugural flights was withheld from immediate publication for security reasons, Completion of the first two flights was announced by the R.C.A.F., which said the planes were delayed en route by bad weather.

Inaugural Flights

Santa didn't go along on two inaugural flights. He placed the controls in the hands of Wing Cmdr. Bruce Middleton of Ottawa and Winnipeg and Flt. Lt. C. R. Knowles of Oshawa, Ont.

Wing Cmdr. Middleton, commander of the newly - formed R.C.A.F. mail squadron, and his crew were wished "God speed and a safe journey" by Air Minister Power, who watched the take-off in sub-zero weather.

The planes fly from here to Britain and then on to Italy and the Middle East.

A special effort was made to deliver Christmas letters and parcels on time. Later the squadron hopes to make regular flights at least once a week.

Air Minister Power wasn't around when the second Fortress took off, but before leaving the airport he met the crew and repeated his good wishes.

The second craft carried a second complete air crew which will be stationed in Britain to fly from there to Italy and the Middle East. Cpl. J. C. Trethowan, Alliston, Ont., was one of its members.

BULGARIAN PORT OF VARNA CLOSED

Residents Confined to Homes Under Penalty of Death From Sunday Morning to Monday Noon

Istanbul, Dec. 21 —(Delayed) — (AP)— The Bulgarian Black Sea port of Varna was closed from the world and its residents were confined to their home under penalty of death from early Sunday morning until noon Monday.

The news reached here from Varna radio broadcasts before, during and after the blockade.

The first announcement said the people of the town were blockaded for "reasons of security" and warned that they would be shot if they tried to leave their homes or even leaned out of windows and doorways. Later the Varna radio said the "investigation" was proceeding well. At noon Monday the radio said the restriction had been lifted and "the investigation has been a success."

The reason for the sudden development in Bulgaria's second-largest port was not known. It is possible the police made a house-to-house search for Communist or Revolutionary elements, or that the port was used for disembarkation of German units evacuated from the Crimea.

"Supplies will still be far below pre-war levels," a Board official said, "but a slight improvement in the domestic wire supply situation permits Canadian manufacturers to increase production."

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)— Price movements were narrow and irregular in today's stock market.

Labor Legislation Suggested to Godbout And Quebec Cabinet

Quebec, Dec. 22 — (CP) — A delegation of the Canadian and Catholic Federation of Labor today presented Premier Godbout and members of the Provincial Cabinet with a memorandum containing suggestions for labor legislation to be submitted to the coming sessions of the legislature.

Following the meeting with the Cabinet it was stated that the strike of white collar workers of the city of Montreal, was not discussed. Labor Minister Edgar Rochette, questioned by newsmen about the situation, said: "As the strikers will not accept the arbitration board I offered earlier this week, there is nothing to do."

The delegation of the C.C.L., parent body of the National Syndicate of Municipal Workers, organisers of the Montreal strike, was headed by President Alfred Charpentier.

The memorandum to the government, read by General Secretary Gerard Picard, stated that the C.C.C.L. agrees with liberty of union affiliation "which does not imply a contradiction with freely approved closed shops, as long as they are sanctioned by a labor tribunal." It suggests that labor tribunals be easily accessible.

Disposal Dep't of Ministry of Supply In London Has Some Queer Problems

By William Holt

(BBC Press Service)

London by Mail — I was in an interesting room in London some weeks ago. It's a sort of library of service clothing. Only instead of books, a sample of every item of clothing used by the army, navy and air force is filed there for reference. There are long lines of wooden racks fitted with shelves, and on these are uniforms—battle dress, greatcoats, underclothing, socks, shirts, pants—everything worn by the forces. There's one each of everything there.

Now what do you think we're doing with all these items of clothing, collected together in a room in London?

No, it's not a museum; the clothing you see there belongs to the present age. No visitors pass in and out, filing past the exhibits. The men you see there are civil servants. They come in hurriedly from offices adjoining the room, examine some item or other in one of the racks, and then hurry back again into their office to telephone.

This library of service clothing is used by the Disposal Department of our Ministry of Supply, who have the jobs of finding some other use for worn out and cast off service clothing. Up and down the country are twelve huge warehouses. And into these depots comes a constant stream of miscellaneous clothing.

Do you realize that during a recent month alone, one million three hundred thousand items of outer clothing had been sorted and graded in these disposal depots?

Two years ago, these disposal people only dealt with army clothing. But now they're handling everything in textile which is government owned. I mean that besides clothing from all the services, including firemen's clothing, civil defence uniforms and so on, they've tackled the job of disposing of such things as old ropes from the navy, hose pipes, camouflage nets, used parachutes, old or obsolete towing targets from the R.A.F.—the targets they shoot at in the air for practice—and all sorts of weird things.

When I went into one of the offices, lying on the table there was a triangular piece of vivid yellow silk, hemmed around the edges and with white tapes fastened to the corners. An official was on the telephone about it. A quantity of these had come into one of the depots and were available for disposal. They are known officially as "silke, yellow" and they're used by certain troops as distinguishing marks when carrying out special operations—a chap wears it on his back in action, fastened with tapes to his neck and shoulders. It can be seen easily from the air or from a distance on the ground. Well the problem now for the disposal department was to find some other use for them—a service use, or to convert them into something else.

I talked to this official when he'd finished telephoning and he told me that almost every day now they find themselves faced with new and unknown problems. The variety of articles they were being asked to deal with now was bewildering—"it's just terrific" he said.

"This morning," he said, "some old camouflaged material came in. We also have some impregnated wool from gas respirators. So we've decided to make bed overlays out of this material using th wool for the padding. And these bed covers will be offered for relief purposes."

If they can't be used in the immediate war effort, they can be set aside for the relief of the populations of occupied Europe as they are freed by our liberating armies.

With regard to battle dress, the jacket and trousers are repaired and used for a secondary purpose. They are never sent back into action with the fighting forces. The army is prepared to use them if necessary, but up to now this hasn't been necessary.

A worn battle dress, if it's not too bad, is repaired and used for a secondary purpose—as for example, the clothing of prisoners of war. Only in this case, the repairs must not be conspicuous. The Geneva Convention of the International Red Cross rightly lays it down that prisoners of war shall be properly clothed. The repaired battle dress is dyed chocolate brown, and the identification patches—which of course have to be conspicuous—are let into the back of the jacket and behind the knees of the trousers, and so that they'll be of a contrasting color, they're cut out of the sky blue cloth of an old R.A.F. uniform.

Old battle dresses which are not good enough for this purpose are repaired and dyed green for agricultural workers and for civilian workers in heavy industry. Acid picklers wear them. And a pair of leggings are made from four old webbing service anklets.

Did you know that it's possible now to take the shrink out of woollens? I saw some amazing results. Socks which had shrunk until the feet were only about five inches long had come back to their original size and were quite soft and clean and looked as good as new. "De-felting" it's called. I saw what looked like brand new, soft woollen cream undervests and pants. And I saw the kind of garment they were before—when they'd come back from the services into the disposal deports—dull, dirty looking, shrunken "soldier washed" underclothing. A.T.S. khaki stockings, with toes and heels out—not just one toe but all the toes out—are reconditioned by machinery and all the ladders are taken out and when they come back they are like new.

A marvelous process, this de-felting. I could do with a bit of this de-felting for my own underwear. And so could lots of other civilians in Britain, I'll bet.

Well that's what happens to the service clothing. And by the way, the American forces have now asked us to handle their disposal stuff in this way. Their first order which has come in includes fifty thousand sets of clothing for their prisoners of war.

And now what about all this other stuff which I've mentioned, hose pipes, towing targets, kapok floats, anti-gas capes, and goodness knows what? What can be made out of these? At one end of the scale, you have sewing thread from a soldier's hussif and at the other end twelve inch manilla ropes from the navy. Can you think of anything which could be made from them? One of the curious items which came in one day was ten tons of "boom defence tube" containing kapok. But when the stuff arrived it was all mixed up with nets and massive angle irons, and nobody had machinery for breaking it down. That was only one of the little problems which the disposal department has had to solve. It was solved by an entertaining firm of linoleum makers who had done other jobs for the ministry such as removing the oil from the cotton fabric of such things as anti-gas capes, so that the fabric could be used for other purposes and the oil used in the process of manufacturing insecticide.

Well, let me give you a few examples of what it's done with some of these salvaged items of textile stuff.

From old hose pipes we make overboots for men loading tankers so that they won't make sparks with their feet. The flax of the hose pipes is spark proof. We also make snow shoes from them. And industrial mittens for women who are handling sheets of steel with sharp edges. The calico from R.A.F. towing targets is made into rainwater catching sheets for lifeboats and the netting from the end of the target is made into vegetable bags for the navy and for ice bags. The cotton fabric of anti-gas capes is de-oiled and used for superfine wiping rags. Various kinds of cotton fabric, useless for making up goes back to the services as wiping rag. Three thousand tons of wiping rags a year is supplied by the disposal department. It's used for wiping aircraft engines and machinery of all kinds. Oily rags are de-oiled and cleaned until they fall to pieces and then they the pulped for paper.

Those thick manilla ropes I've told you about have the worn outer fibres removed and the inner fibres are respun into new ropes. The worn fibres go to the paper manufacturers for a special kind of paper used in plastics.

Old tentage is used for making a new type of kit bag for the A.T.S. and the W.A.A.F's. The old type is awkward for a girl to handle. It's too heavy to sling on to her shoulder and too long to carry by the string so many of the girls have got the habit of dragging them along the ground. The new type is shaped like a sports bag with two canvas covered rope handles. It opens lengthwise and is fastened by press studs.

What would you do with an old chart or a blue print? Well, we make handkerchiefs out of the linen—and very fine ones they are too.

Girls in the forces like to carry a shoulder bag when they're out walking. These are now being made from the sleeves of firemen's coats, with a zip fastener from a bomber pilot's harness.

Among the weird things which come in are glider tow ropes. They have a telephone line down the middle of the rope. Some of these are being issued for the ropes of boxing rings for the United States Army. And our N.A.A.F.I. has asked for some to use for ropes in playing tug-of-war.

Here and there, in that amazing room in London, you come across the old pre-war dress uniform of some famous regiment of the British army. They've been thrown in as salvage. Picturesque uniforms of the Horse Guards, Royal Fusiliers—I even saw an old embroidered coat of a Beefeater there. And there were old, plumed shakes of the Cemaron Highlanders and the flat topped helmets of Lancers. Some of these go back to the beginning of the century. Even a private's uniform of 1875 has come in with the salvage. These old uniforms—there are not many of them—are going to be disposed of to the film trade for costumes, and what are left may be made into epaulets and regimental badges.

But the strangest item of all, which catches your eye when you go in, is what looks like a Frankenstein monster. It's an enormous padded suit, a sample of the suits supplied to the men who train the watch dogs, the bull-mastiffs, which guard our airdromes. These suits have been made from canvas salvaged from blitzed London and padded with asbestos wool from gas respirators. That's a queer metaphorphosis for you

Some day, in their turn, these Frankenstein monster suits will come in for disposal. What other use could these be put to? The disposal department will have the problem to solce. Well what would you use them for? Or what could you make out of them? I'll leave you to think that one out

Insurance Plan For Hospital Care Is Proposed

Toronto, Dec. 22 — (CP) — The Globe and Mail in a newspage story today reported a proposal to assess every Ontario citizen over the age of 17 a uniform monthly sum to cover reduced public ward and diagnostic costs in hospital should the provincial government adopt a hospital insurance plan under consideration. The plan would provide free treatment for children, it was stated.

Dr. R. P. Vivian, Ontario Health Minister, the Globe and Mail said, favors a hospital insurance plan as a means of bringing public ward care within reach of all. The paper said the manner in which collection of the insurance assessment is to be made "poses a formidable problem in itself."

Complete cost of the proposal—"which is likely to be a considerable sum in the aggregate but most reasonable for the individual pocketbook"—will be known by Feb. 1, it was reported. This information will be deduced from a provincial survey now under way.

Queen Expresses Gratitude For Care of Children

Personal expression of gratitude for the help and kindness shown to English evacuee children, who came to Canada following the start of the London blitz has been received from Queen Elizabeth by Mr. and Mrs. Newton Thompson, 50 Bridge Street West. Since September 1941, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have been hosts to Maureen J. Camp, 15, of Moreton, Essex county, England.

Coming to Canada with her sister and a group of other English evacuee children, the Camp girl was given a home for the duration by Mr. and Mrs. Thompson. She attends Belleville collegiate and is in grade X. Here sister is with Mr. and Mrs. James Cathcart, Colborne Street. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, as well as Miss Camp, receive letters from the girl's parents regularly.

"Since the early days of the war, you have opened your doors to strangers and offered to share your home with them," read the message received from the Queen. "In the kindness of your heart you have accepted them as members of your own family, and I know that to this unselfish task you and all your household have made many great sacrifices.

"For all this goodwill towards the children of Great Britain, I send you my warmest and most grateful thanks." —Elizabeth R.

F.D.R. Approved Canol Oil Project

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today that he approved the United States army's Canol oil development in northwest Canada at a time when it appeared there might be great military action in the Alaskan and Aleutian area.

He added that at the time he would have approved anything to get a new source of oil in that part of the world as a war measure.

His comment was made at a press conference in response to a question whether he had known of the $130,000,000 cost of the project when he approved it. The President said he thought he knew at the time what the cost would be.

Two democratic members of the Senate's Truman Committee defended the development, which has been the centre of considerable controversy in official circles in Washington.

Senators Tom Connally- (dem., Texas) and Carol Hatch (dem., N. M.) put in plugs for Lt.-Gen. Brehon Somervell, army champion of the oil development, who explained the undertaking for the committee yesterday in detail.

GERMANS SPRING ATTACK ON 400-MILE FRONT

Massed Russian Artillery Blasts Tank Offensive

Front Reports Say Russians Holding Firm in All Areas Under Attack

BREACH VITEBSK LINE

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Dec. 23 — (AP) — Massed Russian heavy artillery and big mobile field guns blazed away today against a gigantic new German tank offensive, described as one of the war's heaviest armored assaults.

The large-scale enemy attack was sprung yesterday on a 400-mile front stretching from White Russia to the Dnieper Bend, but front reports said Red Army forces were holding firm on all sectors and that concentrated artillery fire had destroyed at least 148 of the attacking tanks during the day.

11th Hour Effort

The new enemy counter-attack came as an 11th hour effort as Russian pressure increased on the Nazi Vitebsk-Polotsk defence wall further north where Gen. Ivan Bagramian's 1st Baltic Army was said to be driving steadily ahead.

The Germans massed their heaviest assaults in the Korosten sector of the Kiev Bulge, where despite the fury of the Nazi onslaught, troops of Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's 1st Ukraine Army held firm and actually improved their positions, dispatches said.

In the drive toward the Latvian border Bagramian's veterans closed in on Gorodok, a lake town on the Nevel-Vitebsk railway and an important strongpoint in Vitebsk's northern defences.

The Russians succeeded in bringing their big guns within range of Vitebsk, less than 15 miles away. Red Army columns fanned westward to within 20 miles of Polotsk, another key point in the German Baltic defence system.

Ski Troops Active

Soviet ski troops played an important part in the Red Army's drive on Vitebsk, the war bulletin said, swinging in behind enemy lines and chopping defending units to pieces.

A Moscow radio commentator heard in London said the main defence line before Vitebsk — probably the most strongly-fortified German base on the entire front—had been cracked by Bagramian's army and that tanks and guns were pouring through the breach "like an avalanche."

33 CANADIANS DECORATED FOR VALOR IN ITALY

Three D.S.O.'s, Eight M.M.'s. Four D.C.M.'s and 18 Military Medals Awarded

NO CITATIONS

Ottawa, Dec. 23—(CP)— Decorations for valor and outstanding service in the field won by Canadian soldiers in Sicily and Italy passed the 100-mark today with announcement of awards to 33 officers and other ranks.

Added to two previous lists issued since the start of the campaign in Sicily last July, the latest awards raise the total to 101—16 Distinguished Service Orders, 28 Military Crosses, nine Distinguished Conduct Medals and 48 Military Medals.

Today's list included three Distinguished Service Orders, eight Military Medals, four Distinguished Conduct Medals and 18 Military Medals.

Citations stating the reasons for the latest awards were not issued. They have not yet been reported to defence headquarters from overseas but biographies of the men honored show they are well scattered among the units serving in Italy with the 1st division.

Evenly Divided

Five go to members of the Loyal Edmonton Regiment, eight to the Royal Canadian Regiment, two to the West Nova Scotia Regiment, two to the Royal 22nd Regiment of Quebec, one to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, two to the Seaforth Highlanders of Vancouver, two to the Carleton and York Regiment, three to the artillery one to the engineers, two to men apparently serving on headquarters staffs, two to chaplains, and three to men whose units are not indicated.

Winners of the D. S. O. are Lt.-Col. H. McI. Hague of Montreal, Royal Canadian Artillery; to Maj. W. G. Bury of Edmonton posthumously, and to Maj. A. S. Donald, also of Edmonton.

Four infantrymen won the D. C. M.—Sgt. L. R. Drapeau, Montreal, Royal 22nd; Sgt. W. J. R. McKnight, Bowmanville, Ont., Hastings and Prince Edward; Cpl. A. G. Cheshire, Ashmont, Alta., and Pte. John Low. Rochfort, Bridge, Alta., both of the Loyal Edmontons.

Maj. Bury, the one posthumous recipient of a decoration, was killed in action July 28 while serving with his unit. The Canadians were then still in Sicily.

Two chaplains awarded the Military Cross were honorary Capts. Russell Oliver Wilkes of Rainy River, Ont., protestant, and Joseph Lawrence Wilhelm of Walkerton, Ont., Roman Catholic.

Father Wilhelm, 34, a native of Walkerton, was a priest in Hamilton before his enlistment and his activity with the Canadian troops on the Italian front has been mentioned in press dispatches.

Britons Not Worrying Much Over Nazi Campaign on Rocket Bombs

By GLADWIN HILL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 23 —(AP)— The average person in Britain isn't much concerned about the possibility of a German rocket bomb crashing down on him.

The German propaganda campaign on the rocket bombs—which is probably intended to console the Germans as much as it is to worry the Allies—hasn't succeeded in supplanting as prime topics of public rumination:—

1. When is the war going to be over?
2. The shortage of Christmas toys.
3. Where can one buy a bottle of whisky?

The closest that opinion on the possibility of rocket attack on Britain can be pin-pointed in this: Although there is not even enough interest to engender much wagering, the curbstone odds are even money that no rocket shell lands inside the London area.

At no time has any great accuracy been attained by ordinary guns across the Channel and the man in the street figures that rocket projectiles fired from an open chute like a Fourth of July rocket, have even less chance of hitting Piccadilly Circus on the nose.

A few who went through the blitz here and who are pessimistically confident that anything might happen aren't fazed. They just display a "we can take" attitude.

When the average person is asked about his feelings on the rocket the question leads, along with all others, into the beginning of a conversational cul-de-sac — "you don't know where I can get a turkey for Christmas or a bottle of whisky, do you?"

3-DAY STREET BATTLE FOUGHT INSIDE ORTONA

Tiny Adriatic Port Is Turned Into Miniature Stalingrad As Fight Rages

5TH ARMY ADVANCES

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press War Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 23 — (AP)—Canadian tanks and infantry fought bitterly in the streets of Ortona for the third straight day with German forces, who were turning the tiny Adriatic port into a miniature Stalingrad, an Allied headquarters announcement said today.

On the 5th Army front to the west, American troops captured snow-covered 3,000-foot Mt. Cavallo, 3½ miles northwest of Venafro and near Viticuso, and French forces advanced in a mountain pass where a struggle had raged for several days.

Other American infantry attacking in the rain seized a hill near Monna Casale.

The heaviest fighting surged back and forth in Ortona.

The German 10th Army threw new parachute troops, motorized infantry, into the battle in a desperate effort to retain its hold on this anchor to the present line across Italy. Ortona guards the main road leading north to Pescara, and its capture would cut the German main supply line to troops inland as well as along the coast.

Canadian tanks and infantry advanced from house to house, and everywhere were met by fierce opposition.

Inland, troops of the 8th Army continued to push north of the Ortona-Orsogna road toward the next lateral highway six miles away, coming up against the fortified village of Ariella, eight miles inland from Ortona. Here another house-to-house battle appeared in prospect.

Swarming up the slopes of Mt. Cavallo in a drenching rain, Americans now overlooked the village of Viticuso, eight miles east and a little north of Cassino, and placed it under shell and mortar fire. The Germans tried to recapture the mountain, but failed.

The systematic cleanup of pillboxes around San Vittore, a heavily fortified village six miles southeast of Cassino, continued, but there was no indication that a full-scale attack had yet been launched on this strong position guarding the road to Rome.

Although air activity in Western Italy was greatly reduced by the weather, fighters patrolled the Adriatic and shot up a schooner and radio station near Zara on the Yugoslav coast and bombers supported the attack near Orsogna.

British and United States fighter-bombers destroyed three trains near Tortoreto and Civitanova along the Adriatic.

Two Allied planes were lost.

War Production Now At Its Peak Increased By $753,000,000 in '43

Ottawa, Dec. 23—(CP)—Canada's War Production, reported by Munitions Minister Howe to now be at its peak, increased by $753,000,000 during 1943, it was revealed today by preliminary figures released by the munitions department.

Based on actual figures for the first 10 months of the year and an estimate of November and December, production for 1943 is placed at $2,776,000,000, compared with $2,023,000,000 in 1942. In 1941, production, was $805,000,000 and from the start of the war to the end of 1940 it totalled $307,000,000.

The 1943 production figures are further augmented by expenditure of $217,000,000 on defence construction and capital assistance, apart from the wartime housing program, of $186,000,000—making a grand total for the year of $3,179,000,000 against $2,452,000,000 in 1942.

Indication that wartime industrial expansion tapered off in 1943 is found in a slight reduction—$2,000,000—in defence construction and to a greater extent in the expenditures on capital assistance, which were $24,000,000 below last year.

Largest Increases

Largest increases were reported in shipbuilding, instruments and communication equipment and small arms ammunitions, output of all of which was almost doubled during the year. In only one item listed in a breakdown was there a reduction—gun ammunition, including bombs. Value of the 1943 output was placed at $195,000,000, $23,000,000 below last year.

The figures compiled by the department report war production since the outbreak of war as follows:- (In millions of dollars)

New Super-Bomber For Allies Soon In Full Production

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)— Development of a new super-bomber was disclosed today by Rep. John Sparkman (Dem, Ala.), Chairman of a House of Representatives Military Aviation Sub-Committee, on his return from a 10,000-mile inspection tour of aviation plants and army air force installations in the United States.

Other than that it will "surprise and hurt" the enemy and soon will be in large scale production, Sparkman said he could disclose no details of the new bombers because the United States army itself has not yet made any announcement about it. It probably will be used extensively in the Pacific theatre, he said, because of its long flying range.

Six Sub-Chasers Reach East Port

Ottawa, Dec. 23 — (CP) — Six new Fairmile sub-chasers, built at Georgian Bay, Sarnia and Toronto, have arrived safely at an east Canadian port to take up winter duties after a 2,000-mile voyage from the lake country, naval headquarters announced today.

The trim, speedy ships, ordered to the east coast to escape the winter freeze-up, completed their journey without incident, although they bucked a snowstorm in the latter stages. They sailed through the Welland, Cornwall and Lachine locks and down the St. Lawrence, with brief stops en route at Gaspe and Charlottetown.

The new ships, valued at close to $250,000 each, are faster and more heavily armed than any of their predecessors. Powered by twin Sterling Admiral engines, they are capable of high speed and manoeuverability, and pack a healthy consignment of depth-charges and quick-firing guns.

Gen. MacArthur Not Expected In Washington

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 23—(AP)—A spokesman said today "there is no foundation whatsoever for the statement that General MacArthur expects to go to Washington in the near future for conferences."

The spokesman referred to reports published recently in the Indianapolis, Ind., Star that the General had made tentative plans to go to Washington in March. The story linked the reports with "organizational plans of the 'MacArthur for President' faction (of the republican party) headed by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.)."

JAPANESE LOSE 16 PLANES RAIDING ARAWE BEACHHEAD

Allied Bombers Sink Merchant Ship and Damage Jap Destroyer

AIRDROMES POUNDED

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 23—(AP)—The Japanese have lost 16 more planes in their heaviest attacks so far on advancing United States forces at Arawe, New Britain.

Field commanders of troops which Allied headquarters said today were extending and consolidating positions past the beachhead seized Dec. 15 reported nearly 100 enemy dive bombers and fighters in three attacks Tuesday caused only slight damage.

Fighters downed 12 dive bombers and four fighters, and probably destroyed another dive bomber and two fighters, the communique said.

It was the first return in force by Japanese aircraft since the early days of the United States 6th Army invasion.

The United States 5th Air Force returned the Japanese Arawe visit with another pounding of the enemy's Cape Gloucester airdrome and supply base on New Britain 60 miles northeast of Arawe. Nearly 100 heavy and medium bombers, dive bombers and fighter planes dropped 205 tons of explosives and strafed the area, starting many fires and damaging two coastal vessels.

The Australians on Huon peninsula pushed the Japanese farther north of the Masawang River, occupying Hubika, 15 miles northwest of the Allied coastal base of Finschhafen.

Catalina bombers sank a 6,000-ton enemy merchant ship and scored hits on another off Kavieng, New Ireland. A heavy bomber damaged a Japanese destroyer in that area.

United States destroyers demolished buildings and set fires in the Tinputs Harbor area on the northeast coast of Bougainville Island, in the Solomons, in the first announced surface action against this supply base located in supposedly enemy - controlled waters.

BROADCAST SERVICE

Milton, Ont., Dec. 23 — (CP) — Grace Anglican Church, Milton, a centre of worship for nearly 100 years, is having its Christmas morning service broadcast over the CBC national network. Although the mission of Grace Parish started in 1852, the present church was not erected until 1895, when the corner-stone was laid by Lord Aberdeen, then governor-general.

TITO DEPRIVES PETER'S REGIME 'OF ALL RIGHTS'

Young King Forbidden To Return Home Until Yugoslavia Entirely Liberated

ACCUSATIONS MADE

London, Dec. 23—(CP)—Denouncing the "hostile attitude" and acts of King Peter's Yugoslav government in Cairo, Marshal Josip Broz (Tito's) council of liberation has ordered Peter's regime deprived "of all its rights" and has "forbidden" the young King to return home until after Yugoslavia is entirely liberated.

The strongly-worded declaration came as the Allies were giving military aid to Tito in his war against the Germans and attempting to settle differences between the two Yugoslav factions.

After Yugoslavia is freed, "the problem of the King as well as the question of the monarchy can be decided," declared Tito's council, recently established within the strategic Balkan nation.

Three Charges Made

The council's statement, broadcast by the free Yugoslav radio, levelled three accusations against Peter's government sitting in Cairo:-

Of "maintaining a hostile attitude toward the struggle for liberation in which the Yugoslav people have been heavily engaged";

Of abusing the hospitality of our Allies by spreading lies and slanders about the struggle of the Yugoslav army of liberation";

Of organizing, through 'War Minister Gen. Draja Mihailovic, civil strife in Yugoslavia and through him and his subordinates concluding a lasting agreement" with the Germans and their satellites.

Voids All Treaties

It therefore declared "null and void all international treaties and obligations" undertaken by Peter's government, and asserted "the so-called Yugoslav government abroad is deprived of all rights of a legal government, and also of the rights of representing the peoples of Yugoslavia in foreign towns."

This also concerns "all other governments which may in the future be formed abroad against the will of the Yugoslav peoples," the statement added.

The council charged that Peter had "showed full confidence" in the exiled government and Mihailovic, and had "decorated traitors and criminals."

The broadcast said the manifesto was agreed upon by the council

Canadians Suffer Heavy Casualties In Two-Weeks' Campaign in Italy

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Dec. 23 (CP Cable)—The Canadian 1st Division that has been growing gradually battle-wise through some five years of war achieved military maturity during the two-week campaign for the Moro river and Ortona—but in successfully fighting through what will probably be ranked as one of the most important Italian engagements paid with fairly heavy casualties.

Hurled against crack German divisions when the British 8th Army wished to splinter the German winter line with a drive across the Moro river, the 1st division bumped into the toughest fighting of its history. It carried through magnificently, smashing across the Moro and continuing its drive until it now occupies parts of Ortona, eastern anchor of the enemy defence line in the peninsula.

Resistance was fanatical, though, and could have resulted only in comparatively high casualties. Battles that were fought through muddy hills and gullies from the shallow Moro to the smashed streets of Oronta must have taken the lives of many Canadian soldiers.

As the fighting swirled through the tortuous terrain of eastern Italy it broke up into isolated engagements and often turned out to be a tedious, dangerous task whereby enemy snipers and machine-gunners had to be routed out one by one.

It was strictly a job for the bayonet-wielding infantrymen, and close fighting like that fattens casualty lists.

Defended House to House

Too, latest reports said the Germans defended Ortona house by house, and street fighting would take its toll of the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and the Loyal Edmonton Regiment that now are doing the mopping up there.

However, until the Canadians took on the job of chopping up the Germans' Adriatic defences Dec. 8 casualties were quite light. Figures covering the period from the landing at Reggio Calabria Sept. 3 to Nov. 23 showed 238 dead, 811 wounded and 45 missing.

But whatever the cost, the Canadians can look back on a campaign that will rank with the battles for the Sangro and Volturno river and the grim fight by the Allied 5th Army for the passes leading to Cassino and Rome. Too, Canadian soldiers cut to pieces one of Hitler's crack divisions, the 90th division, and badly mauled the elite German 1st parachute division.

Wounded in Italy are assured the best of care. At least one general hospital is on the mainland while others are in Sicily where casualties may be evacuated quickly by air. The 8th Army medical services, which also help Canadian wounded, are considered in the field a model of efficiency.

Powerful Aerial Drive Thunders At Non-Stop Pace

U.S. Bombers Knock Down 38 German Fighters in Wide Daylight Sweep

INSTALLATIONS HIT

By E. B. SULLIVAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 23 — (AP)—British and American bomber forces have been thrown into attacks against the "rocket gun coast" of France, it was disclosed today, with the R.A.F.'s heavy raider fleets for the first time diverted from such targets as Berlin for smashes at targets in Northern France.

An R.A.F. blow at the French coast last night made it evident that targets of great importance had been spotted and marked for destruction in Northern France and along the coast. Today a big force of high-flying bombers crossed the British southeast coast apparently bound for daylight blows at the same targets.

The Pas de Calais area, the part of the French coast nearest England, has been battered incessantly since Monday and the daylight forces evidently were stretching the offensive into a four-day affair.

The R.A.F.'s armadas hit targets in Western Germany last night, as well as in northern France, and suffered no loss.

The Air Ministry did not identify the objectives of the night raiders that lashed out after a 3-day hammering of the fortification-studded French coast and a powerful United States heavy bomber blow by daylight yesterday into northwest Germany.

Mines also were laid in enemy waters.

All this week Allied planes have been hammering Nazi installations in Northern France in practically day-long assaults, but apparently this was the first time the R. A. F's heavy bombers had turned from great Nazi targets such as Berlin to join in this drive.

Some quarters in London believe the boasted German rocket gun emplacements in France are the objective of these concentrated raids.

The great forays by day and night yesterday raised to perhaps 4,000 or more planes the attacking force that has battered Nazi targets in the last three days.

38 Nazi Planes Downed.

The United States heavy bombers — striking an undisclosed location in Northwest Germany—shot down 38 German fighters while losing 21 heavy bombers and four

Chinese Pursue Fleeing Japs Toward Sungtze

Chungking, Dec. 23 — (AP) — Chinese troops, making a further comeback after having cleared the Japanese from half the rice growing region in the Tungting Lake area, pursued fleeing enemy troops and reached the vicinity of Sungtze, a Yangtze port mid-way between Shasi and Ichang, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

The Chinese also reached the neighborhood of Kungan, a Japanese base 30 miles southwest of Shasi.

American heavy bombers based in China conducted a "highly successful" raid into Thailand on Dec. 21, bombing the railroad yards at Chienggrai south of the Burma border and starting many large fires, Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

Medium bombers attacked Hwajung, Japanese base in the Tungting Lake area, while American fighters, supporting Chinese troops on the Salween river front, shot up Japanese landing strips in northern Burma.

All participating aircraft returned safely, the communique reported.

Eighteen Japanese bombers escorted by 40 Zeros struck at a main American base yesterday, causing some damage to planes on the ground and to field installations, but the attackers were given hard counter-punches.

American fighters destroyed 11 Zeros and four bombers, probably knocked out 13 Zeros and three bombers, and damaged 11 Zeros and three bombers.

American losses were one fighter missing, one transport and one fighter, destroyed on the ground and five fighters damaged.

Hull Hotel Burns, Loss Is $200,000

Hull, Que., Dec. 23 — (CP)—Fire which early today destroyed the Central Hotel, 30-room hotel on Hull's main street, caused a loss estimated at $200,000. Fire Chief Emile Bond told The Canadian Press he believed all occupants of the hotel had been accounted for.

Two men, M. Pichette, night clerk at the hotel, and Alex Gray, formerly of Toronto, were taken to the hospital but their condition was not considered serious. Loss of the hotel records in the fire and injuries suffered by Pichette made a definite check difficult but it was believed there were about 35 persons in the hotel when the fire broke out.

Five occupants of rooms on the third floor were rescued by firemen. The fire was not brought under control for several hours and adjoining barber shops and a shoe store were damaged.

A sub-zero temperature hampered firemen and when the fire had been stopped a thick coating of ice over the ruins and great masses of steam made immediate search of the ruins impossible.

One of four which matured on an eight-year-old tree, the lemon was grown by Mr. William Philp, 122 Yeomans Street.

Kinsmen to Play Santa Claus Role

Santa Claus in all his glory will visit and gladden the hearts of the 24 wards of the Children's Aid Society on Christmas Eve through the efforts of the service club work of the Belleville Kinsmen Club. Abandoning their customary practice of providing a Christmas party for underprivileged children at a local hotel, the Kinsmen voted to provide real Yuletide cheer for the children wards of the C.A.S.

Kin Mayor Harry Rollins will assume the role of Santa Claus to be assisted by the Kinsmen as a whole. Suitable and practical gifts have been provided, while other goodies for children such as candies, fruit and nuts will also be included in the individual gifts. The children will be gathered at the C.A.S. home in Sidney Township by Inspector T. D. Ruston, where the Kinsmen Santa Claus will make his triumphant entrance with the usual pomp before the awe-stricken children.

First Floor of Crystal Hotel Almost Completely Gutted by Fire

35-Guests Escape Safely After Being Aroused by Proprietor

STUBBORN BLAZE

Thirty-five sleeping guests were roused out of their beds and forced out into winter weather bordering on 15 degrees below zero at the Crystal Hotel early this morning when fire broke out in the basement of the building and almost completely gutted parts of the first floor before being brought under control by the Belleville Fire Department

Discovered by the proprietor of the hotel, Mr. Charles Treverton at 4:10 when his attention was drawn by the presence of smoke, the fire quickly spread despite efforts to control it with a portable extinguisher. When the fire department arrived 15 minutes later it took six lines of hose to keep the blaze from getting completely out of control.

Lucky to Save Building

"We were indeed lucky in saving the building at all," stated Fire Chief William Lynch at nine-thirty this morning after several of the hose lines had been cut off "Just a few minutes more and the fire would have been completely out of control."

After turning in the alarm at the fire hall Mr. Treverton concentrated his attention to rousing the hotel guests from their sleep and getting them to safety. Despite smoke-filled corridors the guests groped their way to safety down the main stairway, while those occupying rooms at the rear of the hotel made their getaway down the fire escape.

"Every room in the hotel was occupied," stated Mr. Treverton as he talked briefly with the Ontario Intelligencer. "But every guest was able to get safely out."

Sheltered in Restaurant

For the most part hotel guests crowded their way into a restaurant across the street where they warmed themselves with steaming cups of black coffee. Others dressed completely and watched firemen as they fought the blaze handicapped by the below-zero temperature. A few guests uneasy about their personal belongings carried them down the fire escape and they were seen piled in the open yard at the rear of the hotel.

After four hours of fighting the flames which got into stringers and first floor flooring, heavy clouds of steam were still rolling from the open windows and doors of the building giving rise to the belief that the blaze was still burning out of control. Water frozen by the frigid temperature clung to firemen's clothing in the form of heavy icicles.

Smoke Damages Store

Damage from the blaze extended outside the hotel building with Diamond's haberdashery store next door being filled with smoke and the furnace fire in the income tax office building two doors south being extinguished, by the water which soaked through into the basement. The majority of the income tax office staff were permitted to go home till the noon hour, while in the meantime electric heaters were seen being taken into the building to help fill the emergency. Fortunately the furnace at Diamond's store was not in the basement of the building.

Tons of water had to be poured into the building to check the blaze which ate into the stringers and flooring above the basement. What portion of this did not seep through to the basement lay inches deep on the hotel lobby floor and flowed out onto the sidewalk and street where it instantly froze hampering the movements of firemen.

No Estimate of Loss

By eleven o'clock all danger of further spread of the fire had passed and firemen began picking up their hose from the blocked-off Front Street which had been littered with fire-fighting equipment.

No estimate of the damage caused by the fire or because of the water necessary to control the blaze was made either by the owner Mr. Treverton or by Fire Chief William Lynch, but it undoubtedly will run into several thousands of dollars. Only smoke damage resulted in sleeping rooms above the first floor, it was stated.

Travelling Art Exhibition On Display at 'Y'

Illustrating another phrase of the many lines of service which the Y.M.C.A. is affording for the interest and comfort of members of the armed forces, both on the home and fighting fronts, the lobby and reading rooms of the Belleville "Y" this week have taken on the aspect of an imposing art gallery.

Appreciating the fact that all service force members are not interested in the conventional entertainment offered and that many are drawn by the more serious side of life, the Y.M.C.A. War Services is exhibiting a series of art etchings representative of many types of Canadian rural and urban life. The etchings are by outstanding Canadian artists, the series being shown across Canada from Vancouver to Newfoundland at "Y" centres and at service training centres. It is termed the Y.M.C.A. travelling art exhibition and is shown with the co-operation of the National Gallery of Canada and is selected by the Chartered Art Societies of Canada.

"It was at first estimated that only approximately 10 per cent. of the servicemen would evince interest in the exhibition," stated Ron Hupfield, local "Y" War Services representative, "but I have been surprised at the interest shown by district airmen. A great many of the boys take great interest in the exhibition and view each etching closely admiring its fine qualities."

Another object of the exhibition is to acquaint servicemen from other countries of the fact that there is real art talent in Canada, according to Mr. Hupfield.

Etchings of rural scenery comprise a great portion of the 42 pictures included in the exhibit. These range from the conventional winter scene emphasizing the contrast of snow against the evergreen background, to fishing and water scenes of the Maritime provinces. The series will remain in Belleville only for this week when it will be sent on to the R.A.F. station at Picton.

J. Trudeau Entertains At Annual Dinner

Acting as host to his staff of employees from the two city branches of the Trudeau Motor Sales Company, the representatives and employees of the Picton, Tweed and Stirling branches, and representatives of the Chrysler Corporation from Toronto, Mr. Jack Trudeau entertained at a Christmas dinner which was held in the Station St., location on Wednesday night. The occasion was an annual event at which time Mr. Trudeau is able to extend this personal thanks to each individual for his and her co-operation during the past year.

Mr. Trudeau himself acted as chairman and introduced the visiting members of the Chrysler Corporation and gave short biographical introductions of each member of the Trudeau Company. The visitors from Toronto were: Messrs. P. J. Conway, Regional Sales Manager, Stan Thomas, Regional Service Manager, Jim Cherry, Dealer Management Service, Hal Kemp District Service Manager, and Fred McClerkin, District Service Manager, eastern division.

Following the introductions, the staff presented Mr. Trudeau with a silver hostess dish with a few appropriate remarks, and a banner for efficient service was presented to the local firm by Mr. McClerkin

The banner is given by the Chrysler Corporation for 100 per cent efficiency service and is presented for compliance with certain standards, maintenance of adequate stock of parts, shop equipment, efficiency of staff, cleanliness of shop and business management. The banner is only given after a thorough study of the dealer's claim for recognition, and the banner presented to the Trudeau Motors is the only one between Toronto and Montreal.

During the year Mr. Trudeau has given over four months of his time to active participation in the 4th and 5th Victory Loan Campaigns which took him away from his own business during this time. He passed on his appreciation to his staff for their efficient manner of carrying on in his absence. Presentations were made to several men on the staff who came through the year without becoming involved in a single accident This is in furtherance of a policy inaugurated over two years ago by Mr. Trudeau to aid in the prevention of accidents. A gift of cosmetics was presented to each of the three young ladies present by Mr. Trudeau in addition to the customary bonus for the year's work. Following the dinner Mr. J. B. Boyce joined the party and spoke a few words to the guests in accordance with the good fellowship existing between himself and Mr. Trudeau at their respective annual gatherings of staffs.

DEALERS FOUND GUILTY

Toronto, Dec. 23 — (CP) — Three Toronto poultry dealers were fined $35 and costs each yesterday on charges of operating trucks more than 35 miles from Toronto. Isadore Urovitz, the third trucker charged, pleaded not guilty but was convicted.

If You Drink— Then Don't Drive

'Another year has rolled around and we have the festive season with us once again. Christmas is no time to be spent in jail, nor do the members of the police department relish the prospects of having to arrest citizens at Christmastime", assured Chief Probert today as he issued a warning regarding driving motor vehicles while celebrating too freely of the holiday with intoxicants.

"If you find drinking necessary or the fact one has imbibed too freely of liquor or any form of intoxicants as far as that goes, then kindly DON'T drive your motor car.. With snow-covered streets cars skid rather easily even when normal drivers are in charge and all indications point to hazardous driving conditions this holiday season. So again the police department urges—if you drink don't drive and if you have to drive—well then—don't drink. After all we all want to have a Merry Christmas and live through to enjoy a Happy New Year", explained Chief Probert.

Canada Continues Growth As Nation Throughout Year

Dominion's Status Enhanced as Canadians Play Major Roles in World Fields of War, Commerce and Diplomacy

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa Dec. 23. (CP)—Canada's place among the United Nations has been pointed up during 1943 developments in the fields of war, commerce and diplomacy.

Here are some of the year's highlights in the Dominion's growth as a nation:—

1.—Canada's armed forces in action.

2.—Provision of $1,000,000,000 in "mutual aid" to nations lacking enough Canadian dollars to fill their needs for Canadian munitions and foodstuffs; with mutual aid agreements completed with several nations and more agreements pending.

3.—Increase in Canada's diplomatic mission abroad and establishment of additional foreign missions here; elevation of the Canadian legations in the United States, the Soviet Union, China and Brazil to embassy status and similar action by those countries.

4.—Holding at Quebec last August of one of the Churchill Roosevelt war conferences.

5.—Establishment of a new decoration —the Canada Medal —with which to honor Britons and foreigners, as well as Canadians.

Widespread Activity.

Canadian participation in the Sicily and Italy campaigns, in the joint occupation with United States forces of Kiska in the Aleutians, in the vast air bombardment of Hitler's Europe, and in the never-ending struggle against the U-boat brought pride to Canadians during 1943— and deep appreciation from the people of the United Nations.

As for supplies sent to the war fronts, Munitions Minister Howe said in a recent Montreal speech:

"The population of these countries (receiving mutual aid) will long remember that Canada came to their rescue at a time when help was sorely needed. Therefore, I say that mutual aid is a sound investment in Canada's future markets abroad".

While students of international law and practice in Ottawa do not regard the elevation of Hon. Leighton McCarthy, Canadian minister to Washington ,to the rank of ambassador as having any great constitutional significance ,they do say it has had a happy reaction among the American people.

Americans have clung to the idea Canada is still a colony, said officials here. The fact that each South American country had an ambassador in Washington while Canada was represented by a minister tended to bolster the view the Dominion was not fully independent. Now that Canada has an ambassador, it was said, Americans may come to regard this country as a nation.

Matter of Promotion.

In regard to the elevation of the four Canadian legations to embassy status one authority said it required no more authority to appoint an ambassador than to appoint a minister. The fact that Prime Minister Mackenzie King's government changed the status of the ministers without consulting parliament was an indication he regarded the change as a simple promotion in the diplomatic service.

In February, 1942, there were six foreign diplomatic missions in Ottawa following closing of the Japanese legation. Now there are 14 —and this will be increased to 15 when the new Turkish minister arrives from Washington. Most of the additions came in 1942, but the Turkish legation was added this year.

Canada's missions to Moscow and Chile date from Jan. 1, 1943. Canada also has opened a consulate-general in New York.

It is believed in some quarters here that the action taken by the government at the suggestion of a House committee in creating a decoration of its own will add to Canada's prestige. No medals have yet been awarded. Some awards are expected to be made in the King's New Year's Honors list.

WOMAN AND PROGENY BORN AT SAME HOUR

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 23.—(CP) —Three generation of the Williams family, of Sydney—the 48-year-old mother, her two daughters, and a granddaughter—were all born at the same hour—9.30 p.m.

Mrs. Winifred Florence Williams was born in 1895. Her daughter, Mrs. Alma Edith Anderson was born 22 years ago, and another daughter, Irene Marie 20 years ago.

To make the sequence complete, Mrs. Anderson's baby daughter, Joan Florence, was born at South Sydney Women's Hospital at 9.30 p.m. recently.

"They told me at South Sydney Hospital that I nearly died at 9.30 p.m. I must have pulled through to maintain the family record" said Mrs. Anderson, whose husband, L-Cpl. John Allen Anderson is with the Australian Imperial Force.

CLANS' REACTION FEARED BY PIPER

London, (CP)— Some wag in London's Cricklewood district is in for a sound beating if Pipe-Major Jock McCall ever gets his hands on him.

He's really angry all because somebody told local newspapers that the fire-watching bagpiper had offered to give six lessons on the pipes to aid a benevolent fund.

"It's made me a laughing stock in piping circles", he complained, bitterly. "You couldn't learn to play the pipes in six lessons, let alone 60 lessons".

But he's more concerned about what the Scottish Clans Association will say if they hear about it.

"I'll be afraid to face them after this", he said.

PROPOSE TO REPEAL 23 SCOTTISH ACTS

London, (CP)—Four years after it was first presented, the report of the Jeffrey Committee has been published in a white paper The committee was appointed in December 1937 to review the whole field of local government and public health law in Scotland

The possibility of a new code of Scottish legislation consolidating and revising many statutes is foreshadowed in the report.

The committee's proposasl contained in an accompanying draft of a loal government (Scotland) bill involve the total repeal of 23 acts and the partial repeal or amendment of 148.

Finds Jumping Mouse That Has Been Long Believed Extinct

GIRLAMBONE, Australia, Dec. 23.—(CP)— Margaret Mankin, 15, was rummaging around in a hollow log when she saw a mouse that jumped.

When it reached Ellis Troughton, Sydney Museum mammalogist, he almost jumped himself, for no mouse like that had been found for 80 years, and it was thought to be extinct.

The museum scientists said gleefully that if a zoological society had spent thousands of pounds on an expedition and had found such a creature it would consider itself well rewarded.

One of the smallest of the marsupials, and a close relative of the kangaroo, the jumping mouse is a little bigger than an ordinary mouse, with two short front legs and two long, slender legs. It has a long tail with a brush on the end —and a tiny pouch.

Said scientist Crosbie Morrison: —"It is probably the Eastern Jerboa Pouched Mouse (Antechinomys laniger) related to the kangaroo rather than to the mouse. Living in semi-desert country, shy, nimble, and nocturnal, they are seldom seen even in country they are known to inhabit'. This species has disappeared from most of the parts where it was formerly found'.

An even more exciting find in the same region would be another little animal superficially similar, but not a marsupial—the Long-tailed Hopping Mouse (Notomys longicaudatus sturti). A specimen of this was obtained by Charles Sturt at the site of Broken Hill on his overland journey in 1845 and no other specimen has ever been recorded.

Hope need not be abandoned for the survival even of this little chap, however. In comparatively recent years there have been several noteworthy discoveries of living animals that had long been given up as extinct. Six or seven years ago Finlayson rediscovered the Plains Rat-kangaroo (Calopymnus after it had been regarded as extinct for almost a century and more recently still Brazenor, of the National Museum, rediscovered the Broad-toothed Rat in the Otway Ranges—the first specimen seen for fifty years.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By ALLAN NICKELSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Dec. 23. (CP)— A main factor in successful aerial gunnery —and this from a veteran Canadian sharpshooter who should know—is to fire the first shots at an enemy aircraft.

Gunnery leader of Canada's Leaside Squadron, Flt. Lt. Guy Rainville, D.F.M., revealed a few trade secrets and at the same time depreciated any suggestion that the gunner in a bomber's tail is a soft target for fighter aircraft.

"Nowadays you usually will find that if a bomber gunner fires at an attacking aircraft first, the enemy won't press his attack", said the 30-year-old. "The idea is to see him before he sees you and to use your advantage of more machine guns against an opponent who must manoeuvre his plane into positions before he can shoot".

Bombing operations have changed considerably since Guy finished his first tour of operations as a gunner in Wellington bombers with Canada's Moose Squadron more than a year ago.

"At that time practically all we had to contend with was flak and searchlights," he said. "Now there is the added hazard of a great number of night fighters and that requires better technique on the part of the gunners".

Guy's squadron recently converted from Wellingtons to the latest four-engined Lancasters, which are faster and more heavily armed. He figures the gunners' score will mount rapidly.

Cousin of Canada's one-time Davis Cup tennis player, Marcel Rainville, Guy has a two-month-old daughter he hasn't seen. She is with her mother at Port Perry, Ont. Guy's parents reside in Quebec City, his home town.

He was studying agriculture at Quebec University when he enlisted in the air force, but the land doesn't fit into his present post-war plans. He would like to stay in the air.

"There undoubtedly will be a great many interesting developments in aerial gunnery and I'd like to be close to that", he said.

A Canadian fighter unit that served on Alaskans patrols, the Wildcats will probably fly Spitfires over here. The squadron arrived by sea recently as the first R.C.A.F. unit to cross the Atlantic complete in personnel and operation training. It will be in action shortly.

Two Arabian princes sat spellbound in the control tower of an air station as Britain's big bombers received landing instructions on their return from the history-making Berlin bashing.

They were Emir Feisal and Emir Kahlid, sons of Ibn Saud ruler of Saudi Arabia. It was their first glimpse into the working of aerial warfare and they chatted far into the night with the airmen, including Canadians after the interrogation period.

The Royal Norwegian Navy

By Carl Olsson

(BBC Press Service)
London, (By Mail.)—

At daybreak one gray morning two years ago I stood on the jetty of a northern Scottish port with a naval officer and two ratings. Offshore a destroyer blinked a signal light towards the watch tower on the quayside. Between the destroyer and ourselves a small fishing boat was coming bobbing in on the dawn tide under a tiny rag of sail. Everything was hushed and still.

As she came alongside I saw a tall boy, fair haired and oddly dressed in skiing trousers, a sports jacket and a fisherman's jersey standing by the tiller. Around him were grouped five other boys of the same age and kind as himself.

He brought the little boat expertly alongside. One of the boys seized a rope we flung to him and made fast. Then the tall boy looked up at us and said in slow but good English, "Good morning. We have come". He said it gravely and courteously, as if he had been sent for.

And that was how I first met Eric. He and his five companions were just one group out of the countless similar groups of young Norwegians who have made the hazardous journey across hundreds of miles of North Sea since the fall of their country. So many of them that at one time the British naval men used to call them blithely, "The Shetland Express'.

They have come across in almost anything which could float, with no more navigational instruments than their Viking forefathers had, and following the old sea tracks of the Vikings to Britain. Chancing German E-boats and aeroplanes, chancing the perils of wind and weather which might drive them past their landfall on the northern Scottish islands to be lost for ever in the wastes of the Atlantic.

During the few days I spent at this port and after the naval intelligence officers and the security people had finished with Eric and his companions I spoke a lot with them. All of them were students and came from the same small Norwegian town which was under German occupation. And you have all read by now what that means.

There came a day when these six boys decided that they had had enough. They would get across to England and fight—somehow. One of them knew of a boat owned by a fisherman in a neighboring fjord. One by one they paid visits to this boat and casually examined it. It had a petrol motor and sails. It had room for them all and it satisfied them. "But is he a good Nordman?" asked Eric of the first boy who had found the boat and knew the fisherman. Meaning—when he found his boat was missing would the fisherman let a day or two go by before he reported it, so that they might have a better chance of getting clear away from the coast.

Then followed some weeks of careful preparation, saving rations to see them across. Stealing and washing out petrol tins to hold their drinking water. Stealing petrol from the Germans and hiding it. "How that synthetic petrol stank!" said Eric. "Like the Germans themselves. One night I was syphoning some out of the tank of a German lorry. Some got into my mouth and I vomited for hours". Then there was the business of accumulating money to pay for the boat (they knew exactly what it was worth) so that this unknown fisherman would not be the poorer by its loss. They sold personal things, borrowed from relatives pooled their savings.

At last the day came when they were ready, and the tides and hours of darkness were favorable. They had given it out that they were going to a relative in a mountain village for some days to do some skiing. And had got permission from the German authorities.

I asked Eric, "Did you tell your family, quietly, that you were going?" "Good Lord, no," said Eric. And very patiently he explained why they never tell their people that they are going. "You see", he told me, "when the Gestapo come to the door after we are missing it is better that our mothers genuinely do not know where we have gone. That is hard for us not to be able to say goodbye. But it is better for them. For the Gestapo are adept at reading faces and if they could suspect any foreknowledge or help in our escape then it would be our mothers who would be punished".

But all the same Eric's mother did know—or guess.

The night he left she came into his bedroom as he was packing, bringing some thick stockings she had been airing for his so-called mountain visit. She watched him for a minute and then went and shut the bedroom door and sat down on the bed with her arm round him. Then she said quite calmly, "Don't tell me son. But I know you are going to England." Eric laughed and said fondly, "Where is England?" She said again, "Don't tell me, son". And then "God bless you".

"She cried a bit", Eric told me, "and so did I. And that night all of us left". He skipped the rest of the story except to say that they were a week on the way. Half way across the engine gave out and they went under the small sail till they were picked up off the port by the British destroyer and shepherded in.

A few weeks ago I met Eric again, quite by chance, in another Scottish port. But a different Eric, in the uniform this time of a Lieutenant in the Royal Norwegian Navy. He had a command of his own, again, a Motor Torpedo boat this time, not a small fishing boat. But hunting the same waters across which his little company had made their escape to fight. His MTB is one of the very many small craft of the Royal Norwegian Navy which patrol the North Sea right up to the rim of the Arctic Circle and which make forays into the Norwegian fjords. "On our home ground", said Eric.

Early this year, 1943, he was on a raid which is worth a mention just to show the part these young free Norewgians are playing in striking back at the enemy in their own homeland.

A heavily loaded German convoy with supplies for German troops was steaming up the Norwegian coast north of Bergen. It was escorted by an armed trawler and had air cover.

The convoy had taken shelter for the night, because the Germans dislike sailing the coast at night owing to danger of attack from Allied bombers. The ships were anchored in an enclosed basin, with armed trawlers alongside the quay where a German battery controlled the harbor and its entrance. The sky was clouded and there were falls of snow and sleet. But the MTB's went in creeping through the darkness of the harbor entrance to within range. They got there undetected. The leading craft let go its torpedoes at a 10,000 tonner at only 300 yards range. It immediately broke in two and sank.

The second craft skirted its stern while cascades of water were pouring down on its deck from the first explosion and loosed its torpedoes at a second steamer which at once blew up. In the pandemonium and going at full speed the two MTB's got clear away from the harbor entrance unharmed.

In the interval between Eric landing in his little fishing boat and taking part in that foray a lot of things had happened to him. He had elected to join the Navy and went through much of the routine which is followed for these young Norwegians who get across here.

First he was sent with others to a British naval depot where he did a course of drill and discipline alongside of British recruits and spent a lot of time improving his English. From there he went to a Norwegian-run depot for proper naval training among his own countrymen. That lasted for some weeks and then he was posted to his first service afloat with an ancient Norwegian destroyer and entirely Norwegian crew though it was serving with a British flotilla.

The chief difficulty for them all was not the language difficulty—for most Norwegians speak some English and the others soon learn—but getting used to British naval working methods and routine. And as they were operating under British command they had to get acquainted with all that harassing jungle of King's Regulations and all the other routine and regulations which My Lord's Commissioners of the Admiralty have in their wisdom, and over the, course of generations of British sea power seen fit to impose

Their liaison officers ashore and afloat, however, guided them through all these labyrinths of British naval custom during this arduous course of seagoing apprenticeship.

Eric's next step was a two months' course on a British destroyer where for the first time he got acquainted with all the marvelous array of new equipment and armament which the British Navy has built up in this war. And he received a final polishing in the inner workings of the Royal Navy in action against the enemy.

But now the Royal Norwegian Navy was growing. A newly-built British destroyer was handed over to them and Eric was sent to school ashore again to learn with his countrymen all about still newer equipment even than he had seen before. British petty officer instructors did the teaching in English, and it was not always easy for these young men, especially when it came to technical terms. But somehow they mastered it all. And Eric, now commissioned, went to sea once again under the Norwegian flag, but in the last word in small fighting ships.

At sea they went through the usual routine of convoy guarding across the Atlantic interspersed with action against U-boats, aircraft, and offensive patrols against enemy held coastline. Sometimes they sailed with British flotillas and sometimes in their own flotillas.

But inshore work in small boats pleased Eric most, and best of all a chance of getting to grips with the Germans near his own homeland. So when a chance come of transferring to MTB's with their slightly Viking desperado flavor, he took it—although it meant going to school yet again.

Handling MTB's in action is essentially a young man's game. I might almost say a very young man. And he is still that. But it is also highly technical and Eric remembers his conversion course as the toughest he has had in his naval career.

But now he is happy and a different man from the weary boy I saw [illegible]ging over the tiller of a fishing boat in that far-off Scottish port long ago. I asked him how he felt about it all and he answered: "A British Admiral addressing some of we newly joined Norwegian sailors said to us: 'When you can't be in your own country, we don't want you to be anywhere else but here with us'. And we say the same."

WOMEN CALLED UP IN KENYA COLONY

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, Dec. 23. (CP)—All women between the ages of 25 and 40 except those who have young families or are already engaged on work important to the war effort, are being called up by the government of Kenya.

This call-up has not been undertaken at the request of the military, but is a civil government move to bring in those women who are not "pulling their weight". The military authorities still want more women however, especially stenographers, to replace men.

DURABILITY COUNTS

London (CP)—No. 731, the English utility stocking noted more for its durability than its glamor has become the favorite stocking of women here. Board of Trade officials state that women are now preferring this stocking to more sheer, full-fashioned types —probably because of its long wear and lower coupon value.

How to Get Ninety P.C. Grade A Eggs

(Agricultural Note.)

Milk and green feed are two of the constituents of the poultry feed given by a successful commercial egg producer. Ninety per cent of the eggs laid by his hens are Grade A all the year round. Here are his methods:—A supply of crushed oats, wheat, and barley is kept constantly before the birds in hoppers, also a commercial poultry concentrate, Cod liver oil is poured over the whole grain in quantities of about two ounces to 100 birds and fed at night. Skimmilk to the amount of 10 to 20 pounds per 100 birds, or semi-solid buttermilk, two pounds per 100 birds is fed daily.

Green feed as much as the birds will eat of second or third cut alfalfa or clover hay is fed by the forkful on the litter. This, along with the feeding of mangels or turnips keeps the birds busy and healthy. The birds do not eat the alfalfa but the coarse stocks they leave make excellent litter. It does not dampen as quickly as straw. Barns full of hay suitable for poultry feeding are the most significant thing about this producer's plant. He has had no bare-backed or feather-pulling birds in his flock for years. He uses the commercial poultry concentrate to offset shortages in milk, and the quantities given to the birds vary directly in accordance with the supply of milk.

HEARD NAZI WARNING

London, (CP) — Wherever radio sets were tuned to the BBC the night of Nov. 26, the people listening could have heard the warning of the brief German air raid on London that night. The siren announced the raid as the BBC recorded the chimes of Big Ben striking nine o'clock.

It's still a MERRY CHRISTMAS in the Land of the Free!

36-Hour Raid Record

A new record has been set up in air raiding, the dropping of 4,000 tons of bombs from more than 3,000 Allied planes on Monday and Tuesday of this week in a 36-hour concentration of air attack upon the Germans.

1,000-plane raids have done a vast amount of damage but this massing of Allied air strength has more than trebled the number of airplanes in the assault upon Western Europe in a day and a half's time.

A Christmas to be Remembered

Christmas season 1943 will be long remembered for it has been a time of heavy buying, though there was the natural absence of some articles on which wartime restrictions have rested. But business has made substitutes and they serve exceedingly well. There have been scarcities as for instance in turkeys, the banner bird of the Yuletide and Christmas festival. Candy naturally is scarce but even the absence of it rests lightly on even the child.

Religious bodies have seen to it that the customary approach to Christmas has been followed in the Christmas trees and other functions held for young children. In day schools festive programs brought the fall and early winter term to a close on Wednesday.

Weather conditions have generally been fair and opportune for buying. Streets and stores have been crowded with buyers. The season began earlier than usual and Christmas shopping is going on right up to the eve of the great midwinter festival.

So far has the war gone and so mounts the Allied program that some restrictions on certain metals and clothing materials are being eased.

This is the fifth Christmas under the spell of war and there is a feeling of hope that before another Christmas rolls around, the war with Germany may have come to an end with the collapse of the Nazi authority and state. For that the people earnestly pray.

Yugoslav Resistance

Marshal Josip Broz' partisan army is taking on double its number of enemy forces and licking them and taking the initiative away from the Germans and collaborationist forces.

The strength and the striking power of the Yugoslav forces form one of the most interesting situations of the war. At no time has the enemy controlled Yugoslavia for the patriots have from the time of the German invasion of their territory waged unyielding opposition to them.

Hitler has found as the Germans found in the last war that the peoples who inhabit Yugoslavia are among the most unyielding freemen who cherish their liberty as of a great price.

Everyone recalls the memorable phrase coined when Hitler was trying to force himself upon the Balkans, that Yugoslavia had found her soul.

The Germans have never been able to dominate that country's soul despite their effort and their tyranny.

Goebbels' Desperate Effort

A desperate Goebbels' effort to throw off the term "Hun" which has been universally applied to the Germans in the last war and in the Second World War shows how the word has cut under the German skin. Now Goebbels is trying to fasten the term upon the Allied airmen but he won't go far with that for he has only the servile Germans (Huns) that can possibly support his effort.

But the term "Hun" will stick to the Germans even after this war ends. It was a word used by the former Kaiser to the Germans to make themselves terrible and feared like the Huns of old. Thus Kaiser Wilhelm virtually adopted and applied the name "Hun" to the Germans for their manifestation of terrorism.

All that Goebbels can do won't change the world's attitude to the enemy who remains detested and therefore is called Hun.

A Lame German Excuse

The Germans lately gave a lame excuse for the loss of Cherkasy saying that the city "for a long time had been utterly devastated" and that evacuation "was carried out in complete order and without loss [illegible] and material."

But German military leaders do not give up a city merely because it has been "utterly devastated for a long time" and because they could carry out evacuation "in complete order and without loss of men and material" as they claimed.

As Cherkasy is a city of importance, the Germans would have held it if they had been able. The German radio announcer tried to convey the impression that the city was no longer of value. The fact is as the Montreal Herald points out, the German army fought for nearly a month of bitter fighting to hold the town which was the last remaining stronghold of the Huns on the Middle Dnieper. It is an important river port on a railway line and means much to the Russians and its loss is a severe blow to the Germans.

Future for 'Packable' Houses

("Newsweek" Magazine)

Builders of a 23- by 26-foot four-room house that can be folded up and transported anywhere a big truck can go, the Palace Corp. with plants at Flint and Saginaw, Mich., last week began to look at post-war sales possibilities in this country and in Europe and waxed quite optimistic.

In 1938 the firm acquired patent rights for the "expansible" unit from William B. Stout, industrial designer and inventor. Since 1941 it has been building units for Federal housing agencies. Sales last year totalled $10,054,808.

According to present plans, the company's post-war portable version will be built around a centre section 8 feet wide and 26 feet long, provided with permanently installed oil heater, toilet, shower, water heater, electric stove and refrigerator, and sink. The walls, roof, and floor will fold in against this section. Furniture can be compactly stacked in the centre section and the whole thing loaded on a truck and moved wherever desired. It is planned to sell the house for $3,000, a price that will include two beds, two dressers, two dressing tables, dinette table and four chairs, a sofa, and two living-room chairs.

Figures produced by the Palace Corp. showed that the cost of moving the house with the furniture inside would be less than that of shipping the furniture alone. This is because of tariffs and the additional manpower required to move furniture in conventional vans.

Responsive Dogs

An astonishing number of dog-owners have sent accounts of the immediate response of their dogs to the siren, relates The London Spectator. The tallest story refers to a six-months-old dachshund which bolts to an Anderson-type shelter in the garden directly the siren sounds and stays there till the proper "all clear" is heard, paying no attention to the observer's "all clear." As a resident in the Eastern Counties the dog has much experience, and it may be claimed that Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex pheasants have equally learned to respond to wartime noises.

She was challenged recently by another warship and was asked: "Who are you?"

This was too much for the Skate's dignity. She replied: "Churchill's secret weapon."

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Canadians of 100 years ago worked harder and had a more difficult time altogether than do present-day citizens. Just read on and see!

A peep into the diary of a pioneer's wife written in the first decades of the 19th century, would show us something like this: "Rose at four this morning. Spun flax until time to prepare breakfast. Cleaned house and made butter and Johnny cake, too, after grinding corn in the hominy block. Ate hearty dinner of pork and potatoes. Washed dishes and finished making dress. Prepared supper. Afterwards resumed spinning until ten, which is most important as winter draws nigh and I must make clothes for the family—stockings also". Such glimpses into the past reveal that women settlers worked quite as hard as the men.

But hearts were young and gay when the fiddler shrilled his summons to the dance floor. Many districts held dances every week in winter with neighbors taking turns in playing host. At the Christmas season the biggest most crackling logs went into the nine-foot fireplaces— the finest homemade fare was set forth—the best bibs and tuckers put in their appearance. If there was no fiddler the boys whistled to set feet dancing.

When it came time to blow out the candles mothers admonished daughters to hold the candle high for this was a saving of time trouble and temper. This way the wick did not smoulder and the candle could therefore be easily lighted again. If blown downwards little or no wick would remain and the candle would be certain to gutter when lit.

A cherished Yuletide gift was essence of flowers prepared at home. Here is a popular recipe: "Take any flower you choose; place a layer in a clean earthen pot and over them a layer of fine salt. Repeat the process until pot is filled; cover closely and keep in cool dry place. Forty days afterwards strain the essence from the whole through a crepe by pressure. Put the essence thus expressed in a clear bottle and expose it for six weeks to sun and evening dew to purify. One drop of essence will communicate its fragrance to a pint of water".

Nazi Terrorism In Greece Filmed

Montreal, Dec. 23—Moving pictures of Nazi terrorism in occupied Greece have been filmed by a Greek who has just escaped to Cairo and efforts will be made to have the film shown on this side of the Atlantic, according to information received by the Greek War Relief Fund here.

At the risk of his life, this photographer, says the report, succeeded in filming street scenes showing Nazi vandalism, pictures of the National University at Athens with the great hall wrecked, marble busts destroyed and pictures missing. There are shots of executions, attacks by Nazis on civilians and upon Italians, corpses in Athens being carried away for burial, etc.

Seek Higher Wage For Girl Workers

By MARGARET ECKER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 23.—(CP)—If it's any comfort to the civil service girls in Ottawa —or girls in the lower income groups in all parts of Canada—their British sisters are having the same headaches with shoestring living.

A campaign is on foot to get English girls in government offices and in factories a minimum wage of $13.50 a week. Meanwhile factory workers and evacuated office workers of 19 and 20 struggle along on about $11.50 a week.

Civil servants in London get an extra $1.25 a week living bonus to take care of the boom town prices here.

In a West Midlands town where the minimum for girl factory workers, working 47 hours a week, is approximately $12.50, a Trades Council spokesman said:—

"Living conditions for lower-paid girl workers is so bad that some of them prefer prostitution to destitution".

In the same town, the usual charge for working class accommodation is about $7 a week for room and two meals a day. Depending on demand for accommodation in a district this may cost as much as $10.50.

The same board and room at a hostel cost only between $5 and $6, but there are far too few of these establishments.

A typical budget of a factory girl in this district is quoted as: lodgings, $7; lunches five days a week, $1.25; health insurance etc., 50 cents; transportation, 50 cents; income tax $1.15; laundry, 50 cents; a total of $10.90.

Out of a weekly salary of $12.50, that leaves $1.60 for recreation, clothes and any emergency needs that might arise.

The picture in London is no less sombre, and many of the girl workers here look with envy on the women of the forces, who don't have to worry about how they are going to pay their board or dress themselves.

Here is the budget of a 20-year-old civil servant who receives $12.50 a week: lodgings, $7; lunches in a canteen, 75 cents; bus fares, 50 cents; health and unemployment insurance, income tax and other deductions, $1.75; laundry, 45 cents; toothpaste, soap, etc., 25 cents a week.

On top of these she pays about 65 cents a week into a shilling-in-the-slot machine to have heat in her bedroom and hot water for a bath.

The total is $10.70 leaving $1.80 for clothes entertainment and any extras.

OLD KING COAL

Our contemporary Bob Ripley tells us that pound for pound coal contains 4½ times as much energy as the most powerful gunpowder.

He might have added that pound for pound John L. Lewis seems to have more influence than the commander-in-chief of the military forces.

In a booklet entitled "Coal Facts" the Bituminous Coal Institute gives us some interesting facts about coal.

Luther Harr, U. S. Bituminous Coal Consumers Counsel is quoted as saying: "Bituminous coal alone will not win the war, but the United Nations cannot win the war without America's bituminous coal."

Coal, declares the booklet, supplies 55 percent of all U. S. mechanical energy; powers 95 percent of U. S. railroad locomotives; generates 55 percent of all U. S. electricity, heats four out of every seven American homes; is the base for 85 percent of all war plastics; is essential in making 100 percent of steel, and has 60,000,000 customers.

Sources of all energy produced in the United States are as follows: Coal, 55 percent; petroleum, 30 percent; natural gas, 12 percent, and water power, three percent.

Of the 55 percent of energy supplied by coal, 49 percent comes from bituminous or soft coal and six percent from anthracite or hard coal.

The four most important basic war chemicals—phenol, toluene, ammonia and naphthalene—are made from bituminous coal.

The high explosives TNT, Picric acid and Tetryl for mortars, cannon, guns, bombs, marine and land mines, torpedoes and other weapons are made from bituminous coal in whole or in part.

Processed bituminous coal is required for a base in 85 percent of war plastics used in bomber noses, gas masks, steel helmet liners, flashlight casings, dash knobs, airplane instrument panels, radio apparatus, telephones, pontoons, propellers, antenna mast bases, plywood trainer planes, skis, life rafts, lacquers and such like.

One ton of coal is needed to produce enough steel to make any one of the following: one 2,000-pound aerial bomb; 20 100-pound aerial bombs; nine 3-inch trench mortars; nine 20 mm. aircraft cannon; 16 5-inch shells; 21 4-inch shells, or 833 hand grenades.

The average output per miner is about five tons of bituminous coal a day, or 1,200 tons a year.

It is small wonder that the American people are becoming "coal conscious."

The Red Triangle Hostess Club of the Y.M.C.A., has been holding a number of pre-Christmas social evenings for the entertainment of the Air Force personnel of the surrounding ports. On Tuesday night a gala formal dance was staged in the Trianon ballroom, when a large crowd of enthusiastic frolicers enjoyed the swing band of the Melody Makers from Trenton Station. The presence of a number of navy and army boys, mingling with the boys in the air force blue was noted during the dance. Winners of the spot dance were Miss Jean Vickers and LAC. Norman MacCrimmon from Mountain View. On Wednesday night in the gymnasium of the "Y" a cabaret dance was in progress with hostesses being girls from all groups of the Red Triangle Club. In the pale shimmering glow of the lighted candles a merry time was had by everyone, with musical numbers being supplied by a juke box. Refreshments were served on the small tables surrounding the dance floor.

Red Cross Report for Nov.

The regular monthly meeting of the executive of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society was held on Monday with the President, Mr. M. P. Duff in the chair.

Several communications from headquarters were dealt with.

The Treasurer, Mr. Zeran, reported for the month of November.

Total receipts	$410.67
Bills	$476.71

Report by Mrs. Mikel

Mrs. Mikel reported as follows:

Fourteen cartons of knitted goods, Hospital supplies and clothing and quilts for British Civilian Relief were shipped during the month of November.

The Hospital Supplies amounted to 1,210 articles, Greek Relief 38, British Civilian Relief 372 and 10 quilts. The knitting consisted of 75 articles for the Navy, 35 for Capture Parcels, 70 for Survivors' Bundles, 45 for Civilian Relief and 20 miscellaneous articles. Altogether 1,895 articles were shipped.

Besides this 192 pounds of honey were shipped, being the gift of the Quinte Institute. We are very grateful to all who have given of their time and talents to this magnificent work.

The Red Cross office will be closed for taking in and giving out sewing and knitting from Wednesday, December 22nd to January 4th, 1944, inclusive The workrooms will close also for the same period. We are sure our workers will then continue with renewed vigor in this work of help and mercy.

Respectfully submitted,
Lilian E. Mikel,
Chairman, Women's War Work Committee, Belleville Branch.

Message of Appreciation

The following message has been received by Mrs. Mikel, from Major-General C. B. Price, Overseas Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society, under date of December 14:

"I hope that you will express to all your workers the gratitude of all of us in the Overseas Headquarters for the wonderful articles that have been coming across in such splendid quantities. We realize the great difficulties connected with supply and the sacrifices made by the workers to get the articles completed; I hope that it will be some satisfaction to know that the supplies sent forward by your committee are outstanding in quality and workmanship, and have done much to enhance the prestige of the Canadian Red Cross and Canada.

In spite of the fact that we are apparently approaching the dawn of a victorious completion of the war against Germany, I hope that there will be no relaxation of your efforts to send forward supplies for civilian relief. The backlog of need in Britain alone is tremendous, and it will be years before the needs are fully met. Even now, although there are no large scale raids, never a 24 hours pass but one or more of the coast towns are bombed, with loss of life, and the destruction of all possessions of many people. Unquestionably as the various occupied countries in Europe are liberated, there will be very great demands to fill the needs of the populations of these countries, whose need will be most desperate, and anything that we can build up now in the way of reserve supplies will be of tremendous assistance in the work of mercy after hostilities cease."

One Thousand Enjoy Yuletide Fete at Armouries

One thousand frolickers thronged the Belleville Armouries on Wednesday night on the occasion of a merry Christmas celebration and dance, arranged by the Air Force personnel of the Mountain View Bombing & Gunnery School.

The decorations were all of one type, but everybody's favorite—Union Jacks, big ones and little ones, arranged in every possible spot and the multi-colored spot lights from the balcony, playing on the dance floor below, could not make the flags anything but red, white and blue and who would want to? At the same time, the gay voices, warm greetings and cheery smiles of the young people, interspersed with the delightful melodies of Mountain View's very own station orchestra, transformed the staid military character of the hall into a festive and holiday atmosphere.

Not only officers and men of the Air Force blue were present for the jubilant affair, but also officers and N.C.O.'s of the Argyll Light Infantry.

The dance program opening with a grand march by Group Captain Ripley, C.O., of the station and Mrs. Ripley, continued throughout the evening with a variety of novelty members. Pipe Major Jamie Clarke in his "natty Scottish garb" proceeded ahead of the march, playing a number of skirling Scotch airs.

Belleville's own C.W.S.F. are to be warmly commended for their time, work and untiring efforts in managing the canteen during the evening.

'RETURNS' WRONG WALLET

New York, Dec. 23—(AP)—Daniel Feldman politely asked three holdup men to return his wallet after they had filched out the cash. One of them graciously did so. When police arrived, Feldman discovered the wallet was not his, but the holdup man's. And it contained identification papers. Police made an arrest shortly afterwards.

BEATTIE—CARTER

Beattie and the late Mr. Beattie, of Montrose, Scotland.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. A. Dilts, of Belleville, assisted by Rev. N. R. Flower, of Thomasburg.

To the strains of the Bridal Chorus played by Mrs. Arthur Bates, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage.

The bride was lovely in her floor-length gown of white sheer with lace and finger-tip veil caught to her headdress with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and bouvardia.

Miss Merle Ray, of Ottawa, as bridesmaid, wore a floor-length dress of blue brocaded taffeta, with matching Juliet cap. She carried a bouquet of Butterfly roses and bouvardia.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.

Q.—Is there any prospect of an increase in the quantity of canned vegetables which will be available for purchase in the retail stores?

A.—Yes, the release of these vegetables for consumption will increase after the New Year, by which time fresh vegetables may be more dificult to procure.

Q.—My son is coming on leave from the Army. Can I secure extra rations to cover his meals?

A.—When your son obtains his leave pass, he will be handed a stamped ration card which both you and he should fill in, giving the number of meals served. For every nine meals so served, you can obtain coupons entitling you to two weeks' rations of any one rationed food by presenting this card to your Local Ration Board.

Q.—Can you explain why various articles often sell for different prices in stores which are situated only a few doors apart?

A.— This is probably due to the fact that the merchants in question have different ceilings for the goods in question based upon the maximum prices which they charged for them during the basic period in 1941.

Q.—I have tried and tried to buy a metal crib for my baby without success. Can't something be done to increase the supply?

A.—Due to improvement in the metals situation, permission has now been given to resume the manufacture of such cribs and more of them should appear on the market in a reasonable space of time.

Q.—Why is it that the rationing of coffee in Canada cannot be suspended when this has been already done in the United States?

A.—Canada's consumption of coffee is now 28 per cent., above prewar levels and 30 per cent. of it is going to the armed forces, the Red Cross prisoner-of-war parcels and institutions. The reserve is only adequate for five months' consumption as against the peace-time stocks of from seven to eight months and, moreover, Canada is now buying coffee to the full extent of its shipping allocation and that is barely enough to meet the prevailing rate of consumption.

Q.—I found a ration book in the street the other day and, as the address is hard to decipher, could not return it to its owner. What should I do with it?

A.—Deliver or send it to the nearest branch of the Ration Administration.

Q.—We are moving away and would like to sell our electric refrigerator. I understand that such private sales are now subject to ceiling prices. Where can I find out what the ceiling is for this refrigerator?

A.—Give or send information concerning the refrigerator, including the length of time it has been in your possession, to the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Fashion Flashes

REALLY LOVELY and delightful to wear with brown or any other color for that matter, is a little turban of clipped golden pheasant plumage with long trailing golden pheasant feathers for trimming.

Of course most of us aren't going south, but southern fashions are important since they offer an advance showing of spring and summer wear. The camisole top sun dress is destined for a busy career. A typical model is done in white and pink striped hand-loomed cotton. The deep square camisole top has self shoulder straps finished with self bows. White belt with Mexican motifs ties with fabric ends. Dirndl type skirt with pockets.

On top of a pretty head we noticed a lovely hat of black velvet trimmed with tiny ostrich plumes shaded from palest blue to a deep sapphire shade.

Get Ready for beautiful prints. A lovely new afternoon frock uses red and pink carnations with green leaves and trailing stems on a black ground. The neckline is drawn into a big bow at one side and the skirt drapery follows the same line. The bow ends have appliques of cutout flowers from the fabric.

Expressing Our Thanks

THE food business has faced—will continue to face—great and critical problems brought about by the war. As a major factor in the food industry, General Foods, Limited has had a large measure of responsibility and many problems.

That we have been reasonably successful in distributing our products fairly is not due to our efforts alone. We have had the invaluable help of understanding and patience from the grocery trade and from the public.

May we take this opportunity of thanking and applauding the Canadian housewife. Cheerfully, wisely, efficiently, she has met the thousand and one problems of the home. She has kept her family well-nourished in the face of food scarcities, difficult shopping, swing shift and night shift meals.

And our thanks, also, to the wholesale and retail grocers. Shortages of goods and of help have made it difficult for them to keep their businesses running smoothly. They have had difficulty getting certain products for you —including some of ours.

We would not miss this opportunity of also expressing our appreciation of the loyalty of the large group of General Foods employees who have worked untiringly and faithfully to help overcome our problems. To those of our employees who are serving in the armed forces we extend hearty greetings and look forward to their early return.

Along with our thanks for help in the year past, we ask from public and trade, continued patience with the shortage of some of our products. To all we wish as much happiness as possible . . . and a much brighter future, soon.

Stagg Accorded Outstanding Sports Comeback Figure

(By The Canadian Press.)

Amos Alonso Stagg, "old man football" of the U.S. gridiron sport, was accorded The Associated Press vote among 77 sports writers as the outstanding sports comeback figure of the year, earning a total of 65 points against the 60 extended to Miss Patty Berg who had captured the Women's US. Western Open Golf Championship after recovering from a serious automobile accident. The vote went to Stagg because he had been rated "too old" to continue as coach, of University of Chicago a decade ago, only to field a team for College of the Pacific last fall which went places until war's requirements riddled the squad.

Thirty-eight points, good for third place in the honor standing, went to Bronko Nagurski, pro footballer who came out of long retirement to spark the Chicago Bears in their ascent to the western division title of the National Football League.

Lefty Gomez, former pitcher of the New York Yankees arrived in Algiers yesterday for a tour of army camps but went to hospital instead with a throat infection. In the party were Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight champion, and Fred Corcoran of the Pro Golfers Association.

The presidency of Empire City Association has been offered to Col. Matt Winn, director of the Kentucky Derby for many years, it was announced at New York yesterday. Winn, who is vice-jresident of Lourel track in Maryland, has not yet replied to the offer.

A coroner's jury at Chicago yesterday rendered a verdict of accidental death in the case of Al Reasoner, 23-year-old boxer, who collapsed after a 10-round bout Monday night with Freddy Dawson of Chicago. Death was said to have resulted from cerebral hemorrhage and a kidney hemorrhage, complicated by a fractured rib.

RUDY YORK WINS R. B. I. RECORD

Chicago, Dec. 23 — (AP) — Rudy York of the Detroit Tigers, a fellow who annually boosts his R.B.I. quota by sending himself across home plate with a liberal portion of home runs, won the 1943 American League runs-batted-in title with 118, official averages showed today.

Hitting 19 less than Boston's Ted Williams did in taking the 1942 crown, York nevertheless was 11 ahead of Nick Etten of the New York Yankees, who grabbed runner-up honors with 107 R.B.I.'s. Those two players, incidentally, were the only ones to top the 100 level, whereas five did so last year.

York, who also won the home run championship with 34, marked this down as the fifth time in his eight major league seasons that he had topped the 100 R.B.I. level although his 1943 quota was considerably under his own high of 134 made for the 1940 championship Detroit team. This was Etten's first time in five seasons in excess of 100.

Charley Keller of New York Yankees was top man in drawing bases on balls with 106—again far below the 1942 high set by Williams of 145—but the Yankee outfielder was in a class by himself as no other player reached the 100 level. Joe Gordon of the Yanks walked 98 times and Roy Cullenbine of Cleveland 96.

Only two players topped the 100 mark in strikeouts, Laabs fanning 105 times and Joe Hoover of Detroit 101 times.

Detroit players grounded into a record total of 159 infield double plays and Washington tied the all-time low of 94.

KINGSTON ARMY ON TOP RUNG IN SENIOR O.H.A.

R.C.A.F. Defeated 5-4 by Frontenacs in Best Game of Season

ST. KITTS WIN

By The Canadian Press

Kingston Frontenac Army returned to the top of the standing in the senior series of the Ontario Hockey Association with a narrow 5-4 victory over Toronto R.C.A.F last night on Kingston ice, snatching their eighth win of the season by coming from behind in the final period of the see-saw engagement with Fliers. The Soldiers now lead Hamilton Majors by a lone point, the Hamiltonians having registered seven successes and tied another game for a total of 15 points against Kingston's 16. In the other encounter of the evening at St. Catharines, the Saints took a 10-4 victory over Toronto Navy, thus raising their points' total to 12 in 3rd place, three behind Hamilton. The Sailors have taken only two games in 10 starts.

St. Catharines were well away with a 3-1 margin in the first period, on goals by Reynolds, Mundrick and McAtee, with Mann getting the one for the Tars. It was 6-3 at the close of the second frame and, after Buz Benson counted for the Gobs, the Saints rammed home 4 more. Mundrick, McAtee and Mason each gathered two goals and the other scorers for the winners were Reynolds, Fritz, Adamson and Concessi. For Navy, the goal-getters were Mann, Barlow, Thompson and Benson.

Frontenacs were hard-pressed to win from Toronto Airmen although the Army stood in front 2-1 at the first-period whistle on scores by Jack Peters and Foster, with Gronsdahl sinking the discs for the Air Force goal. Peanuts O'Flaherty tied up the game shortly after the second-period take-off and Gronsdahl followed with his second of the session to put Airmen 3-2 to the good.

Moe White forced a 3-3 deadlock before the second period closed and in the final session, Corrigan shot the Soldiers ahead with White scoring what proved to be the winning tally. Red Heron completed the Airmen's score a few minutes later.

Hamilton, Bermuda — (CP Cable) —The Lily Bowl football game at New Year's may become a fixture in postwar years as a tourist attraction with two U.S. college teams to be invited for the annual contest, it was proposed here yesterday. U. S. Army and Navy elevens will meet for the second time on the coming holiday.

Montreal — (CP) — The Quebec Senior Hockey League may have to carry on with three clubs after Montreal R.C.A.F. withdraws, it was stated last night after it was revealed the Valleyfield intermediates demanded guaranteed gates and five highly-rated players.

New York — (AP) — The sum of $628,294 was raised for charity during victory week, Nov. 4-13, staged at Jamaica by the five local tracks, it was announced last night by the turf committee of America. This amount brought the tracks' contributions for war agencies to $1,213,000 for the year.

Chicago — (AP) — The Boston Red Sox led the American League in fielding last season, it was announced here yesterday. The sterling performer was second-baseman Bobby Doerr who set a near-record with a fielding average of .990 with only nine errors in 914 chances during 155 games. In 1933, Melillo set a major league record of .991.

Toronto, Dec. 23 — (CP) — Promotion of hockey is enjoying huge success in Quebec province under guidance of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association and registrar Alphonse Therien estimates this season's registration will exceed 9,000 players and top Ontario for the first time in history.

Chiefly responsible for the large registration, almost double that of last season, is the work of the former Canadiens hockey star, George Mantha, directing playground groups for the city of Montreal. Mantha has organized all the youngsters playing in city parks under the Q.A.H.A. wing.

A great booster for youngsters in sport, Therien has a proposal worthy of consideration of Montreal city fathers. Instead of putting all their funds into outdoor rinks, Therien suggests four or five covered rinks be built in each section of greater Montreal. The rinks could be used for various gatherings in summer and for hockey in winter with scheduled hours given to schools and playground groups under proper supervision.

Wise words:

Commenting on the N.H.L. game which drew a crowd of only 8,613 at the Gardens here last Saturday, J. P. (Toronto Telegram) Fitzgerald wrote: "It couldn't be that the N.H.L.'s clamping down on any kind of publicity from players also applies to clubs and their officials? The Leafs' borrowing of St. Michael's young goalkeeper (Johnny Marois) for Saturday night might have added a few more spectators had it not been kept a dead secret until too late. St. Mike's have a big following."

Incidentally:

Jimmy Foster, the great goalkeeper who helped Moncton Hawks win the Allan Cup twice, then went to England and played for the English Olympic hockey champions in 1936, is back in his old hometown of Winnipeg. Foster is coaching No. 5 Air Observers School hockey team there. Now 38, Jimmy apparently has packed his hockey equipment away for keeps...Carl (Vancouver News-Herald) Robertson says a post-war Pacific coast hockey league is likely to have two divisions with San Francisco, Los Angeles, Hollywood and San Diego in the south and Vancouver, Portland, Seattle and either Nanaimo or Victoria in the north...Will Pedlar of Vancouver, former Canadian Davis Cup tennis star, is with the air force in India.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 23—(CP)—Mrs. A. C. Critchley, who as Diana Fishwick, won a British Women's Open golf championship 13 years ago and prevented the cup going to the United States, stepped from retirement to win a national tournament that remains the only affair in rationed Britain.

Wife of Calgary's Brig.-Gen. Critchley, she toured the Royal Mid-Surrey course at Richmond in 75 and termed her first competition in three years "grand fun." Last year's winner, Petty Officer Wanda Morgan of the WRENS, a former British champion, played erratically to card 87 in the field of 90 from all parts of Britain.

Jaqueline Gordon finished second with 77 and Mrs. A. H. Wardlow, who as Nan Baird won the Scottish championship, was third with two more strokes.

Flight Officer Pamela Barton, killed in a recent flying accident, couldn't forget golf in between her duties at a Fighter Command station in Southern England. She started a golfing class among pilots and other personnel.

Women's open champion of Britain and the United States in 1936 and 1939, Miss Barton ran the school during the mid-day lunch break after airmen began asking her for golf hints. She conducted it on a course near the fighter station where she was a radio operator. Each pupil received tuition in swings, stance and grip.

Ted Drake, England and Arsenal soccer centre-forward, fully understands now the meaning of taking statements too literally.

Giving his three-year-old son his first football lesson, Ted told him that the first rudiment of soccer was to "keep your eyes on the ball." Young Ted looked at his father, then picked up a football and placed it to his eye.

Flt. Lt. Maule Colledge, brother of the ice-skating champion Cecilia, has been reported missing from air operations. He represented England in amateur hockey internationals at Prague in 1938 at the age of 19.

Cecilia, tall and pretty, is with the Mechanized Transport Corps and keeps in skating trim by giving charity exhibitions. She manages one hour of ice practice a week, compared to four hours a day before the war.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

Father (when his son got his first job)—When you approach your new job you should make up your mind to do it well. I remember when I firstfirst started to work. I was fired with enthusiasm for what I was doing.

A couple of days later the boy came home looking downcast.

Father—That isn't the way to look. What happened anyway?

Son—The same thing that happened to you on your first job, dad. I was fired with enthusiasm—much enthusiasm it seemed to me.

(Bring him back.)

It was with regret we learned "Jake" Solomon was seriously ill. The "father of the old C.O.B.L." the name of Jake Solomon was a byword up and down Lake Ontario when Jake headed the old Peterborough nine. Commenting on his illness Peterborough Scribe Fred Craig had the following to say:—"Peterborough ball fans and players and baseball executives all over the Central Ontario district will regret to learn that J. J. "Jake" Solomon, former manager of the Peterborough Central Ontario League club the man who revived the Central Ontario loop and put baseball on its feet in this whole area has been seriously ill in Philadelphia and although on the way to recovery is still in bad shape. Word to this effect has been received by Ald. Max Swanston who was catcher for the Petes during the Solomon regime. Jake was the victim of a bad heart attack that confined him to hospital in Philadelphia for thirteen weeks and recently he has been trying to recuperate at Atlantic City where his condition is still so serious that he is travelling around in a wheel chair and has lost many pounds. Peterborough friends will wish him a speedy recovery. Few individuals have done so much for any one sport as the peppery Solomon did for baseball. When he arrived in Peterborough the game was only a memory here and in other centres in the district. His missionary work was a one-man effort, undertaken in spite of the fact that everybody he consulted told him that he couldn't get anywhere. First he organized a City League here and put the winner into the senior Ontario series, making Peterborough a charter member of the O.B.A.A. Then he launched the Central Ontario League and its first winner Belleville went on to win the Ontario championship and to pioneer a baseball revival that saw this district recognized as one of the strongholds of the game."

(Birthday—today.)

Congratulations were in order to Connie Mack, beloved manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, today on the occasion of his 81st birthday.

Daily the tall venerable "Mister Mack", as he is known by his players, takes his position in his office tower at Shibe Park in the Quaker City in these war years even carries his lunch in a paper sack. He is the oldest manager in the point of years and service in the major leagues.

"I'm still hoping to win another pennant you know. If I. didn't I wouldn't be here."

The old man, the idol of millions of kiddies and adult ans, goes to his office daily—carrying his lunch in a sack—to plug away in his effort to build up a team like the great pennant-winning Athletics of the 1910-'14 and 1929-'31 eras, and in spite of his years he intends to go on traveling with the club, supervising the play on the field.

(Remember when—)

"Rapid Robert" Feller was selected by the New York baseball writers for their annual award to the "player of the year" three years ago today. Feller richly deserved the recognition for, during the 1940 season, he won 27 games while losing 11, he struck out 261 batters and had opened the season for the Cleveland Indians with a no-run, no-hit game. Feller is now in the United States navy.

(Kids hope so.)

If the weather remains cold, that is sufficiently so to make ice for the next 24 hours, in all probability the Hume Arena will open for public skating on Christmas Day. "We hope to be able to open Saturday, but it all depends on the weather," stated Manager Walter Gerow today.

"How about a little plug for our Belleville Juniors," enquired Secretary Wally Berry yesterday.

"O.K., what's for cookin' on the front burner?" says we.

"Well, you can tell the public we are getting out the best hockey program ever presented in Belleville. It will contain the pictures and a thumbnail sketch of every player on the team, yes and also pictures of some of the boys who did not quite make the grade, but will be playing juvenile", explained Secretary Berry.

"Oh yes, and you can tell the boys we'll hold our first practice just as soon as there's ice at the Arena. Maybe Christmas night if the boys aren't too full of turkey," added Wally. All of which reminds us that Wally Hilton's "Combines" and Lee Parrell's Trenton juniors have been hard at it practicing all week.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 267

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Sing a song of bidding, a partner full of rye. Four and twenty contracts sunk by that guy. When the party ended, the soak began to chuckle: "Play another round or two, I like pinochle."

At some progressive bridge parties, some of the players might just as well be playing euchre. But if they do play bridge, there are two styles of the game to choose from; rubber and game-a-hand.

In rubber bridge, a pair gets credit for a game even if it takes more than one deal to make enough points for a game. And the rubber is won when one side wins two games.

In game-a-hand, the tournament method is followed. To get credit for a game it must be bid and made in one deal. Credit for a game is not paid if it takes more than one deal.

Before progressing, four deals are played at each table. Each player in turn is dealer for one of the four deals. And the usual method is to change the vulnerability situation after each deal.

In rubber bridge, vulnerable means simply that your side has won a game so far in that rubber. In game-a-hand, a pair is arbitrarily vulnerable in certain of the deals.

In the first deal, neither side is vulnerable. When the second player deals, that dealer's side is vulnerable and the opposing side is not vulnerable.

When the third player deals, the dealer's side is vulnerable and their opponents are not. When the fourth player deals, both sides are vulnerable.

The only advantage of being vulnerable is that your side gains more when you win a game or slam. The only disadvantage is that you lose more when your contract is defeated.

It was the third deal when north dealt these cards:

NORTH
♥Q J 7 4 3
♦8 7 4 2

♦K J 9 6 3
♣A K Q 6 4 2

EAST
♠J 10 8 6 5
♦A Q
♣J 10 9 5

SOUTH
♠K Q 3 2
♥A K 9 5 2

North and south were vulnerable and south fulfilled a bid of four hearts by taking ten tricks. Besides getting credit for the trick points, they got a bonus of 500 for making a game while vulnerable.

The west and east pair were not vulnerable in that deal. If west had bid and fulfilled a contract of five clubs, his side would get the trick points and 300 bonus for a game when not vulnerable.

There is a ceiling on these things.

AT THE BELLE

"Spitfire's Blessed Event"

A misunderstood telegram is the basis of all the comedy and complications in "Mexican Spitfire's Blessed Event," RKO Radio's latest offering in the popular series of fun films now at the Belle Theatre.

Carmelita Lindsay sends the wire to her husband, who is engaged in a business deal with a British nobleman. He mistakes the message for an announcement that he has become a father, and this precipitates that everyone concerned start to Arizona at once to inspect the new arrival.

Since there isn't any new arrival to inspect, the fun begins, when his lordship, irritated, wants to call off the business deal while the Lindsays frantically endeavor to detain him and resume negotiations . . . How it all works out provides a laughter-packed picture.

Lupe Velez and Leon Errol are co-starred in the picture, and Walter Reed, Elizabeth Risdon, Lydia Billbrook, Hugh Beaumont, Alan Carney and Wally Brown have featured parts.

"Murder on the Waterfront"

An exciting search for a dangerous spy is the theme of the new Warner Bros. film "Murder on the Waterfront," which is announced as the added thrill feature. The cast is headed by Warren Douglas, Joan Winfield, John Loder and Ruth Ford.

A Merrie Melodie color cartoon "Corny Concerto" completes the program.

Christmas Fun Show

Romance and fun abound in Paramount's new romantic comedy, "No Time For Love," coming to the Belle Theatre this week-end with Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray, Ilka Chase and Richard Haydn heading the cast of funmakers.

Stage Show in Color

A new idea in entertainment— a stage show on our screen, is promised in "Caribbean Romance", featuring famous stars of Vaudeville and screen in a lavish spectacular musical novelty in radiant Technicolor. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday and Monday Boxing Day.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Reveille With Beverly"

Swing fans will find plenty to be excited about now at the Capitol Theatre, where Columbia's "Reveille With Beverly" presents tap-dancing Ann Miller with four of the nation's most popular orchestras. The bands are Bob Crosby's, Freddie Slack's, Duke Ellington's and Count Basie's. In addition, "Reveille With Beverly" brings to the screen Frank Sinatra, the Mills Brothers, the Radio Rogues and Ella Mae Morse, Slack's delightful vocalist.

The Mills Brothers present "Cielito Lindo;" Sinatra sings "Night and Day" and Miss Moore vocalizes while Freddie Slack and his orchestra play "Cow-Cowboogie."

Count Basie and his orchestra bring their "One O'Clock Jump" to the screen. Bob Crosby and his Dixieland Band are heard in "Big Noise from Winnetka" and "South Rampart Street Parade," while Duke Ellington and his aggregation present "Take the A Train."

In addition to the rhythm-packed offerings of the musicians, Miss Miller "gives out" with one of her own inimitable tap-dances.

"East Side Kids"

An exceptional cast appears in "Smart Alecks," latest of Monogram's East Side Kids pictures, which is now at the Capitol Theatre. Important roles are played by "Slapsy" Maxie Rosenbloom, Gale Storm and Roger Pryor, supplementing the brash East Side group. The latter is headed by Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan Huntz Hall and Gabriel Dell, members of the original sextette which created a sensation when they appeared in the original New York stage production of "Dead End."

A funny cartoon and the serial, "Secret Service in Darkest Africa" complete the grand double bill. Matinee daily at 2.15 throughout the Christmas holidays.

CHICAGO HOLDS FOURTH SPOT IN LEAGUE RACE

Hawks Defeat Detroit 7-1, Wings Showing No Scoring Punch

RANGERS READY

By The Canadian Press

Tonight will be a big night at Detroit for the Red Wings, but it will be a bigger one for the lowly New York Rangers who have won only two games in 17 starts this season.

The Rangers will be after their third straight win.

Now they face Wings again, this time on foreign ice. But if Bucko McDonald stands up against the opposing numbers the way he did at their previous meeting, Rangers stand a good chance.

Last night Black Hawks showed the way to a possible Ranger victory by soundly thrashing Red Wings 7-1 at Chicago. Detroit showed a definite lack of scoring punch, and they failed to provide their new goalie — Harry Lumley of Indianapolis — with much protection.

Big Earl Seibert scored Chicago's first goal in the opening period, and rookie Vic Heylinger added another in the second.

In the final period Doug Bentley started the scoring at 2:26. Clint Smith counted on a fine passing network by Billie Mosienko and Bentley at 10:19 to signal a scoring spree which added up to three goals in a minute and a half.

Passes by Cully Dahlstrom and Mush March set up Jack Dyte's marker 20 seconds later, and then Dahlstrom tallied with Allen and Virg Johnson assisting.

Don Grosso's shot made the 6-1 margin before Bentley got his second and Chicago's seventh goal of the night on Smith's and Mosienko's help at 16:52.

CAPITALS DRAW

By The Canadian Press

Hershey Bears — leaders of the American Hockey League — suffered one of their biggest setbacks of the season last night when the cellar-dwelling Pittsburgh Hornets gave them a 6-2 lacing. Providence Reds and Indianapolis Capitals battled to a 3-3 tie in the circuit's only other game.

Right winger Wendell Jamieson scored three goals for Pittsburgh in the final period after Tony Hemmerling banged in two counters in the second period. Defenceman Chuck Shannon accounted for the other tally late in the second.

Hershey's Gaston Gauthier scored in the first round on a pass from captain Wally Kilrea, and Bill Hudson added their second counter at 18:58 in the final after Jamieson's three-goal outburst.

In the Reds-Capitals encounter Alex Ritson added the final tally for Indianapolis just two seconds before the whistle blew to end the game. Johnny Sorrell scored their second goal at 11:11 in the same round.

Hec Pozzo took Reds' first goal just 23 seconds after the start of the game, and at 10:38 Bullie Sherritt retaliated for Caps. In the second period Reds added their other two counters, one by Hal Cooper and the other by Jack Toupin.

London — (CP) — It takes 40,000 tons of coal to make 4,000 tons of bombs to drop on Germany.

Washington Spotlight

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 23 — (CP) — Like a wounded little bear, Herbert Morrison stood before the House of Commons and growled and bit and grew sentimental and climbed over the newest and possibly the toughest obstacle in his turbulent political path.

This was the Mosley debate, the climax in parliament to an outbreak of feeling that had aroused the trade unions of Britain and the Empire to protest, brought banner-bearing mobs to the House, drawn 30,000 to a demonstration in Trafalgar Square, moved workers thru the country to a bubbling bitterness over the release of the sickly Fascist from jail.

This was the debate, and it was all Morrison's.

Against the Home Secretary was mustered a minority of about 50 labor members, a force whose approach was emasculated by the timid words of its spokesman. For when Rev. G. S. Woods got to his feet to move the amendment "regretting" the release of Sir Oswald Mosley he said, "This is no vote of censure. It does not suggest any lack of confidence in the government or Mr. Morrison."

To a House that had expected force, these were flabby words. The solemn hush was broken by a gale of laughter from the government benches.

The Home Secretary spoke with a vehemence and emotion the House had seldom seen him turn loose. He stood forth as the champion of civil liberty; he offered to quit, threatened to if the House wished to draft new regulations detaining people on grounds of personal dislike or mob rule."

The House cheered Morrison and upheld him by 327 votes to 62.

Of those votes against him, the majority came from the ranks of Morrison's own labor party. It was not the first time parliamentary labor had split nor will it be the last.

Of the views of just what it meant, there were these:

Manchester Guardian: "By no means could this labor vote be regarded as threatening Mr. Morrison's position." The Guardian made the point that most of the labor criticism outside the House had been couched in such terms as "egret" and "dissociate."

London Daily Mirror: "In securing this personal triumph, Mr. Morrison split the ranks of labor so gravely the end cannot yet be foreseen."

Cardiff Mail: "Mr. Morrison has emerged successfully and finally from the greatest crisis of his ministerial career."

To many the case looked like the biggest blow yet to the unity of a party which is finding unity under a coalition government difficult.

Don't Give Livestock Ice Cold Water

(Agricultural Note.)

For all cattle in winter particularly for dairy cows, a liberal supply of good clean water is necessary. And an important thing is that the chill should be taken off the water before drinking. As pointed out by W. D. Albright, superintendent Dominion Experimental Farm, Beaverlodge, Alberta, 'starey-coated, constipated cattle shivering hump-backed at icy troughs on a bleak winter day are an object of sympathy and a standing advertisement for shrunken profits". If the water is ice-cold, the animals do not drink enough water. The small amount that they do drink checks natural functions. Results are constipation, ill-thrift, and sometimes indigestion.

Warm water is relaxing and substitutes in part for succulent feed Half a pailful of tepid water has brought many a horse around after an immersion or after a cold hard drive. Swine do poorly on ice-cold drinks. A heater in the drinking tank will not only avoid much ice chopping but will contribute decidely to the health and comfort of the farmyard stock.

COP LATE FOR FIRST TIME BECAUSE HE CAUGHT THUG

New York, Dec. 23—(AP)—For the first time in 15 years, Police Sergeant John Sinnott reported late for duty. Instead of receiving an upbraiding, his superiors offered him praise—en route to work he had nabed a thug attacking a merchant seaman.

OFFICIAL FIGURES LOW

On Aug. 15, 1940, during the worst of the Battle of Britain, R.A.F. pilots shot down at least 181 enemy aircraft and on Sept. 15, 185. The number of destroyed planes is almost certainly larger than the official figures.

ALONE AGAINST WORLD

Britain in 1940 saved the world from German domination by winning the Battle of Britain all but single-handed.

3 'BEARS' FOR POISON ARE FINALLY SHOT

Elgin, Ill., Dec. 23—(AP)— Last April, because of the mounting cost of food and the shortage of zoo attendants, Park Commissioners decided to liquidate the three black bears of Lord's Park. The animals, fed enough potassium cyanide and strychnine to kill scores of men, begged for more. The poison idea was given up. Yesterday the three bears succumbed to rifle bullets.

TITO DEPRIVES

Nov. 29, and that its decisions "are to enter into force immediately."

Tito on Offensive

On the military front Tito's forces were reported on the offensive in every sector, after throwing back German counter-attacks in Croatia.

In Eastern Bosnia the Partisans occupied the town of Trebava, after defeating the Germans in a pitched battle in which 200 enemy troops were slain and quantities of war grea captured, Tito's communique, also broadcast by the free Yugoslav radio, reported.

Other units captured the towns of Bosanska, Petrovac and Selo, and "annihilated" and occupied the town of Bojna, a few miles north of Knin, near the Adriatic Coast.

POWERFUL AERIAL

fighters. Crewmen said they hit the objectives on the nose despite clouds and intense cold.

At the same time, formations of R.A.F. Mosquitos, Bostons and Typhoons with fighter escort hopped the Channel in great strength to hit "military objectives" in France. Four planes were lost.

The R.A.F.'s first photographs of scarred Berlin after the six heavy bombings started Nov. 18 showed at least 70 great factories, government buildings and other important structures damaged, the Air Ministry announced.

The pictures "leave no doubt that the damage during these six attacks goes far beyond anything done before the night of Nov. 18," it declared.

40 to 50 P. C. Destroyed

London morning newspapers interpreted the damage reported to mean that 40 to 50 per cent of the German capital had been destroyed, with the area of utter desolation already exceeding that of Hamburg. Western Berlin was ravaged the worst. The R.A.F. announcement showed severe damage to the Rheinmetal Borsig armament plant, the largest plant of the Reich's second greatest armament manufacturer, to the war, interior, justice, food and propaganda ministries, and many areas of Berlin including the Tiergarten, Mitte and Charlottenburg sectors.

The Germans sent a few raiders over southeast England last night in retaliation, dropping a few bombs and causing a small number of casualties, it was announced.

CASUALTIES HEAVY

More than 200,000 killed, wounded and missing were the total casualties suffered by the forces of the British Empire in the African and Middle East campaigns.

Little Benny's Note Book

I came home for lunch and Nora was gone already on account of being Thursday, and ma was up in her room and I said, Hay ma, can I get my own lunch?

I'm afraid not, there's nothing ready so I'll have to prepare something for you, ma said, and I said, Well G, ma, I could cook a couple of eggs, couldn't I?

Well I hope you'd be clever enough for that, I'm sure, ma said. You mean boiled eggs, naturally? she said, and I said, No mam, I mean a special way all my own.

I think I'd prefer to hear the details first, if you dont mind, ma said, and I said, Sure, ma, I was going to tell you the recipee anyways if it turned out good, and then you could tell all your lady friends and everybody would be trying it and I could call them Eggs ooh la Benny Potts, and I'd be famous for them. So I might as well tell you now, I said.

Well what is this wonderful creation for land sakes? ma said. If it's anything messy you might as well change the subject before you go another word further, she said, and I said, No mam, there's only 3 things in it besides the eggs. There's a spoonful of mollasses and a spoonfull of vinegar and a spoonfull of ketchup, and there's nothing messy about it, because all you do is beat everything up together in a bowl and then fry it till it's done. I just kind of imagined it on my way upstairs to ask you, I said.

Oh my goodness I can smell it all over the house right now for land sakes, ma said. You better just kind of imagine that I'm going to make you a nice simple armlette, she said.

Which she did, tasting swell but not proving that Eggs ooh la Benny Potts wouldn't of tasted just as swell and maybe even sweller.

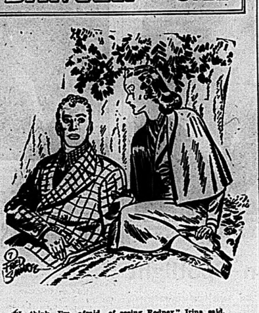
NORTH TO DANGER by TOM GILL



"I think I'm afraid of seeing Rodney," Irina said.

CHAPTER 4

"I think you're everything that's wonderful. I always have."

"You're a grand comfort, Colin darling." Smiling, she looked up at him. "And big and fit-looking as ever—and your hair is still as stubborn as your disposition." She tried unsuccessfully to pat down the offending cowlick. "No, nothing will ever help it."

"You helped it once, when we were kids. You doused it with syrup remember?"

They both laughed and her eyes were bright.

"Do you know what decided me to come up here?" Colin asked.

"My letter?"

"Yes. You're worried about your father, aren't you, Blair?"

She nodded.

"Would you rather not talk about it now?"

"I'd rather you'd see Father first, Colin."

"Has his trouble anything to do with Jonathan Dove?"

"Yes."

"That's what I thought." Rae sat for a moment without speaking. "Strange how things piece themselves together." Then abruptly he asked, "What about Nate Tennant?"

Something in the way Colin spoke made her cheeks flush, but she answered lightly, "Oh, he's around."

"I don't doubt it! He must feel at home in this world of dictators and brute force. His one belief in life was the right of the strong to rule."

"That's not entirely fair, Colin. You never liked him."

"Yes I did, once. I even admire him now in many ways." He turned quickly toward her. "Why isn't Nate in the army?"

Blair smiled. "Don't ever ask Nate that question. The first week of the war he went down to Winnipeg to take examinations for aviation and they rejected him for color blindness. Nate was like a wild man. He went to Ottawa an tried again, but no use. Nate won't even talk about it; if they want him now, he says they can come for him."

Colin looked up. "Blair, just how fond are you of Nate Tennant? It sounds like prying, but you and I haven't seen each other for two years. If my little sister's in love with Nate—"

"Would it make a difference if your little sister was in love with him?"

Soberly he answered. "I want you to be happy, whatever happens."

It was a long moment before she spoke. "There's this about Nate," she said at last. "He shows a different side to me than he does to the rest of the world. He's a great deal of a child—yes, don't smile—a child that's frightened and trying to hide it by acting very fierce."

Colin's cigarette dropped into the water with a faint hiss. "You know what the Indians call him," he reminded her.

"Woman hawk." Again those cheeks were coloring.

"I don't ever want—"

"Colin," she broke in, "I'm grown up."

"Are you?" The quiet rebuke stung him, but he knew he had brought it on himself.

Silence, while the wind rustled the pine branches and water lapped fitfully against the pontoons. "Does Nate ever speak of me?" he asked.

"Not often. He hasn't forgiven you for what happened." Those eyes of hers, usually smiling, were shadowy again. "Colin, I'm worried at what Nate may do now that you are back. If there were only some way—"

"There isn't any way. We'll just have to take things as they come. But I can promise you this: I did not come here to fight with Nate. If there's any way of being friends with him, I'll take it. But I won't let any man tell me to keep out of a country that's mine as well as his. And the chances are I won't be here very long."

"You mean—the war?"

"Yes. I've asked for overseas duty."

"I thought the company and the provincial government wanted you to keep on with your work here."

"They do. But establishing fur farms doesn't seem so important when you read the headlines these days."

His eyes had grown restless again, and for a moment they sat in silence; then, opening the door of the plane, he jumpd out upon the rocks and swung Blair down beside him.

A swirl of wet snowflakes struck his face and he looked up. "The first storm of winter."

Blair locked her arm through his and fell into step beside him. "Colin what about your Miss Meredith?"

"She's Rodney's Miss Meredith, not mine."

"It's hard to think of Rod Selkirk marrying."

"What do you make of her, Blair?"

"She's attractive, and she's intelligent". Blair hesitated. "And something more . I have the feeling that she knows what she wants out of life and she's willing to get it. She can't be much older than I am and she makes me feel like a kid in comparison. But I don't think she's very happy".

Bowing their heads against the wind, they followed the trail along the ridge and emerged upon a little clearing where, for the first time in two years, Colin saw his own mud-chinked cabin and behind it, back among the spruce, the smaller cabin where Alec lived.

It was warm inside, and a kettle on the stove sang its high song of contentment. One end of the room was piled with steel traps, snow shoes, stretching boards, and harnesses for dog teams. Irina sat at the table helping Alec peel potatoes, and, catching Colin's smile, she gave a little gesture of helplessness with the paring knife.

"I'm not very good at this", she said simply.

Colin laughed. "Alec can use those peelings for potato chips."

"Alec has been telling me about you". Irina laid down her knife. "He told me that you know more about the forests and the ways of animals than even the Indians. He said you spent two winters by yourself up near the bay. Why did you do that?"

Colin held his hands out to the warmth of the stove. "Maybe to learn something about fur animals. I once wrote a book about them that nobody ever bothered reading."

"That", Irina said thoughtfully, "was not the whole reason".

He smiled. "Are you one of those who must always have a romantic reason?"

Her green eyes studied him. "With you, the romantic reason might be the logical one".

He did not answer.

Swiftly the darkness of northern twilight closed in upon them, and they ate supper by the light of oil lamps. Outside, the wind raged, and Alec heaped the stove high with dry logs until it glowed cherry red. Snug and warm, they sat around the fire, smoking, while Colin helped Alec skin the two otter and a red fox caught that morning.

It was an old tale to Colin and to Blair, but Irina was vastly interested and with the fascination of a child fondled the soft fur. "What happens to them now?" she asked.

"Alec dries them", Colin answered, "and sells them to the Hendrik's Bay Company. They're bundled up and sent to New York to be auctioned off—millions of them, from all over northern Canada. Then they go to the four corners of the world, so that men can do what men have been doing since the world began—clothe their women in furs".

Irina looked up at him. "You make it sound very primitive".

He laughed. "It is. But so are love and hate and war".

Walking across the room, Colin pointed with his pipe to a large map on the wall. "See this dot, almost in the shadow of the North Pole? That's a trading post. It's already a six-months' winter night up where that dot is, and one white man is living there alone with a dog team and a short-wave radio, Once a year a boat comes in with food and supplies and to take away the furs he traded from the Eskimos.

"See these other dots? They're all trading posts of the Bay Company, and there's just one reason for their existence—fur. The desire of men to please their women—the desire of women to be alluring in men's eyes. So we have you ladies to thank for every dot on that map, and for the fact that all this country isn't empty of human life".

Irina looked across at Blair Benedict. 'Is he always so philisophic?'

Blair was pulling down the blankets of the farther bunk. "It's just his way of signing off. He's leaving use with his shining thought for the day. At least I hope so. I'm dead."

Colin knocked the ashes from his pipe. "I gather we're being thrown out, Alec." Followed by the Indian he went out into the night.

The snow had slackened, and a few stars were glittering coldly as the two men crossed the clearing and entered the smaller cabin. The penetrating chill of disuse filled the room, and, pulling off his boots, Colin rolled up among the blankets while the Indian laid a fire ready for morning.

The sight of a dozen furs drying made Colin ask, "Alec, what do the trappers think about Dove?"

"He gives good prices—the white trappers don't like him".

"What about the Indians?"

"Our old men don't trust him".

"Do you?"

"I wouldn't know." Alec blew out the lamp. "Something funny about Dove", the Indian's voice came through the darkness. "How can he pay better prices than the company, when everybody says the company is losing money?"

"Why doesn't someone ask Dove?"

"They did. Dove said the company makes plenty, says they've been robbing the trappers for two hundred years".

Colin lay back, and pulled the blankets higher. He could hear the wind in the treetops above and through the window saw a solitary shaft of moonlight, and his thoughts flashed back to another night when the moon was shining. In the darkness Colin closed his eyes against that memory.

All that was past, and nothing could be done about it; the thing that mattered was the future, and, whatever happened, he had left Dove behind him in Winnipeg. Thanks to two women he had gained the one thing he needed most—time. . . .

At the thought, he saw Irina again, standing in that wine-colored robe, facing him with level eyes, and the light touching her hair. He heard again the quiet voice "I am not frightened." Tomorrow . .

Colin was asleep.

He woke to the crackle of flames in the stove and the sound of water simmering. Alec had gone. Through the window Colin saw smoke rising from the other cabin, and bright sunlight streamed down across the lake. In its warmth the snow was melting from every treetop and the smell of moist earth came to his nostrils, bearing the promise of Indian summer—those golden days when the northern world basks briefly in the warmth and sunlight of a belated autumn before the icy hand of winter closes.

About the edge of the little clearing the berries of Saskatoon had already turned purple and beyond the lake shore stretched the old, familiar sky line; the one gnarled pine that rose above the others, the yellow spearheads of aspen, breath-takingly brilliant in autumn coloring.

With a great sense of well-being, Colin dressed and hurried across the clearing. Blair had already finished breakfast and was drawing on her mittens when he entered.

"Alec and I are going on ahead," she told him. "It's just possible they may radio Learmonth that I left yesterday and Father will start worrying."

"Better stop by the post and tell Rodney that Miss Meredith is here," Colin advised. "We'll be right after you."

At the table Irina sat almost concealed behind a huge tin cup of coffee while Colin helped himself generously to bannock and smoked fish. He looked at her untouched plate.

"Better take something substantial," he warned. "There's a six-mile hike ahead."

"I'm not very hungry," she answered and lit a cigarette.

A half hour later they were on the trail and, in spite of the sun's warmth, the wind from the north whipped the blood in their cheeks as they bent to face it along the lake shore.

At the first turn a frantic barking burst upon them, and Colin saw Alec's dogs, chained to pine sapplings, gaunt and still snarling over the remnants of food Alec had thrown them.

Keeping back within the partial shelter of the trees, they walked for nearly an hour along the windy trail, and at last emerged upon the granite-ribbed banks of Play Lake. Ducks and innumerable geese dotted the water's surface and the thin ice crust rose and fell, moving before the wind, filling the air with a faint tinkle as of broken glass.

To the north Colin saw the outline of Drunken Island and, farther away, Forestry Island, with its fire tower looming high against the sky. But now his eyes fixed with new interest on the group of buildings that lay directly across the lake—the Indian school, headquarters of Jonathan Dove.

Three large buildings, a barn, a dock and a fence surrounding them. Set well apart from the others and screened by a thick growth of trees, stood another building, a long, two-storied structure almost indistinguishable except that sun had touched to fire the upper windows.

Something unobtrusive and disarming about those low, squat buildings in the sun—disarming as Dove himself—and Colin wondered if within their walls might lie the answer to questions that had borne him unwelcome company through many a sleepless night.

He must have been watching with unrealized intentness, for he started as he heard the girl's voice at his side.

"What are those buildings?"

"The new Indian school. They were built after I left."

He started along the shore, but Irina laid a hand on his arm. "Can't we rest a little?" she asked and he realized how weary she sounded. He led her to a shelving mass of rocks that converged into a shallow cave, and here, sheltered from the biting wind, he seated her on a pile of dry needles.

Colin saw the color had gone from her cheeks. "You're tired," he said.

"I think I am afraid."

"You?" Incredulously he smiled. "Afraid of what?"

"Of seeing Rodney."

"But you've seen him many times."

"Not many, really. The first time was in Europe when he visited my father. I was twelve, and I can still remember how terribly old he seemed. Before he left, he bought me a Shetland pony and taught me to ride."

"And after that?"

"After that, when I came back to New York, we saw each other every summer for a week or ten days. But I don't really know him—not the way that counts. I suppose that's why I'm afraid."

Special Courses In Farm Mechanics Are Established

Following up the successful courses given in farm mechanics and the repair and adjustment of farm machinery, the Ontario Department of Agriculture announces that a similar series of courses of instruction to embrace 37 counties of the province will be held this winter. In some areas the courses have already started and they will be continued until the end of March. Last winter 264 courses were conducted in 30 counties, with 15,844 farmers attending. Plans for this year call for 284 courses to be given in 37 counties of the province and, in view of the practical value of this type of instruction a greatly increased attendance is anticipated. It is expected there will be a series of nine courses in Hastings.

Each course will extend over two full days, from 10 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. daily. The subject which will be covered by instructional talks, charts, lantern slides and practical demonstrations include plow, mower and binder repair and adjustment, labor-saving methods and devices, tractor maintenance, rope work, cooperative and custom use of machinery, care and operation of electrical and dairy equipment, farm sprayers and dusters, care and repair of harness, care of farm buildings and labor-saving methods in the handling of live stock. The agricultural war production program will also be dealt with by the staff lecturers and instructors.

London — (CP) — The Ministry of Production has granted a British firm the first licence to make synthetic rubber in bulk. Production will start early in 1944.

Turkey Minus Quantity On Thursday Market

That the province-wide shortage of Christmas turkey holds true for Belleville and that many a city resident will be minus the traditional Yuletide fare at their dining table has been evidenced this week with the almost total absence of the birds on the local market or in downtown butcher shops. The offering of turkey on the market Saturday was only a small percentage of that of other years, while the same thing applies for the two market days this week.

One or two of the butcher stores have turkeys hanging in their shops but when the anxious buyer accosts the clerk to purchase his Christmas turkey he is informed the birds on view have been sold.

Farmers offering geese and ducks on the market this week were besieged with buyers even before they could gain the entrance of the market building and many were sold out without placing their fowl on the stands. It looks as though local residents who cannot get the choice Christmas fare will have to be content with chicken or roast pork.

Scarce in Toronto

Toronto—(CP) — Turkeys are scarce on the local market, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported today. Receipts of Ontario grown turkeys are practically nil. The situation has been helped somewhat by the arrival or scheduled arrival of seven cars of turkeys from Western Canada. But the volume from the west is small compared with other years, dealers here being able to procure only a percentage of the quantities usually bought at this time of the year from Western Canada.

The fresh dressed poultry market is firm with an exceptionally good demand, as was expected at the Christmas season. This demand is for all grades of poultry with the exception of fowl. Receipts of chicken are plentiful but fowl supplies are light. Geese are arriving in limited quantities and are clearing well. Some dealers report good supplies of ducks.

Can Now Sell Cheese To Domestic Market

Ottawa, Dec. 23. (CP)—The Agriculture Department announced today that under a Dairy Products Board order Ontario and Quebec cheese factories now are permitted to resume the manufacture of wholemilk cheddar cheese of any size or color and to sell it on the local market.

Since the early summer of 1943 the board required all factory cheese made in Ontario and Quebec to be manufactured only as large, white and unwaxed, and to be sold for export to Britain.

These restrictions now are lifted to make cheese available for the domestic market. The announcement said that should a surplus be built up by the spring of 1944 "all the more" cheese will then be available for export to Britain.

CHRISTMAS TREE FOR AIRMEN'S CHILDREN

A special treat was given yesterday to over sixty kiddies by the Commanding Officer and staff of No. 5 Initial Training School.

Many young eyes popped wide open with delight when they arrived at the auditorium and beheld a large Christmas tree loaded with gifts.

Santa Claus was at his best in the person of Sergeant E. P. Cooper, who filled them with glee with his jovial antics, when he presented each child with a present from the tree.

A Donald Duck picture was shown on the screen, and a novelty tap-dance number was performed by Miss Helen Cooper, after which refreshments were served to the mothers and children.

PLANES CRASH INTO CARS

Toronto, Dec. 23 — (CP) — Two airplanes crashed into a crowded street car during the rush hour in Toronto's east end yesterday—but the planes weren't flying and nobody was hurt. The accident occurred when an R.C.A.F. truck and trailer transporting the planes ran into a street car loaded with workers and Christmas shoppers.

Shocking Case Of Destitution Found in North

"It was the most terrible state of destitution I have ever experienced. The entire family was ill-clothed, under nourished and living in a ramshackled old house without adequate heat and water frozen right on the floor", stated Inspector T. D. Ruston of the Children's Aid Society after investigation a case of destitute circumstances north of Bancroft yesterday, when it was necessary to place six children and a mother in the charge of the C.A.S.

"The children, ranging in ages from one to 12 years, were running about the poorly-heated house with only light shirts to cover their little bodies, while all the mother was wearing was a print dress. Fortunately the Red Cross of Bancroft provided sufficient and adequate clothing for the children before they could be brought to the C.A.S. depot", added Inspector Ruston. Later it was revealed there were no eating utensils in the home, with the exception of a broken butcher knife. The foodstuffs found consisted only of a bag of frozen patatoes, a part of a bag of flour and some salt. They had a milking cow, however.

The conditions were discovered by H. H. Loucks, Bancroft school inspector, when he visited the Herman School and found the 12-year-old boy in the first grade without adequate clothing. Later Provincial Constable Stanley Palmateer and Inspector Ruston investigated. The mother was lodged in the county jail on a charge of neglecting to provide for her children. This is but a nominal charge, Mr. Ruston pointed out. The case is being further enlarged while the father was left behind to look after chores.

COLDEST NIGHT OF THE SEASON

"Rather unseasonable weather for this time of year", was the comment heard on Front Street this morning from a pedestrian stamping his feet and holding gloved hands over chilled ears. And there wasn't one voice raised in contradiction of the observance.

Quite true and with reason indicated the weatherman who Wednesday night recorded the coldest snap of the current season as the official thermometter of the pump house on Trent Road submerged to a chilly 11 degrees below the zero mark. That it was colder than this downtown was indicated by the thermometer on the Crystal Hotel doorway which during this morning's fire registered 12 below at nine thirty.

31 at Bancroft

It was really cold at Bancroft, however, with reports indicating the mercury went to 31 below during the night. Real winter weather is in evidence in the north part of the county, it was stated, there being 14 inches of snow on the level.

By the Canadian Press

Ontario wakened today into the sharp air of the province's coldest weather of the winter.

Temperatures ranged from a teeth-chattering 37 below zero at Killaloe, near Pembroke, to a few degrees above zero in most Western Ontario districts. The Northern areas of the province, which never have to worry about the possibility their Christmases won't be white, got a little more snow but there were only scattered flurries in the Western and Central areas.

A storm which has been raging intermittently for three days in the Georgian Bay area continued to block all country roads and some highways.

High among the cold spots was the all-time champion, White River, running close behind the leader with 33 below. It was 29 below at North Bay, 20 at Cornwall and Brockville, 19 at Ottawa, 15 at Kapuskasing, 14 at Sault Ste. Marie and 13 at Kingston.

The thermometer dropped to eight below at Guelph, a new low for the winter. It was six below in Toronto, although some unofficial thermometers recorded even colder weather. Hamilton and Brantford reported temperatures of two below. There was light snow in the London district, with six above zero weather. Chatham also reported six above, Windsor and Sarnia five above.

Relief Forecast

Chicago, Dec. 23—(AP)—A cold wave that accompanied the official arrival of winter chilled most of the northeastern quarter of the United States today, but prompt relief was forecast.

The United States weather bureau forecaster in Chicago said slow moderation would begin today in the upper Mississippi Valley where the wave struck its first subzero blow yesterday.

Today the zero belt extended from Portland, Me., and Albany, N. Y., westward to the North. Dakota-Montana line. Canton, N. Y., set a low mark of 25 below zero.

POPE TO CELEBRATE MIDNIGHT MASS

Hour Changed to 5 p.m. Because of Curfew Regulations

London, Dec. 23 — (CP) — The Vatican radio broadcast an announcement today that Pope Pius XII will celebrate Christmas Eve mass privately at 5 p. m. tomorrow (12 noon E.D.T.) instead of at 7 p. m. as he originally planned.

The change was made because of the curfew in Rome, which is under German occupation.

The announcement said the mass would be "strictly private," but will be broadcast and be relayed thru the Italian radio along with an earlier papal radio message. This message to the world is scheduled for 12:15 p. m. (7:15 a. m. E.D.T.).

NBC and CBS plan to carry the papal message at 7:15 a. m. tomorrow, followed by an English summary. Whether the Christmas Eve mass would be rebroadcast in North America was not known immediately.

POLICE COURT

Norwood Man Fined $50 for Assaulting Police Officer

"Such conduct will not be tolerated and the excuse of intoxication and failing to remember will not be accepted as any excuse," warned His Worship Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court here today after 33-year-old Frank Gerow of Norwood, had pleaded guilty to a charge of resisting and assaulting an officer. Gerow was fined $50 and costs on the above charge and also paid the conventional "ten and costs" on a subsequent drunk count.

Gerow resisted arrest in Madoc recently when approached by Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson and Chief Comerford. "Even after I placed him under arrest and put the handcuffs on him he kicked me," stated Constable Patterson Gerow held he was drunk and did not remember anything pertaining to his actions. He was given time in which to raise the larger fine.

Failed to Notify Registrar

Cpl. Wm. Beatty of the R.C.M.P. arraigned John Forin of Ormsby on a charge of failing to notify the Divisional Registrar of a change of address, contrary to the National Selective Service. Forin contended he was illiterate and therefore did not know such was necessary. He pleaded guilty and was fined $25 and costs, or four days in default.

"What are your views on the war are you willing to enlist?" asked His Worship.

"Why certainly I'll join up," replied Forin. It was following this agreement that Magistrate Lloyd meted out the four-day term in default, and Forin was turned back to the R.C.M.P., who will escort him to Kingston and turn him over to the military authorities this afternoon.

Pleads Guilty to Theft

George Coe, Madoc, pleaded guilty to stealing $43 from a fellow-employee and the matter was enlarged until next Tuesday for sentence. Coe was engaged as a farmhand near Madoc and took the money from George West, another farmhand, Provincial Constable Patterson told the court.

Careless Driving

R. E. Barnard, Stirling, paid $5 and costs after being convicted of careless driving while a similar fine was imposed against E. Windover, Belleville, after admitting he had failed to bring his motor vehicle to a full stop before entering upon a provincial highway.

The Christmas spirit was seen in two cases when His Worship gave two persons, charged with minor offences, a month to raise ten dollars. "It's Christmas time and maybe we can stretch a point," remarked the Bench.

A group from the Rotary Club, assisted by members of the R.A.F. will sing carols throughout the town on Christmas eve. They will stop and sing wherever a lighted candles is placed in the window, as is the custom in England.

The Salvation Army Band and singers are also providing Christmas music and carols on the streets this week.

Patients in the Picton R.A.F. and Mountain View R.C.A.F. hospitals will be cheered on Christmas day by gift bags containing games, magazines, candy, books, writing materials, handkerchiefs and other articles. These have been packed by Picton Unit of the Red Cross and Wellington Women's Institute. The I.O.D.E. is sending fruit.

There is a scarcity of turkeys and geese here and many families are having to find some substitute for the Christmas dinner.

Cheese Production.

Nearly three and one-half million pounds of cheese were manufactured in Prince Edward County to the end of November, and the end of the month will see it well over that mark. This decrease, however, is the lowest in this area.

During November, county cheese production was 176,362 pounds compared to 281,460 pounds in November last year.

The output in eleven months is equal to 38,215 ninety-pound cheese.

Butter production in November was 5,441 pounds, bringing the eleven months' total to 185,560, which is an increase of 74,906 pounds over the same period last year.

Western Troops Canadian Corps Battle Germans

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Italy, Dec. 21 — (Delayed) — (CP) — Western troops of the Canadian 1st Division, overcoming fanatically-resisting German paratroopers, have occupied the Southeastern half of the Adriatic coast town of Ortona, gateway to the key port of Pescara which is 11 miles up the coast and terminus of an important highway to Rome.

These Canadians, who blasted their way Monday into the town, objective of the Canadians since they crossed the Moro river Dec. 8, occupied the southeastern section Tuesday after an all-day battle with the paratroopers. Established with machine-guns in the solid buildings, many Germans stuck to their guns until the last bullet was fired and the Canadians took only 10 prisoners.

With this encounter the Ortona battle drew to a bloody climax, although it was expected to go on for another day at least until the enemy suddenly retired. It would end the bitterest and costliest two weeks for the Canadians since they invaded Italy Sept. 9.

Driven Toward Pescara

The Westerners (presumably men from the Seaforth Highlanders of Vancouver, the Princess Patricia's light infantry and the Loyal Edmonton Regiment named by Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent in London, as taking part in the Ortona street fighting) gradually drove the Germans toward the northwestern exit on the coastal road to Pescara.

Meantime, the Allies were giving the German rear no rest. Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked anti-aircraft posts and transport in the area of Tollo, about three miles back of the German lines on a secondary road paralleling the coastal road to Pescara, and Miglianica and Ripa, farther up the road from Tollo.

During the day there was little enemy shelling of the town, almost entirely deserted by its normal peacetime population of 9,000, but harassing machine-gun and mortar fire from an enemy position on high ground to the west swept along the main approach of the road from Orsogna, about 10 miles inland.

Canadians Silence Fire

In the town, tanks silenced fire from a number of buildings with shells from their 75 mm. guns while anti-tank guns, brought up by the Westerners by nightfall Monday, were used to smash the houses in which the Germans were installed.

I walked to Ortona, which is perched on a shelf 200 feet above the sea, with a company of a Pacific coast battalion (Seaforth Highlanders) that was going in Tuesday morning to join the fighting. Most of the men had been in their clothes for three weeks and some were bearded because there was no chance to shave.

A half-mile from the town, the sounds of battle could be heard and a little farther along the company was greeted by soldiers of another battalion digging slit trenches. Then they started into town but Sgt. Mirne Patriquin, a sapper from Moncton, N. B., warned us not to proceed farther north because enemy machine-guns covered a nearby corner. We entered from the southwest.

A few moments later a Bren gun began to stutter.

Watched Action

Lieut. P. R. V. Carr-Harris of Kingston, Ont., was talking to a few men around an armored scout car nearby and just beyond there was a Sherman tank, its crew watching smoke shells fired by another tank pass lazily over the tops of buildings.

I climbed to the tower of a building, where I watched shells blast a big white house in which some Germans had taken up positions. Later I left and picked my way back along the same route.

DEER GOES OVER HEADS OF POLICE SQUADS

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 23—(AP)—When a deer and an elk clashed at the zoo and the deer got the rough end of the brawl, it must have injured his dignity. He evacuated the animal colony. Three squads of police, breaking from routine for a deer-hunt, cornered their quarry on a front porch but the wily deer leaped over their heads and disappeared.

Warns Heavy U. S. Casualties Are to Come

Civilian Official's Remarks Intended as Jolt to Civilian Complacency and Does Not Necessarily Imply Any Immediate Large-Scale Operation

Washington, Dec. 23 — (AP) — The United States was jarred today by a warning from a highly-placed though anonymous source that tremendous American battle casualties might be expected in the next 90 days.

The warning was tossed into an off-the-record conversation with newspapermen by an official whose position makes him privy to many state secrets but who stipulated that he was not to be quoted by name. He predicted that total United States war losses will mount threefold in the next three months. That would boost the present 132,000 casualty toll well past the 500,000 mark.

Hours after the remark was out, unofficial efforts were made to lessen its impact by persons who pointed out that it came from a civilian and had no military substantiation.

The statement itself — openly intended as a jolt to civilian complacency — did not necessarily imply an immediate invasion of Europe or any other large-scale military undertaking. But it recalled recent disclosures that a high-pressure building program now is under way to turn out landing craft of the type used for invasions.

The 90-day period would leave two obvious possibilities: A winter rise in the pace of battle, or a springtime invasion with the Allies prepared to suffer terrific losses in the first lightning strokes.

Prisoner Escaped In Mail Bag From Monteith Camp

North Bay, Dec. 23—(CP)—A mail bag in which he had been hidden, presumably by fellow prisoners, was the method used by Eckert Brosig Tuesday night in his third escape from the prisoner-of-war camp at Monteith, Ont., 40 miles east of Timmins. The 23-year-old former Nazi flier was recaptured early yesterday in North Bay.

Skip Andrews, North Bay mail clerk who with Henry Berry, mail inspector, captured the German in the railway mail car said today the mail bag taken on the train at Monteith was "extremely heavy, a fact upon which we commented several times before we heaved it into the mail car. When we finally did load it, it took two of us to lift it into the car."

"We threw it on the floor of the car and loaded the lighter bags on top of it, right up to the ceiling. When the train arrived in North Bay and was still moving into the station, I barged into the storage car where the Western Mail was piled. I saw a swift shadow move across the car, ducking behind the mail bags. It was a man, obviously trying to hide from me.

Mispronounced "North"

"I asked him where he was going and he replied he was going to North Bay. He pronounced north as 'norss' and I began to get suspicious of him. He asked me then if I intended putting him off the train and I told him no."

Andrews said Brosig was dressed in a heavy sheepskin-lined windbreaker, a leather helmet with earmuffs also lined with sheepskin, and brown shoes. Andrews and a fellow employee, Bruce Marshall, asked Brosig for a registration card.

"He pulled one out without hesitation and handed it to me. It was a blue card with a Toronto address on it. I asked him where he lived and he said Ottawa.

"I said to him: 'You have a foreign accent' and he replied 'I am Spanish.'

"When he unloaded the bags we had piled on top of the heavy one we found it was empty, except for a blanket. That was the one our man had been in. He must have cut himself out with a knife of some kind."

Had Japanese Books

Brosig had Japanese books and papers he carried with him in a large parcel. In addition, he had numerous sheets of paper on which he had been practising making Japanese characters, with the German equivalent written in an adjoining column.

He also had a German-Russian lexicon, but there was no evidence he had been practising writing the Russian language.

Brosig's registration card was similar in the type faces used in its printing to others carried by prisoners-of-war captured in North Bay in the past, but sufficiently different from the regulation card to be immediately noticeable.

He was well supplied with cigarettes and also carried a razor and a number of snapshots of individuals and family groups.

It was Brosig's third escape from the camp since June, 1942. North Bay police said he was handed over to the provost corps who released him after questioning but later picked him up again. He was held in the city jail.

A SMALL ATTENDANCE

Toronto, Dec. 23 — (CP) — Three candidates and three ratepayers formed the total attendance at an election meeting scheduled to be held at Givins St. school. The candidates finally shrugged their shoulders and moved on to another school taking one of the ratepayers with them.

THE WAR TODAY

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press War Analyst

The Jerry-built structure of the Allied command is showing up again, pointedly so in the case of Gen. George C. Marshall, who was —but now is not—to take the field command of European invasion forces.

Instead, he seems destined to remain as United States Chief of Staff, possibly to assume even greater responsibilities in some Allied "super-staff" assignment, as hinted at in dispatches from London and suggested in Washington's much-quoted informed circles.

It is an open secret in Washington that Marshall's capacity for responsibility and his personal qualities — forthrightness, common sense, an encyclopedic memory, unassuming manner, an ability to use with great skill such instruments, human or material, that are at hand — have made him the dominant figure in staff councils.

The men working with him in the U. S. joint chiefs of staff and the Anglo-American combined chiefs of staff probably are no less able than Marshall as strategists or tacticians. But in some subtle fashion, having nothing to do with brilliance of learning, Marshall has become the catalyst of their thinking.

That being the case, it should occasion little surprise if President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill have decided they could not spare his advisory services in a war that, from the Allied side, lacks a supreme commander.

The Anglo-American forces have two commanders, Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt. It may be that they think as one, but it's hardly likely. Their joint decisions are compromises, based on recommendations which in turn are compromise opinions of a combined staff. Not only are those recommendations of the combined staff compromised after study of completing demands of field commanders, but they are probably accompanied by "minority opinions" from those whose requests have been denied or whose judgments have been overruled. Such a complicated and unwieldy arch needs a keystone, and the two chiefs of state apparently have concluded that Marshall is that keystone.

Take the case of Marshall's Pacific trip after Teheran and Cairo as an example. There seems little reason to doubt now that its chief purpose was to give Gen. Douglas MacArthur a complete explanation of the situation, and to head off the trip home which MacArthur is reported to have planned.

POINT TRAVERSE

Turkey Vultures Are Inhabiting Main Duck Is.

Point Traverse, Dec. 23 — Turkey vultures which are rarely seen along the southern border of Canada, are inhabiting the Main Duck Islands, off here, and according to the reports of hunters, these birds have taken up nesting places on the island.

It is a great wanderer, and there are records of its appearance at most unexpected places, but it is pre-eminently a southern bird, reaching its northern limits along the southern edge of Canada. It's a straggler, being seldom seen as far as latitude 41°. In the winter they generally seek out warmth and shelter, hovering often like grim spectres in the suburbs and on the roofs and chimneys of the houses around the cities of the Southern States. A few brave the winters of the Northern States, but the greater part migrate south at the approach of winter.

The turkey vulture or buzzard is brownish-black, head bare of feathers and bright red, bill white, length about two feet.

Hollow logs, caves and similar places constitute the turkey vulture's favorite nesting sites. The eggs are larger than those of a turkey, of a yellowish-white, irregularly blotched with dark brown and blackish spots. If not materially disturbed they will continue to occupy the same place for several years in succession.

They are accused at times of attacking young pigs and lambs, but many naturalists indicate that a more harmless creature, living at all upon flesh, is not in existence than the turkey vulture.

As many as six of these large birds have been watched soaring over the escarpment here during the past summer. A local hunter reports shooting three turkey vultures on one of the Duck islands.

Members of C.W.S.F. Assist in Wrapping Christmas Parcels

Although their regular training schedule has eased off considerably because of the holiday season, members of the local Canadian Women's Service Force are still rendering a really worthwhile service and one which is much appreciated by district armed forces personnel.

It is the business of wrapping Christmas parcels for local airmen who want their Yuletide gift for "her" or for Dad or Mom done up the right way. Apparently they admit that this particular chore can be done more tastily by the nimble fingers of the gentler sex because they are really taking advantage of the service offered.

The wrapping of the Christmas parcels and [illegible] for the boys takes place at the Y.M.C.A. where the airmen bring their parcels and postage stamps with the C.W.S.F. girls furnishing the boxes, wrapping paper and stickers. Saturday evening the girls worked steadily in their Good Samaritan role until the early hours, while the same applied to Wednesday evening of this week.

That the boys really appreciate the artistic job the girls do for them was indicated Saturday night by the reaction of one young English chap who, on viewing the finished article, ejaculated: "Gosh, I had no idea that the girls were going to wrap my parcels up as nicely as this."

"Help keep Long Distance lines open this Christmas please!"

"I've hung up the Santa Claus suit. Until war ends, I'll be in uniform 365 days a year—keeping communications open for urgent war business.

"So this Christmas, please help by avoiding Christmas telephone messages. Particularly avoid 'long-haul' calls to the eastern seaboard and the far west—such calls have increased 35% over last year's record figure.

"Let's keep lines clear for urgent war business, and for all those in uniform who will want to say 'Merry Christmas' to their families back home.

"Thank you . . .
I know you'll understand."

SUFFERED YEAR WITH GAS SOUR ACID UPSET STOMACH

"Often Had to Stop and Rest" Unable to Sleep; Had Dizzy Spells, Headaches and Backache; Says Syntona Gave Her First Relief

"During the past year I was in poor health due to very troublesome stomach disorders," said Mrs. Kathleen Boyce, 9 Wortley Road, London, Ontario, recently.

"Almost every morsel of food I ate caused an excess of acid in my stomach with belching up of hot, sour liquids. Gas pressure in my stomach and chest made me so short of breath I would often have to stop and rest until the attack passed off. When these attacks came over me at night I was unable to sleep. My system must have become contaminated by the poisons from the sluggishness of my stomach as I had a constant nagging backache and rheumatic pains all through my arms and limbs. I was subject to severe dizzy spells and frequent sick headaches.

"I tried many different things and although nothing ever helped me before, Syntona has given me such gratifying results that I cannot praise it too highly. It relieved the gassy condition of my stomach and got my bowels moving regularly. Food does not distress me now and I can enjoy my meals without fear of pain or shortness of breath afterward. I am entirely free from headaches and dizzy spells and the rheumatic aches and pains have gone away. I now get restful sleep at night and feel so much better that even my work seems easier. I am glad to add my name to the many who are recommending Syntona."

Let this Pure Herbal Compound help you, too. Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville by DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Eisenhower To Lead Invasion

Roosevelt Says Choice Approved At Recent Parley

British Officer To Be Given Mediterranean Command

Hyde Park, N. Y., Dec. 24 —(AP)— President Roosevelt announced in a worldwide broadcast today the appointment of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to the supreme authority of the Anglo-American forces which will open a second front against Germany.

He made no reference as to the future of Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army, who had been reported earlier as the choice for the vital European invasion command.

A British officer who will be announced by Prime Minister Churchill will take over Gen. Eisenhower's present Mediterranean command.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a Christmas eve address to his fellow countrymen at home and in the armed forces overseas, made it clear that the selection of Eisenhower had been approved at the recent war conference in the Middle East.

He said that he, Mr. Churchill and Premier Joseph Stalin of Russia, in three days of intense and consistently amicable discussions at Teheran, had "agreed on every point concerned with the launching of a gigantic attack upon Germany."

Concerted Action.

The President added:

"The Russian army will continue its stern offensives on Germany's eastern front, the Allied armies in Italy and Africa will bring relentless pressure on Germany from the south, and now the encirclement will be complete as great American and British forces attack from other points of the compass.

"The commander selected to lead the combined attack from these other points is Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. His performances in Africa, Sicily and Italy have been brilliant. He knows by practical a successful experience the way to co-ordinate air, sea and land power. All these will be under his control. Lt.-Gen. Carl D. Spaatz will command the entire American strategic bombing force operating against Germany.

"Gen. Eisenhower gives up his command in the Mediterranean to a British officer whose name is being announced by Mr. Churchill. We now pledge that new commander that our powerful ground, sea and air forces in the vital Mediterranean area will stand by his side until every objective in that bitter theatre is attained.

"Both of these new commanders will have American and British subordinate commanders whose names will be announced in a few days".

'Jerries Caught Really Napping' Canadians Report

London, Dec. 24 —(CP Cable) Crews of Canadian Lancaster bombers returning from last night's attack on Berlin said today that the attack did not meet the usual defence.

All Canadian planes returned safely. Seventeen R.A.F. craft were lost.

FO. R. T. Martins, a bomb-aimer of Winnipeg, suggested "maybe we caught the Jerries really napping."

"It was the easiest trip yet," said Flt. Sgt. G. S. Milne, a Lancaster pilot of Edmonton, after his third trip to Berlin.

"There was comparatively little fighter activity and we had no difficulty getting through the searchlights."

Flt. Sgt. S. J. Halversen of Vancouver, sighted two Nazi nightfighters but neither was close "and we saw no sign of combat over the target."

Other Canadians over Berlin included FO. W. A. Healey of Parry Sound, Ont.

H. and P. E. Troops First to Cross Moro R., Then Expanded Bridgehead

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
(Canadian Press War Correspondent.)

With Canadians in Italy, (Delayed)—(CP Cable) — Stout-hearted troops of the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment of the Canadian 1st Division made an outstanding contribution to the British 8th Army's push up the Adriatic coast in the hard-fought battle of the Moro river.

The soldiers of the Central Ontario Battalion commanded by a Lieutenant Colonel from Owen Sound, Ont. were the first Canadians to cross the muddy Moro Valley and its little river, above which the Germans sat firmly.

(Crossing of the Moro River was announced by Allied headquarters Dec. 10. Establishment and enlargement of the bridgehead led to the 8th Army's attack to the Ortona-Orsogna highway running inland from the Adriatic, and the present Canadian drive deep into the port town of Ortona, fall of which was expected to be announced momentarily on Christmas eve.)

Determined fighting and a stroke of battle luck gave the H.P.E.S. their initial foothold in enemy-held territory. Good management exploited it into a solid position from which repeated German counter-attacks were turned back.

Held and Exposed Bridgehead.

The Hastings held their bridgehead, beating off German attempts to drive them back across the valley until troops from other units and Canadian tanks and support weapons got over and lined up beside them.

They were under shell, mortar and machine-gun fire and at one time an enemy thrust to within 30 yards was turned back with the aid of tanks and self-propelled guns.

The young battalion commander says his troops just couldn't be beaten and officers and men say the colonel himself was unbeatable, outguessing the enemy at every turn.

Snipers' Bullets Zing Around Heads Of Canadians During Action in Ortona

(By LYNN HEINZERLING)
(A.P. War Correspondent)

With the 8th. Army in Italy, Dec. 22 (Delayed) — The Germans for some mysterious reason are staging a miniature "Stalingrad" in the hapless town of Ortona on the Adriatic and Canadian troops are busily engaged in shooting them out of windows, battering down their barricades and chasing them from cellars and sewers.

Canadians were in firm possession of more than half the town at sundown and had infantry and tanks in the streets.

"You can hardly stick your head around a corner without hearing snipers' bullets sing by," one hardy Canadian rifleman said.

The Canadians play well at that sort of sport too and one sharpshooter said he had accounted for 14 Germans himself.

The Germans have a number of tanks still in the town and they apparently are prepared to sacrifice them since there seems little likelihood they will be able to withdraw them with the 8th. Army artillery blasting the northern outskirts and the R.A.F. on close watch.

Due to soggy condition of the ground, tanks are unable to operate to any extent across country.

German snipers are operating from behind barricades which had been erected all over town and while they were fighting it out in the centre of the town demolition squads apparently have been busy in the northern end since heavy explosions could be heard from there during much of the day.

(Since this dispatch was written Allied headquarters in Algiers has announced that the Canadians have pinned the Germans into the northwest corner of the town and word of its fall has been expected momentarily.)

Presumably the desperate stand is being made to permit the Germans to establish a line behind the town. It is expected they will withdraw ultimately to the high ground in front of the Foro River. A good deal of the Canadians' time has been spent cleaning up minefields sown with the usual German prodigality.

German troops engaged in the action are from the 1st. Parachute Division which has been specially trained for this type of action. Few

POPE APPEALS FOR PEACE NOT IMPOSED BY SWORD

Delivering Message From Vatican Hopes 'This Will Be Last Christmas of War'

5TH WAR MESSAGE

London, Dec. 24 —(AP)— Pope Pius in a Christmas message to the world today prayed that "this will be the last Christmas of war" and appealed to mankind to begin the planning of the world's reconstruction and a peace of "justice and honesty."

Speaking from the Vatican, increasingly near the war zone and where in a sense he is a prisoner—for the shadow of Nazi bayonets ringed and fell across the ancient seat of the Roman Catholic faith—the Holy Father appealed for a peace not "imposed at the point of the sword."

"A future peace should not, certainly, leave out the possibility of sanctions," he added. "But do give back to the world a peace based on justice, not on reprisals, on a world communion based on present world suffering."

The Pontiff, isolated from the 300,000,000 of the faithful since the German occupation of Rome last September, spoke in Italian by radio. The speech was recorded and translated by the Associated Press in London.

He began by recalling that for the fifth time since the outbreak of the war Christendom was preparing to celebrate a day of unique holiness—a celebration in marked contrast to the horrors raging throughout the world.

"Ruins all over the world are increasing," he went on. "Humanity is suffering and we all see this conflict degenerating into something more and more terrible."

"Reason and spirit," the Pontiff said, "seem to be darkened throughout the world. Christ only can deliver humanity . . . Christ only will lift the human species from the horrors now raging in the world."

It was sad and terrible, he added, that mankind had lost its way to the manger and that people had forgotten their religious and human duties.

Saying that all who followed Christ were saddened by the catastrophe of war, the Pope added that the faithful were able to view it "with the hopes offered to you by your faith."

He said he alone could not bring the war to an end but declared:—

"There are two things we will certainly do: First, we shall do whatever is in our power to help and decrease the sufferings of all the warriors, of the prisoners of war, of the internees.

"Second, we must all remember the power of our faith.

Thoughts at Christmas

MERRY CHRISTMAS . . . a familiar greeting to us all in Canada at this festive season — so also was it to those unhappy peoples of the occupied countries before they were overrun by the oppressors. Let us remember too, that with them, as with most of us, Christmas was a time for sleigh bells and wood fires, the happy cries of little children, family reunions, turkey with cranberry sauce, plum pudding and presents — but they will not see these things again until we have set them free.

In the fever-laden jungles of war-scarred Pacific islands, the frozen wastes of Russia; the bloodsoaked soil of Italy and China; the blazing skies over the continents of the earth; and in the waters of the seven seas, thousands of Allied soldiers, sailors and airmen will in performance of their duty regard Christmas very much as just an other day, though they will in some form mark the day.

In millions of homes children will say "Merry Christmas" to the picture of a soldier, sailor or airmen—father who may never return. Carillons in many parts of the civilized world will play Christmas carols from the same edifices that hold the sacred names of those who gave their all in the First World War.

We all have faith that we shall be victorious in this struggle but too often forget that the time until final Victory is not to be measured in days, hours and minutes, but rather in the blood, sweat, and suffering of our comrades-in-arms. Every delay, even of a minute, means brave men shall die, because we falter.

Let us, therefore, decide on this Christmas Day that we shall not "flag nor fail", but firmly resolve from this day on to forsake personal interest and think only of "speeding the victory". Let us drive quickly through the valley of death to a world of peace on earth, good will toward men; a world, not of oppression and terror but of liberty and justice where all men may live in harmony forever.

This is a sacred duty bequeathed to us by those who have died in all corners of a war-torn world. We must keep faith, that they may sleep safe in the knowledge that they have not died in vain and that some day soon all the peoples of the world shall be free to enjoy a MERRY CHRISTMAS.

RAIL STRIKE SET FOR DEC. 30 HAS BEEN CALLED OFF

Two Main Brotherhoods Willing to Arbitrate Whole Wage Dispute

MEET PRESIDENT

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—Chiefs of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the locomotive engineers announced at the White House today they were calling off the strike set for Dec. 30 as far as their two unions are concerned.

They said they were acting in view of President Roosevelt's proposal to arbitrate the whole wage dispute, involving both operating and non-operating brotherhoods.

A. F. Whitney, President of the Trainmen, and Alvanley Johnston, head of the locomotive engineers, made the announcement after conferring with James F. Byrnes, War Mobilization Director, and Fred M. Vinson, Economic Stabilization Chief.

Whitney said action to withdraw their strike call was decided on despite the fact that the three other operating unions had declined to go along with the President's arbitration proposal.

The unions which have refused arbitration are the firemen and enginemen, the conductors, and switchmen.

Asked whether the two unions agreeing to arbitrate could keep the railroad running, Whitney replied:

"Now you are getting into complicated matters."

JAP DIET CONVENES

New York, Dec. 24 — (AP) — The Japanese Diet convened in Tokyo today, according to Japanese radio and press reports recorded by U. S. government monitors. The reading of an Imperial rescript from Emperor Hirohito on the convening of the Diet was in order for today with the actual formal opening ceremonies scheduled for Sunday. The Diet is not in session tomorrow, Dec. 25, anniversary of the death of Emperor Tenno.

CANADIANS USE BAYONETS TO DIG OUT LAST NAZIS

8th Army Drives Northward to Capture Vezzani, 3 Miles S. W. of Ortona

VIOLENT FIGHTING

Algiers, Dec. 24 (AP)—Fighting in snow and rain, the 8th Army has driven northward and captured the village of Vezzani three miles southwest of Ortona and the Canadian 1st Division is digging the last Germans out of Ortona with bayonets, it was announced today.

The whole Italian front was blanketed by wet, wintry weather which handicapped operations both aground and in the air.

The most violent fighting continued in the Ortona area, where the Germans battled desperately to retain the eastern anchor of their crumbling defence line.

A military commentator said the enemy still held one corner of Ortona and that many of the Germans were fighting to the death rather than retreat. This had turned the Canadians' struggle for the city into a house-to-house campaign with bayonets and small arms.

An indication of the fierce defence the Germans were waging was seen in one roadside cemetery near the town, where there were more than 100 German graves.

Other units of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army were pressing relentlessly northward despite the weather.

Vezzani, the village which British troops captured yesterday, is about a mile north of the highway between Ortona and Orsogna.

In Outskirts of Villagrande

Other British troops fought their way into the outskirts of Villagrande, two miles southwest of Ortona.

Weather limited action on the 5th Army front largely to patrolling and in the only two decisive moves announced in today's communique the American troops gained some high ground a mile east of Acquafondata and lost a hill half a mile southeast of Viticuso which they had captured previously. This fighting was taking place in the mountainous area directly north of German-held Mignano situated on the main western road to Rome.

GERMANS DECLARE ROCKET GUN USED FOR FIRST TIME

Channel Duel Between German Convoy and British Long-Range Batteries Opened

NO CONFIRMATION

By E. D. BALL
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 24—(CP)—The German High Command announced today its naval shore batteries had shelled targets at Dover, Deal and Folkestone, across the channel from Nazi-controlled France.

Translations of the Berlin radio's first account of the action had led to belief the Germans had announced use of "rocket shells," but a recheck showed the phrase employed by the Germans—"Leucht Granate"—meant "flare shells" or tracers.

Leucht-Granate is a phrase which could reasonably be translated "rocket," but in the sense of a distress rocket. Because of current talk abroad of alleged German plans to use giant rocket guns to shell London, listeners here made their original translation in this connection.

Many Air Attacks

There have been many Allied air attacks on a section of the French coast which has come to be known as the "rocket-gun coast" because of supposition that emplacements for such may be located there.

No damage from last night's over-channel shelling was announced.

German shells that struck the Dover-Folkestone coastal area were "no different from the shelling we've had down here before," said Associated Press Correspondent Carl Crowehurst, who has witnessed practically every cross-channel shelling of the war.

British long-range guns in the Dover area opened up shortly after 8 p.m. last night, and hurled shells across the strait for an hour and a quarter.

The action took place between Dover and Calais.

The latter area on the French coast has been heavily pounded for the last four days by Allied air forces, and is considered the logical location for rocket gun batteries.

GOT PRESENT EARLY

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 24 — (AP)—E. W. Holcomb, U.S. Weather Bureau meteorologist here, won't have a present to give his grandson Christmas morning. "It was a sled." Holcomb says, "and there was snow on the ground, and I couldn't see any white Christmas ahead." So he gave the youngster the present in advance while snow still blanketed Springfield.

London, Dec. 24—(AP)—A great fleet of R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. bombers struck a heavy bolw against Berlin last night, its seventh big attack in five weeks.

The Canadian share in the raid was carried out by Lancasters of the bomber group and by R. C. A. F. Pathfinders who joined R. A. F. aircraft in going ahead of the main force to drop flares to outline the selected target.

The night cost the R. A. F. 17 planes, lowest yet for a major raid. All Canadian aircraft returned safely. At the same time intruder partols were flown over the continent by R. C. A. F. fighters, without loss.

The attack on Berlin probably brought destruction of the German capital near the three-quarter mark.

Large Fires Started

The Christmas eve deluge of high explosives and incendiaries once more started great fires raging through the world's fourth largest city. It emphasized that the Allies are not going to let seasonal sentiment interfere with invaluable bombing weather in which to pave the way for the final invasion drive.

The giant four-engined planes, switching their usual tactics for onslaughts on the Reich capital, flew over the North Sea at midnight instead of following the usual southerly routes. Previous R. A. F. attacks generally have been in early evening.

First German reports of the raid said workers' quarters had been hit. The broadcast claimed a considerable number of the attacking bombers were shot down by Nazi fighters and anti-aircraft fire despite the change in R. A. F. strategy.

Nazis Call it 'Terror Raid'

The German International Information Bureau said the raid was a "terror attack" made "in the early hours of Christmas eve."

Even before today's raid it had been estimated the German capital was half destroyed in six big raids carried out by the R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. at a cost of 101 bombers.

In the campaign to obliterate this so-called "king of targets" the R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. had attacked in great force the nights of Dec. 2, losing 41 planes and dropping 1,500 tons of explosives; Nov. 26, losing 32 planes in unloading 1,000 tons; Nov. 23, Nov. 22 and Nov. 18.

Into Fifth Day

The daylight campaign against targets on the continent moved into its fifth straight day as waves of Allied bombers and fighters droned over the Channel coast toward Northern France.

More than 1,000 tons of explosives were dropped on Berlin last night, the Air Ministry announced. It brought the total weight dropped on Berlin in seven raids to approximately 11,000 tons — about the weight loosed on devastated Hamburg.

It made the year's total on the capital about 18,000 tons.

The raid was the second big blow on Berlin in eight nights and bomber command's second big operation of the week. On Monday it cascaded 2,000 tons on Frankfurt and Mannheim-Ludwigshafen.

The casualties on the Berlin raid may have been even less than 17, since the figure lumped losses from simultaneous small attacks on unspecified targets in central and western Germany. Berlin said one of the targets was Aachen — ancient city of Aix-La-Chappelle, industrial and rail centre in western Germany.

Did Not Suspect

Germany's air defenders did not suspect Berlin was last night's target until it was too late for them to get fighter planes to the capital, returning fliers said.

"We had them absolutely foxed," one squadron leader commented. The R.A.F. and Canadian bombers switched their tactics for the onslaught, flying over the North Sea at midnight instead of following the usual southerly route. Previous attacks on Berlin generally have been in the early evening.

Returning crews told of huge fires and a great smoke pall rising as high as 10,000 feet.

"We could see a deep red glow from 120 miles away," one pilot said.

Saw Only One Fighter

"The defences seemed to have no punch in them and I saw only one fighter during the whole operation," a Lancaster gunner asserted.

A significant fact of the new Nazi morale manoeuvres was their putting on the radio a soldier home from the Russian front who expressed amazement at the horror of the devastation of Berlin.

This, in addition to being an obvious move to solidify the home front and the eastern front in their crushing reverses, also hinted a return to a "wailing" policy of frankly acknowledging bombing destruction. German propagandists have swung to this method when awful facts have belied their pooh-poohing efforts.

This was one of the first overt hints that the Berlin bombings had gnawed to the vitals of morale. Up to now the Nazi propaganda lines has been largely a "we can take it" theme.

Interned Fliers Find Boredom Tough A Foe As Flak and Enemy Fighters

Allied fliers interned by neutral Sweden at the mining town of Falun, on Lake Runn 120 miles northwest of Stockholm, have an easy life, but find it boring. John Colburn of the Stockholm Associated Press Bureau visited the camp and sent the following dispatch with this notation: "All hopes the story would serve as a Christmas letter from them in view of the deplorable mail service from here."

By JOHN H. COLBURN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Falun, Sweden, Dec. 24 — (AP)—Ninety-six Allied airmen including 18 Canadians have discovered that internment boredom is as tough a foe as all the flak and Nazi fighters they ever encountered.

Interned by neutral Sweden, most of them perhaps for the duration of the war, they live in a fraternity house atmosphere in three former rest homes of the sleepy town of Falun, one of the country's scenic spots. All crashed or parachuted or made forced landings on Swedish soil after raids against Germany or Norway.

With few military restrictions and no routine, they lead the life of vacationers. But, given a chance, all would go back tomorrow to combat operations.

This view was shared by every one of the 66 Americans, 18 Canadians — including seven new arrivals who parachuted into Sweden after their plane was shot up Dec. 17 on a Berlin raid — seven Poles, three Welshmen and two Englishmen.

Might be Exchanged

Actually, their only chance of getting back is through the exchange of an equal number of Allied and German airmen who were forced down in Sweden.

A typical winter day for the internees starts around 9 a. m. when they form a breakfast line. It is just getting light then. After breakfast they hike or ski through the snow-blanketed woods. Hockey players and skaters get workouts on nearby lakes.

Lunch is served cafeteria style but at the evening meal the one-time rest homes which once catered to old women take on a real fraternity house aspect as the boys clean up, don coats and are served at tables, in groups of two and four.

Except for the lack of eggs and the frequent fish dishes, the boys have no complaint about food. They were pleasantly surprised that they could get ice cream.

There is a bridge game nearly every day and a poker game or two going most of the time especially

Twenty Invitations Needed in City To Entertain Airmen for Christmas

The problem of spending Christmas thousands of miles from home has been successfully solved by the War Services Department of the Y.M.C.A. which operates under the supervision of Ron Hupfield, director. The "Y" made a request to local and district citizens to open their homes to boys in the armed forces who were forced to remain in the vicinity of Belleville due to the inability to reach their own homes in Canada and the impossibility of doing so for the boys of the sister Dominions, Australia and New Zealand, as well as those serving in Canada with the R.A.F. from the British Isles.

Approximately sixty boys' names have been received by Ron Hupfield of those unable to spend Christmas at home. Of this number well over two-thirds have already been accommodated in homes in the city and on farms near Madoc and Stirling. Approximately twenty homes have opened their doors to these men in the city, some offering full Christmas holidays to the boys, putting them up for the night, or several nights, others have invited them to spend Christmas day with them and share in their family festivities. Two Ordnance Corps men have been accommodated on a farm near Madoc. A soldier from the Maritimes is spending Christmas near Moira with people who wrote to the "Y" and asked for a serviceman, also requesting to be notified what he would like for Christmas. An airman from Winnipeg is spending his Christmas leave at Stirling, while in the city one woman who operates a boarding house has asked that four boys be sent to her for the Christmas time and she will put them up overnight. This same person has been taking one or more boys each Sunday all through the year. Two R.A.F. boys from England will have a pleasant Christmas at Corbyville.

Mr. Hupfield informed the Ontario Intelligencer that he is expecting more invitations from city families during the day, and is confident that every boy who has no place to spend Christmas at this time will find that someone wants him before the day ends. A number of these boys will have to spend the night wherever they go and a special request is made for a few more families to offer this accommodation. During the time the reporter from the Ontario Intelligencer was speaking to Mr. Hupfield a telephone call came in from a person who is driving to Toronto this afternoon and would be willing to take along two or three of the boys who were travelling there. As the reporter left the building two R.A.F. boys came in and deposited their kit on the floor of the lobby and were greeted by Mr. Hupfield. He asked them if they were going to Toronto by any chance and it developed they were. The boys will travel with the generous person who telephoned. Innumerable small favors have been extended to these boys from strange lands during the past two weeks, and Mr. Hupfield states that he is overwhelmed by the demonstrations of good will and patriotism.

Soldier and Family Left Homeless As Result of Fire

Trenton, Dec. 24 (Special)—Charles A. Wannamaker, a private in the Canadian Army, and stationed at Kingston, his wife and two children of three years and three months are homeless as the result of a fire which swept their property yesterday morning. Mrs. Wannamaker was awakened at their home on the Wooler Road, about a mile from Trenton, to find their chicken coop on fire. She summoned her husband, who had just arrived home on leave, and between them they summoned the aid of neighbors and endeavored to get help from the Trenton fire brigade. This latter help however, was unobtainable as the property was not in Trenton. The fire brigade at 6 R.D. Trenton Air Station was called and quickly responded, but by the time they arrived the house had also become ignited from the blaze in the chicken coop and was now fully on fire and could not be saved. However, the brigade protected several other nearby buildings.

Pte. Wannamaker was granted leave by his Commanding Officer until January 2nd when his plight was ascertained, and he moved his family to the home of his father-in-law, Earl Simpson, Brighton where they are now being taken care of.

Besides his house and contents his loss consisted of some twenty chickens.

Pte. Wannamaker is at a loss to know how the fire started and he is of the opinion possibly thieves were in the coop and had already stolen some of his chickens, as he was only able to account for twelve carcasses of the twenty known chickens that were in the coop.

Provincial Police of Belleville are investigating the fire.

Rotary Christmas Bingo

On Monday, the Trenton Rotary Club played host to the R.C.A.F. personnel of the Trenton Air Station, to a free Christmas bingo which was held in the sports hangar, and where 80 girls and boys of the R.C.A.F. filled 100 bingo tables.

Over 60 cash prizes, ranging from $1.00 to $5 were given away. Apples and cigarettes were distributed during the evening.

The Air Force band, under the direction of Bandmaster Hancock more than helped to make the evening a lively one. Community singing and Christmas carols were also part of the evening's entertainment.

A memorial service was also held in respect to those members of the armed forces who have given their lives to the cause of democracy.

The program was put on by the war services committee of the Trenton Rotary Club and was organized by Rotarian Norman Banfield, who also acted as commentator for the evening and who performed a masterly job at the mike in keeping everyone on their toes.

The Commanding Officer, Group Captain A. D. Bell-Irving, M.C., expressed the appreciation of the personnel under his command, and thanked the club president, George Cobley, and the war services committee chairman, Herb Smith, for their all-out effort in giving his girls and boys a grand evening of free entertainment."

There were 32 cases in Trenton

Floyd Genereaux for refusing to work, under the vagrancy act, was given a year's suspended sentence and ordered to pay costs of $3.50.

POPE APPEALS

"The road of humanity in this present confusion has been the road without God—against God. But those who erred still remain our brothers. No one has the right to feel sinless. We must all co-operate in the salvation of our brothers. To work, dearest brothers; do not stand idle. Let us start the reconstruction of the world."

Speaks in Sombre Atmosphere

The Pope, speaking in what he said was a "sombre atmosphere of death and hate" said the world beholds "only a conflict which degenerates into that form of warfare that excludes all restriction and restraint, as if it were the apocalyptic expression of a civilization in which ever-growing technical progress is accompanied by an ever-greater decline in the realm of the soul and of morality."

Those who had placed their faith in a world expansion of economic life, thinking this would draw the peoples together in a spirit of brotherhood with its gigantic contacts and superabundant division and multiplication of labor and wealth, had been disillusioned, he said.

These developments had "contributed in a thousand ways to generalize and accentuate the crisis of mankind," he said.

Terrifying want on one side and "proud and provoking opulence on the other" were ill-omened effects "which are not the last link in a chain of causes which led to the immense tragedy of today," he declared.

Those exponents of "Godless science" which was averse to recognizing the Creator of the universe also had been deluded, the Pontiff said.

NO PLACE TO PUT THEM

Toronto, Dec. 24 — (CP)—Precedent-setting presence of two women members in the Ontario Legislature may lead to establishment of what is technically known as a powder room at staid Queen's Park. Speculation surrounds the accommodation of Miss Agnes Macphail and Mrs. Luckock other than in the official opposition rooms occupied by the C.C.F.

Half of Eating Places Will Be Open Christmas

Belleville will fare much better than the people of Kingston when the the Boxing Day holiday arrives. About fifty per cent of the eating places and one of the hotel dining rooms will remain open while the rest of the restaurants and the one other hotel serving meals will close for the day. In Kingston, a survey of hotels and restaurants showed only one hotel and six of the larger restaurants will be open.

The explanation is practically the same in both instances, the employees want the day off to be with their families. Although eating will be a problem in Belleville this Christmas for people living in rooms with no cooking facilities, sufficient places will be open to cater to their needs. Turkey dinners will be featured on all menus. One Chinese cafe has decided to close on Saturday and remain closed until Wednesday, observing the weekly closing day on Tuesday. Considerable effort is being made by the proprietors of restaurants to make dining away from home as pleasant and appetizing as possible.

Goes on Furlough But $20 Poorer

Something of a new "racket" was practised in a local cafe late Thursday night when a soldier lost $20. from his wallet.

The soldier lad, Pte. A. Salena, of the RCASC, Kingston, was partaking of a sandwich in a downtown cafe when two girls joined him. When he produced his wallet to pay for his eats one of the girls asked to see some snapshots that were in the wallet. Later the other girl engaged the soldier in conversation. When Pte. Salena later counted his cash he was minus $20.

Police were notified and despite the fact the "men in blue" did find the girls in question, naturally they denied any such practices and no such sum of money was found on their person. Pte. Salena continued on his Christmas furlough a poorer, but wiser soldier.

A.E. Facer Presented With Purse of Money By Fellow Workers

Mr. Alfred E. Facer, 307 Foster Ave., who retired on pension from the C.N.R., on November 27th, was presented with a sum of money from his fellow employees of the locomotive department in which he worked as a machinist. The presentation was made by Mr. William Reeves and the address read by Mr. Albert Jones, locomotive foreman. Mr. Facer, who had worked on a railroad in England for fourteen years, came to Canada and entered the employ of the old Grand Trunk in 1902. Mr. Jones spoke in high praise of Mr. Facer and particularly of his good work and faithful service during those forty-two years.

$5,674 Subsidy Paid On Feed Grain Shipped Into Hastings County

Over $350,000 has been paid to Ontario farmers in subsidies on feed grains brought from Western Canada since the subsidy was inaugurated last August, according to an announcement from the Ontario Department of Agriculture. That Ontario farmers are taking every advantage of the opportunity to secure feed grain from the West is indicated by the fact that applications for subsidy are being received at the rate of about 1,500 per week.

In the breakdown of figures showing the amount of subsidy paid to each county it is shown that up until November 30th 3,170 tons had been shipped to Hastings upon which $5,674 was paid in subsidy. Subsidy paid in Lennox and Addington totalled $4,035, Northumberland $3,157, and in Prince Edward $2,756.

Subsidy payments on feed grain terminate on December 31st with all applications having to reach the department by January 31., 1944, it was stated.

God called him home, it was His will,
But in my heart I love him still.

When I am all alone,
For memory is the only thing

And hear him speak once more.
If you have a father,
Treasure him with care
For you never know his value
Till you see his empty chair.

BABCOCK — In loving memory of a dear Father, William Babcock, who passed away December 26th., 1942.

We little thought when leaving home
He would no more return;
That he, in death, so soon should sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
We do not know the pain he bore,
We did not see him die.
We only know he passed away
And never said "good-bye."

Clothes Are Rationed

All wear nondescript uniforms. All were in flying togs when they landed and there is not a complete uniform in the outfit. They have purchased civilian attire but must use it sparingly because clothes are rationed.

Falun merchants found in the airmen a good market for skates and hockey sticks. The Canadian fliers, headed by Flying Officer James J. McQuade of Toronto, are busy polishing their hockey game to play the Falun all-stars.

Training with McQuade for the game, feature of the Falun holiday season, are PO. Peter Davies of Montreal, PO. Hector Smith of Montreal, WO. Harry Read of Medicine Hat, Alta., Flt. Sgt. Lorne Cassidy, Regina, Flt. Sgt. John Gates of Calgary, Sgt. James Flick of Guelph, Ont., Flt. Sgt. Lloyd Kohnke of Dunblane, Sask., Sgt. Hector McLean of Star City, Sask., Sgt. Wilfred King of Gravenhurst, Ont., and PO. William Mainprise of Midale, Sask.

Names of the seven most recent Canadians to arrive were not available.

The townspeople like the airmen, and regularly entertain many of them. Many of the boys will observe a colorfun Swedish Christmas in Falun homes.

Generally there are few complaints but the internees would like more reading material and they wish the folks back home would write oftener.

CANADIANS USE

Clouds and storms kept heavy bombers and most of the other air forces on the ground, but American two-engined bombers struck simultaneously at three different points in the German rail artery along the Riviera in southern France and Italy.

At Imperial, several miles east of the French-Italian border, railroad yards and bridges were bombed. At the frontier town of Ventimiglia railroad yards and approaches also were blasted. And at Antheor in France, a short distance from Cannes, the huge north viaduct and approach was hit despite heavy flak.

Only a small number of fighter and fighter-bomber sorties were flown over the front and in these two enemy planes were destroyed. Spitfires off the coast of Corsica shot down a Junkers-88.

The air force announced that Wednesday night Bostons had bombed Miglianico near the 8th Army front.

Garage and Truck At Wooler Burned

Wooler.—A fire of undetermined origin caused the total loss of a double garage and truck to Mr. Vernie Jones of Wooler.

Mr. Jones had only recently made repairs to his car amounting to approximately $75.

Fortunately the brisk wind was blowing in an opposite direction, so the house escaped.

The Season of Good Will

The festive season through which the world is passing has the quality of molding men and women and children to the most unselfish acts. The expansiveness which stirs in the heart is an augury of the great possibilities of humanity when there shall be a world federation that will assure a lasting peace and add to the freedoms which mankind now possesses.

In this fifth Christmas during the war, those things for which the festival stands are seen as more and more necessary for humanity. Mankind even during so gigantic a struggle as this does not pass over this hallowed time but celebrates aptly and in full sincerity the occasion known as Christmas. The message of the time cheers the soldier, the sailor and the airman though they be far away. It strengthens the civilian at his or her task in the war effort, for by contrast it shows the benefits which flow from the Christmas spirit and from the holy season and manifest themselves in the hearts and lives of men. In the light of Christmas and its wide hospitality, in the open expressions of kindliness and friendship, in the enshrining of the life of the child as the centre of the family group and in the blessing of the home, the season enriches human lives.

In all too this season is so markedly practical for it shows good will in actual performance among men.

To the world after nineteen centuries Christmas brings glad tidings of great joy to all mankind.

Tribute to British Commonwealth

There was a striking story in the newspapers a few days ago, which quoted a Belgian as saying that Belgium might ask to be permitted to become a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations for the sake of world peace and that Belgium asked only one thing, that she be free. This is a fine tribute to the freedom which exists within the British Commonwealth and which provides an opportunity of partnership in the coming together of a group of independent nations for the sake of the world peace. Belgians like others have seen the fine example of the nations of the Commonwealth in the past and in the present struggle for the preservation of freedom and the liberation of the Nazi-dominated states.

It is a high honor to have such recognition of the British principle as it works in the world.

Hun Weakness for Luxury

The successes of the Russians on the eastern front and the Fifth Army in Italy have brought an interesting fact to light, that the Germans had fitted up their underground quarters or both fronts with every luxury and with every intention of staying in them for a long time. When the Russians took recovered areas which had been occupied by the Germans, they found underground hardwood floors, and looted paintings and other works of art adorning the walls of dugouts, with modern heating, modern kitchen, electric service and plenty of warm bedding.

In the mountain country over which the Fifth Army has advanced were found the underground domiciles of Nazi officers which the Germans had been forced to abandon by the stern reality of Allied progress. They must have felt badly leaving these underground shelters because they had made them very habitable and attractive by the loot of every place which has felt the weight of the Nazi hand.

Hitler used to refer to the democracies as effete or weakened by civilization and democracy, something he cannot prove because it is untrue. How well the men of the democratic nations can carry themselves in the presence of war conditions is known to the Germans as well as to the Allies. There is no Allied weakness.

But Hitler's Nazi group on the other hand are a degenerate crowd trying to reap where they have not labored, except in the cause of wrong-doing. They love comfort, do such men as Goering, Ribbentrop, and all the rest of the savage company and the officers are tainted with the same savage desire for creature comfort and use the furnishings of robbed museums and academies and of public property and private property in the overrun countries for their own pleasure. In Italy treasures of art were found stored in the caves in which the officers made their billets.

They had robbed Italian houses and public buildings and cities and had collected these treasures in the caves for ultimate dispatch to Germany, though then in use by the Nazi officers for their own comfort.

The advance of the Russians and the Fifth Army destroyed their plans and they were driven out into the cold austerity of a Russian and Italian winter.

The Russians and their Allies in Italy who have not pampered themselves have shown their rugged strength when matched with the so-called "supermen" of Adolf's following.

This love of comforts at the cost of nations whom the Germans have robbed of priceless possessions which mean so much more to the creators and true owners than to the savage or barbaric Hun shows the selfishness of the Nazi aggressors. Everything about Nazism bears the mark and stain of overbearing selfishness.

Apron—Dad's Servitude

(Philadelphia Inquirer)

"It's the war" applies to virtually everything nowadays, including aprons for men, as displayed in a New York fashion show. For the absence of housewives, working in war plants, has forced a multitude of house husbands to perform the duties of kitchen police, formerly necessitated only by the maid's weekly day out.

Obviously the distinctively feminine apron was never designed for the manly form. It's true that men engaged in certain trades have long worn aprons, but the styles are not adapted to the home. What has been needed is a neat compromise between the butcher's garment and the frilly feminine contraption. This seems to have been achieved by the exhibits on view in New York.

The modern house husband's apron is said to be equally becoming to "thins" and "medium stouts," as they are known in the trade. If so, they must be triumphs of the tailor's art. Reference to fat men is discreetly omitted, which is doubtless just as well. There are few sadder domestic sights than a Falstaff in an apron, washing dishes or bending painfully over a stove. Fat men should be officially exempted from kitchen duties and not merely as a matter of form.

There is encouragement in the thought that this new badge of masculine servitude is to be only for the duration, for the loss of paternal dignity might have an undesirable effect on the unruly rising generation. Certainly no youngster would like to be told that he's tied to his father's apron strings.

Karsh and G. B. S.

(Manchester Guardian)

London newspapers are now very properly giving much attention to Mr. G. B. Shaw in view of the early publication of his new book which he describes as really a child's guide to politics, so one must hasten to be in the movement. Mr. Karsh, the eminent Canadian photographer, who was honored by a sitting from Mr. Shaw, gave one this story that Mr. Shaw told him.

Mr. Shaw had been explaining his preference for a photograph in portraiture. A painting was 75 percent artist, 25 percent sitter; a photograph 80 percent sitter, 20 percent photographer; and Mr. Karsh asked how about caricatures?

Mr. Shaw's story was something like this: "Caricatures are never like me. Low's aren't like me at all. One day when I went into a friend's flat I saw a caricature of me that seemed to be good—cruel, of course, but still what a caricature should be. I thought I would bring Low to see it. Then it moved and I saw that it was a mirror."

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1943, Edgar A. Guest)

THERE WAS AN INN

There was an inn where laughter rang,
There was an inn where splendor stirred,
But when on high the angels sang
Only the frightened shepherds heard.

There was an inn, scarce known before,
That housed good folk at Bethlehem.
Came two tired travellers to the door.
The landlord said: "No room for them!"

There was a woman, Mary called,
Whose travail time was evident.
Unto a cheerless stable, stalled
For oxen, she that night was sent.

Above the stable gleamed a star
As Joseph made a bed of straw,
But only shepherds from afar
That symbol in the heavens saw.

And there the Prince of Peace was born
And in a manger laid was He,
But only shepherds with the morn
In adoration came to see.

The merchants did a large business today; the stores were crowded.

The firemen have suggested that the fire alarm apparatus be attached to the town bell.

Additional gas burners for the illumination of the dials of the new town clock are being installed. There will be four jets to each dial which will afford an amount of brilliancy amply sufficient for the purpose.

Mr. John Francis, County Surveyor, is calling for bids for forty five cords of hard wood.

The Hon. Robert Read will represent the Belleville Board of Trade at the meeting of the Dominion Board of Trade in Ottawa on Jan. 21st.

GERMAN YOUNGSTERS SAY SANTA KILLED ON EAST FRONT

CANNOT PROVE CONTENTION BY THE BUSY POSTMASTER

Salt Lake City, Dec. 24 (AP)—A woman accused of mailing a postcard bearing defamatory statements was on trial. Her attorneys, arguing delivery of the card indicated the postmaster considered it within the law, asked for dismissal. "A postmaster," demurred Federal Judge Tillman D. Johnson "especially in December, cannot read all the cards".

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Canadians of 100 years ago worked harder and had a more diffiult time together than do present-day citizens. Just read on and see!

"A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse". . .Many settlers just beginning to clear their land had to do without horses until they became better established. They used oxen instead to haul grain and logs. The poor brutes had many a long pull through woods studded with stumps and over roads that were seas of mud. They dragged the most primitive kind of waggons and sleighs. These often consisted of a sapling fastened to the yoke, with a plank or two nailed across the fork of the log which trailed on the ground. Grain was taken to the grist mills on such conveyances.

The pampered cattle of today would probably not relish a daily diet of twigs. This, however, was the winter food of many farm animals in the early part of the 19th century because, during the first year of settling, few homesteaders had a supply of fodder. They were short of barns, too. When they did get around to putting up rude shelters near their log cabins they gave their horses priority. Cows and oxen were tethered to tree stumps or left in the lee of strawstacks all winter. When blizzards blew down from the north, cattle perished by the hundreds.

There is a fairly impressive record of progress in statistics of the year 1833, when a million and a half of people in the British North American Provinces owned 200,000 horses, nearly one million horned cattle, 700,000 hogs and one and a quarter million sheep.

Land was just about the cheapest thing in the country a hundred and more years back and was "traded" around at a great rate. If the prospective purchaser owned a horse there'd always be a gleam of interest in the land-owner's eye. It was considered a fair deal to barter a lot for a horse, complete with saddle and briddle! The most intriguing part of the whole business—to us—is that many of the lots sold for next to nothing, are now worth "real money" because they are located in the heart of busy cities.

However good times were coming. With the signing of the Reciprocity Treaty, made in 1854, by Lord Elgin with the United States, Canadians found that their land was bringing in more "dough" because its produce fetched much better prices than before. Naturally they began to value their lots more highly and put a stiffer purchase price on them. Cattle, too, went at an excellent figure with the increase of trade between Canada and the States.

With prosperity on its way around the corner Canada's citizens took to considering ways and means of making life easier and more pleasant. Pantries filled up with goodies and dinners ran into courses. Housewives became concerned with the keeping of expensive foods and ice was therefore more valued. But there were no refrigerators then, so other methods had to be employed to conserve ice. Here is a popular plan: "Put the ice in a deep dish or jug; cover it with a plate, and place the vessel on a pillow stuffed with feathers, and cover the top with another pillow carefully, by this means excluding the external air. Feathers are well-known bad conductors of heat, and in consequence the ice is preserved from melting." Six pounds of ice could be kept thus for eight days.

15 Persons Missing As Weary Firemen Probe Fire Ruins

Hull, Que., Dec. 24 — (CP) — Weary firemen were expected to begin today combing the ruins of the main street Central Hotel as they continued their search for 15 persons missing since fire swept through the 60-year-old structure early yesterday.

Clouds of smoke and steam, believed to be from flames still burning in the basement of the hotel and adjoining buildings which also were destroyed, prevented firemen last night from checking through the blackened wreckage in their efforts to account for the missing, all guests of the hostel.

Preliminary reports yesterday indicated that 11 to 13 persons, occupying 11 rooms in the 26-room hotel, were unaccounted for but the number rose to 15 last night after authorities had been able to make a further check.

Forty-four persons were believed to have been in the hotel when fire, reported to have originated in a washroom on the top floor, broke out in the early-morning hours and raced through the three-storey building.

The flames quickly spread to adjoining buildings, including a cigar store and a shoe shop. A number of persons living in apartments above the stores fled their homes to safety.

The task of accounting for those in the hostel was made difficult because the hotel registry was destroyed and the intense cold caused those evacuated to seek other shelter immediately, some in hotels and some at the homes of friends.

Occupants of 20 of the hotel rooms had been accounted for up to last night — a total of 29 of the 44 guests.

Answers Commissioner George A. Reid

Belleville, Dec. 23rd.

Editor The Ontario Intelligencer;

It is not customary for me to write to your paper concerning matters of public interest but I was very much amazed to read in your issue of Wednesday, December 22nd., accusations made by Commissioner Reid at the last meeting of the Commission.

These accusations did not seem to be specific except that they were directed against the Manager of the Utilities Commission, Mr. O. H. Scott, whom I consider one of the fairest, most efficient and capable men who are filling public offices in this city. This opinion is expressed by one who has had the privilege of serving both in Council and on the Commission, and I feel therefore that I have had good foundation and experience for expressing this opinion.

The manager of our Public Utility has always been ready and willing to give information concerning the Utilities to any alderman, business executive or taxpayer of the city and any information that he gives can always be substantiated by available statistics.

Unfortunately all of our public officials are always open to criticism and generally receive it without being in a position to make reply, and for that reason I feel justified in pointing out to Mr. Reid and the public the unfairness of the accusations made regarding the Gas plant.

The only direct accusations made seem to be that "In the first eight months that the Utilities had the gas plant under their control the profit was $7,000 and since that time it has steadily decreased and nothing very much has been done to boost sales of gas fixtures." During the two years that I served on the Commission at least 60% of the time and effort of the Commission and the manager was devoted to problems concerning the possibility of improving the position of the gas plant. Owing to the inroads of electrical apparatus and in unfair statements concerning the position of the gas plant, the customers of this utility had been declining from the time it was taken over by the Commission and was still continuing to decline during the year 1940.

During the election period of 1940 I advised the citizens of Belleville that in my opinion the gas plant was a losing proposition and would continue to lose regardless of the amount of money that would be spent toward improving it, that after making a careful survey and study of this department it was my opinion, and I believe the opinion of Commissioner Duff at that time, that the city would be well advised to close the gas plant, and to ascertain if the Provincial Hydro would assist in helping the gas customers to change over to electricity.

Mr. Reid appealed to the electorate to continue the gas plant at any cost and from the results of that election I felt that the citizens of Belleville wished that policy to be followed, and I presume that the Commission advised the management of the Utilities to follow and adhere to that policy. Knowing Mr. Scott as I do, I feel that he would follow the policy laid down by the Commission whether he felt that the policy was correct or not, and I therefore feel that it was most unfair of Mr. Reid to accuse Mr. Scott of being responsible for losses that have occurred in this department.

Mr. Reid apparently challenges Mr. Scott to a public debate on this subject and as a citizen of Belleville I would think that Mr. Scott would be very ill-advised to accept Mr. Reid's challenge. If Mr. Reid has any other accusations to make against Mr. Scott or any of our city officials, I would suggest that he make them in writing and to the proper authorities, rather than through the press or on a public platform.

Thanking you for your space in order to bring this matter to the public, and wishing you and all of the readers of this Belleville paper a Happy and Prosperous New Year. I am

Yours truly,
G. C. BARAGAR.

MEANING OF "CATHOLIC"

The word "catholic" is derived from Greek "kata," meaning "concerning" or "according to," and "holos," whole.

It literally signifies universal, general or all embracing.

The term is still used in its original sense, and a person with broad and liberal views is said to have "a catholic mind."

"Catholic" began to be applied about the second century A.D., to distinguish the Church at large from the local units or from heretical or schismatic sects.

In the course of time the word was interpreted as referring to the worldwide extension, doctrinal completeness, adaption to the needs of all people and the moral and spiritual perfection of the Christian Church.

The various groups that sprang from the original church and that were denounced by the Popes as unorthodox or heretical refused to abandon the use of the term "catholic," with the result that it is still employed by many churches besides the Roman Catholic. Several small denominations use the term in their names, and Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians and other denominations alike declare their belief in "the Holy Catholic Church" when they recite the Apostles' Creed.

The Epistles of James, Peter I, Peter II, John I, John II, John III, and Jude are sometimes known as the "Catholic Epistles."

These seven epistles are not addressed to specifically named churches or individuals, and all of them except John II and John III deal for the most part with general rather than with local or individual questions. Hence the early church fathers considered them as addressed to the general, universal or catholic church; that is, the church at large.

Following the late Greek manuscripts, the translators of the King James version of the Bible expressed this idea in the title of five of these books—The General Epistle of James, The First Epistle of Peter, The Second Epistle of Peter, The First Epistle General of John, and The General Epistle of Jude.

Golden Anniversary Marked by Many Tributes of Friendship

Stirling.—An event of unusual interest to a very large circle of friends and relatives was the Golden Wedding Anniversary celebration which marked the completion of fifty years of happy wedded life for Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Fitchette of Stirling, over the weekend. Mrs. Fitchette was the former, Miss P. Howe of Bogart and the marriage ceremony was performed by the late Rev. Johnston in Hungerford. Mr. and Mrs. Fitchette immediately established their home in Tweed where Mr. Fitchette for thirteen years carried on a successful carriage and blacksmith business and while his residence continued there Mr. Fitchette took an active part in municipal affairs, serving in the village council, and also was an official of the former Methodist (now United) church there. Moving from Tweed to Madoc Junction, Mr. Fitchette took up farming where he carried on successfully for twenty years, prior to retiring to Stirling in 1927. While at Madoc Jct., both Mr. and Mrs. Fitchette were prominent in the work of Eggleton United Church and every noble community effort received their staunch support. In Stirling, Mr. Fitchette served on the village council, and is a director of the Board of Agriculture, and gives valuable service in the promotion of fall fairs. Mr. Fitchette is an elder of St. Paul's United Church and Mrs. Fitchette has been active in the Woman's Association and Laurel Rebekah Lodge. Mr. Fitchette is also a member of the Oddfellows Lodge.

On Saturday afternoon the sons and daughter and their families, namely: Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fitchette and Rosella, of Madoc Jct., Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fitchette, and Marilyn of West Huntingdon; Mr. and Mrs. Carman Fitchette, Helen and Billy of 4th Line, Rawdon and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Strickland, Roy and Ronald of Stirling, gathered to do honor to the bride and groom of fifty years.

An address was read by Mrs. Strickland while a sheaf of bronze 'mums was presented by Marilyn Fitchette, the youngest granddaughter and a "lounge chair" as a further gift from the family.

On Sunday, the sisters of Mrs. Fitchette along with their husbands, namely, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Strickland of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Parks, also a brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Alexander of Picton, were entertained to dinner at night. Following dinner they presented a purse to the bridal couple. Mr. E. P. Strickland of Bellevile, proposed a toast to the bride and groom, which was responded to by the groom.

On Monday, Mr. and Mrs. Fitchette were at home to their friends and relatives from three to five in the afternoon and eight to ten in the evening. Mrs. A. E. Strickland received the guests at the door. While Mrs. G. H. Leury and Mrs. Jas. Barron poured tea while Mrs. Roy Welbourne and Mrs. Frank Stapley served. Rev. David Gray, minister of St. Paul's United Church, spoke briefly while Mr. Chas. Linn presented Mr. and Mrs. Fitchette with a beautiful potted plant on behalf of the congregation of St. Paul's.

Mrs. Murney Hick and Mrs. Roy Finkle presented a bouquet of gorgeous 'mums from the Rebekah lodge.

Other numbers on the program were a solo by Mrs. (Rev.) Townsend with Miss Phylis Vance as accompanist, solo by Mrs. Cecil Macklin and solo by Miss Marilyn Fitchette also a brief address by Rev. Townsend.

In the evening, Mrs. George Meggison and Mrs. Harry Potter poured tea while Mrs. Jay McMath and Miss Florence McRae of Belleville, served.

Solos were also given by Ronald Strickland, Mr. John B. Hagerman of Minto, Miss Marylin Fitchette. Miss Rosella Fitchette favored with an instrumental number and Billy Fitchette gave a recitation A number of speeches were given including one by Mr. N. J. McNair of Trenton, (who was groomsman, at the wedding fifty years ago), who along with Mrs. McNair, presented a beautiful mirror, adorned with gold etchings, symbolic of the golden anniversary.

Mr. McNair recalled many pleasant memories and told how as partner with Mr. Fitchette in the carriage business at Tweed, they encountered many difficulties relative of those pioneer days. Mr. Will Sparrow of Belleville, who was a guest at the wedding fifty years ago spoke briefly.

Mr. Fitchette voiced the appreciation of himself and Mrs. Fitchette to their friends and relatives for the many gifts and good wishes received and related some humorous incidents of the past fifty years.

Evening Elegance

By ALICE ALDEN

THERE'S NO doubt about the amount of diversity and novelty that marks the short-skirted evening outfit. One of the best ideas is a black woollen suit-dress worn with white touches, which, in this luxurious and lovely ensemble, is of ermine. Nicole de Paris has made this typical 'Nikki" outfit in black woollen, the jacket front with a fine lattice of black jet beads. The hat, muff and Ascot scarf are of snowy ermine.

'Y' War Services Conduct Yuletide Program for Airmen in District

Just like every other place, there has been a hustle and bustle at the Y.M.C.A. this week and chiefly among the girls of the Red Triangle Hostess Club, under the leadership of Ron Hupfield, Y. M. C. A. War Services supervisor. A festive holiday program is being conducted for the entertainment of the Air Force personnel—a program bubbling over with warmth and good cheer—one to make the airmen forget the fact that they are away from their folks and can not go home for Christmas and try to bring them, in some small way, the gaiety of the Yuletide season.

It all began on Monday night, when a number of girls of the Red Triangle Club, with the help of about twenty-five airmen, decked the lobby, lounge and games room in the traditional Christmas finery. The walls were draped with red and green crepe paper garland ropes; at each window was hung a Christmas wreath to greet the passers-by of the world outside; in the lobby a huge Christmas tree was dressed in small glowing lights of various hues, and meeting the eyes of everyone as they entered the lobby from the street was a placard lettered with the very appropriate and familiar old phrase, "Merry Christmas."

A great deal of the fine artistry work, exhibited on the bulletin board and elsewhere, is due to the efforts of Miss Ada Moore, a Red Triangle girl and LAC. John Thorne from Mountain View.

Every possible step has been taken by the "Y" to make Christmas Day a happy and remembered one for every airman away from home. Arrangements have been made through the kindness, hospitality and good-will of the people of Belleville to have airmen at their homes for Yuletide dinners or suppers.

On Tuesday of this week, a Christmas formal was held in the Trianon ballroom by the Red Triangle Club, and on Wednesday night a cabaret dance in the "Y" gymnasium. On Thursday night, everyone gathered in the lounge and in the pale, shimmering glow of the burning fireplace and the lighted Christmas bulbs, raised their voices in joyous carolling, accompanied by Mr. Bill Navan at the piano. Games and refreshments of cake, cookies and fruit brought a very pleasant evening to a close. Tonight, the Yuletide will be heralded in at the "Y" with a fireside party of Christmas carols, popcorn and eats. On Christmas Day, dishes of fruit will be served to the boys before they go out to the homes in the city to enjoy all the delicacies of a Christmas dinner.—In the afternoon and evening the usual open house program of bowling, table tennis, small games, singsongs, carols, music and refreshments will be in progress and at the disposal of every airman.

High praise and heartfelt appreciation is due to Ron Hupfield and the Red Triangle girls for their work in making the Y. M. C. A. "a home away from home" for every airman who goes there.

Ode to An Onion

Years ago, before the war,
That lowly onion in the store
Was scorned, by many who would today
Pay much to cart a bag away.

So, you that get this onion dear,
Don't turn your nose up high and sneer.
But rather, hide it far away
To stuff your turkey Christmas Day.

And so, when all the battles o'er,
And onions once more in the store,
Don't turn your back on the smelly thing,
Remember, the onion once was King.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 24. (CP)—Husband savers: One or two precautions in the kitchen while the Christmas or New Year's dinner is being cooked will keep the man of the house happy while carving. First on the list is to have the bird cooked to a turn. Second, the platter should be large enough to give the carver sufficient room in which to work. Other essentials include, a sharp, long-bladed carving knife, a steel for sharpening, a carving fork, serving spoon for dressing and a small side platter on which to place legs and wings.

Turkey Stretcher:

The home economists of the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture have found that several extra well-formed slices of breast meat from turkey or chicken can be obtained if the wishbone is removed before the bird is stuffed. The bone should be removed from the inside to keep the outside skin unbroken

Dagwood himself: never made a sandwich that tasted better than this one. It's one of the many good things that come from the testing kitchen in the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Nothing could be better to serve to a hungry party of holiday skiers or skaters.

To make it for six you will need 6 lightly buttered slices of toast (bread cut half an inch thick); 6 slices of cooked ham at least 1-8 inch thick; 6 slices of cranberry jelly 1-2 inch thick and 2-3 cup shredded cheese. The ham is grilled or sauted lightly laid on the hot toast, covered with the cranberry jelly and the jelly topped with the shredded cheese. Then into the top of a hot oven or under the broiler—just long enough to melt the cheese! Serve at once with crisp celery, it's extra special.

Rosy Red:

Take full advantage of the colorful red or rosy-cheeked apples, say Nutrition Services. In fruit cup or salad, unpeeled apples have a decorative contribution to make. More than that—serving apples in their skins means added nutritive value.

Cod Fish Balls:

The Fisheries Department contributes the following timely recipe for cod fish balls but any cooked and flaked fish may be substituted. One cup cod, 1 1-2 cups mashed potatoes, one egg, beaten, one tablespoon melted butter, 1-2 teaspoon onion juice, pepper and salt to season.

Mix the ingredients well and beat until fluffy. Form in balls or cakes and roll in finely sifted dry bread crumbs. The fish balls may be chilled until time to cook. Saute or fry in mild-flavored fat. Drain and serve hot, with or without sauce. Serves four or five.

To prepare salt codfish, tear it in shreds and freshen by covering with water. Change the water several times; then cover with water and just bring to the boil, or simmer. This will cook and further freshen the fish.

We wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

A Christmas Short Story

John and Jerry Arnold sat mutely contemplating their Christmas tree. From its green boughs cascaded a torrent of tinsel. Beneath it lay the gifts, a happy array of bundles, their oddly assorted shapes made more mysterious by the gayly-colored wrappings, ribbons and seals. The red, white, blue, and yellow lights were reflected like tiny stars in the livingroom window. Beyond big flakes of soft Yuletide snow fell silently to the frozen ground.

In spite of their ages — John was twelve and Jerry ten — they had now been seated quietly like this for several moments. Even the traditional excitement of Christmas Eve had failed to move them. Glumly, and without speaking, they stared at the tree. Presently, the mantel clock struck eight. As if this were a signal, Jerry turned to his younger brother and spoke.

"Aw, come on, Jerry, let's do something, let's go somewhere".

It was the resumption of an argument that had naw lasted for more than an hour, John anxious to move, Jerry fearful of the consequences. Once more Jerry replied with his inevitable questions: "Where could we go?"

'Well, if Mom and Pop can go out to a party on Christmas Eve and leave us all alone, I don't see why we can't go out too. Come on, let's put on our coats and caps and see what's doing outside".

A few moments later, two tiny figures, muffled in coats and scarves, made their way down the quiet residential street on which stood their home. The only sound which broke the stillness of the snow-clad night was the eerie whistle of a train approching the station. Perhaps it was this mute sound, perhaps it was merely idling, uncertain feet. But before long, the two small boys, now mantled with snow, found themselves walking slowly beside the railway tracks.

As they marched along, irresolute and a little bit afraid of what they were doing, the snow stopped falling and presently, one by one, the stars began to twinkle down upon the cold world. As the night cleared, John and Jerry espied in the distance the flickering flames of a fire beside the right-of-way.

"Gee", said John to his younger brother, "a fire. Maybe we should put it out".

As if drawn by a force stronger than themselves, the boys began to hurry along the snow-packed railway ties. Then, suddenly they slowed down and stopped.

"Jeepers," whispered John with real fear in his voice, "there's some people there!"

Undecided whether to turn back and run for it or to try to sneak past the fire, the boys stood where they were.

Then, hesitantly, Jerry asked in a whisper, "What'll we do, John? We can't stand here all night"

"Aw, let's go on," John replied more boldly, "they can't stop us from walking along the tracks."

On tip toe, they crept forward in silence. Inch by inch, the boys made their way to within range of the fire. When they drew closer, they suddenly shrank back, trying to merge into the darkness. They wished fervently for their living-room at home and its Christmas tree and gleaming colored lights.

For, seated on empty upturned boxes around the fire, sat four tramps!

Bearded and tattered, they mumbled among themselves and stared with unseeing eyes into the glowing embers of the fire before them.

To the two boys, already thoroughly frightened by the presence of the fire and people in this lonely spot, the men looked like huge ogres. For many minutes they stood rooted to the spot. Then, when the men apparently failed to notice their presence, they bent over low and continued cautiously on their way.

Suddenly, John stepped unexpectantly upon an unseen dry twig. The sound of its breaking was the noise of a pistol shot in them left the circle of light about the calm, dry air.

The tramps looked quickly in the direction of the sound and stood up. A moment later, two of them left the circle of light a- the fire and strode towards the boys.

Terror welled up in the throats of the boys but no sound came to their lips. They would have run. But their legs seemed paralyzed with fright and would not move.

Then the two tramps, watched anxiously by their friends at the fire, came close and peered through the dark into two small white faces.

"Why," said one of them in a gruff voice, "it's only a couple of little kids!"

Two hours later, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold strode gayly into their house. They had been to a very pleasant Christmas Eve party which they had to leave early. Now, the car was locked in the garage and it was time to put the boys to bed, so they would be fresh and eager in the morning.

They were a little surprised to find no one in the living-room but immediately thought that the boys had grown tired and gone to bed by themselves.

"Let's go up and see if they are covered, dear", Mrs. Arnold suggested.

Softly, they mounted the stairs to the boys' bedroom. The open door meant nothing, for John and Jerry invariably slept with it ajar, but when they looked into the room and found the beds empty, Mrs. Arnold screamed and ran back into the hall.

"John.... Jerry...." she shouted. "John and Jerry, where are you?" She heard nothing but the echo of an empty house. Then, her face pale and drawn, she looked beseechingly at her husband. A hand wavered uncertainly before her mouth as she asked in a shocked whisper. "But what could have happened to them — my boys?" Tears streaming from her eyes, she flung herself against Mr. Arnold. "John, do something, do something", she screamed in anguish. "Our boys are gone; they're not home."

"I know, dear," John Arnold replied soothingly. "But let's not get too excited. Let's try to think the thing through. Where could they have gone?" he mused, as if talking to himself.

They walked slowly down the stairs again and sat quietly in the living-room, on the same chesterfield where the boys had looked longingly at the tree not three hours ago. In quiet, calmer tones, they discussed their appalling loss and endeavored to reach a logical conclusion. But none would come. While they were away, the boys had just disappeared. Had they gone out of their own accord? Had some one telephoned them? Had some one come to call for them? Or — they tried to put the thought from them — had the boys been kidnapped?

"Well", said Mr. Arnold after a long pause, "I'm going to telephone a few people and see if they have seen or heard of the boys. If that doesn't get us anywhere, I must call the police!"

Mrs. Arnold sat through the long, agonizing moments while her husban dtelephoned. She stared unseeingly at the bright Christmas tree. After every call, she would look up and ask in a flat tone, "Nothing yet?"

Presently, the call to the police was put througa, and Mrs Arnold could stand it no longer. She stood up and began to pace the room, continuing to do so, despite Mr. Arnold's efforts at reassurances, until the sound of an automobile at the front sent her running to the door. Mr. Arnold was close on her heels.

When she was assured that the two boys were safe and sound, she asked where they had been.

"Oh, Mom", John piped up, "we been having a wonderful time." His face wreathed in smiles and spurred on by little Jerry's breathless efforts, he said: —

"We got lonely just sitting here all by ourselves. So we decided to get out for a little walk. We got down as far as the tracks and saw a fire. In case it shouldn't be there, we walked along to put it out. But just as we got there, we saw some people and they turned out to be tramps!"

"Horrors", cried Mrs. Arnold. "Tramps! My poor boys".

"Aw, Mom, you don't have to worry. They were fine to us. They took us over to their fire and we just sat around it on big wooden boxes. They told us some wonderful stories — mostly about Christmas. Only at first they didn't know it was Christmas, until we told them. Then they got very gay and laughed and had a good time. And all the time, there were two pots boiling on the fire. Presently, one of the tramps said: "You boys hungry?"

"And gee, Pop, were we ever", said John with a grin. "So we all piled into the best stew you ever tasted. We was just getting going when the co —, I mean these policemen turned up and brought us home". He turned and looked a little ruefully at the two constables from the radio car who still stood inside the door.

Mrs. Arnold, relieved that the boys were safe, now turned to her elder son, John, and reproved him.

"I don't think it was nice, John, for you and Jerry to run out on Christmas Eve and leave your poor mother and father so worried, and having to call the police and everything".

"Aw, Mom...."

The constable interrupted the boy. "It's none of my business, ma'am, especially on Christmas Eve, but if you were to ask me I think the responsibility lies with you and Mr. Arnold. You can hardly expect two young boys to sit at home all evening on Christmas Eve, when they're so excited, while their parents run off to a party. Good evening ma'am. Good evening, Mr. Arnold. And a Merry Christmas".

Yuletide Legends

Why do we have Christmas trees and candles? One legend tells us that on a cold, clear Christmas Eve, Martin Luther wandered through the winter woods filled with happiness at the loveliness of the snow-laden trees, under the starry sky. He wanted to share his happiness with his children, so he cut a small fir tree and took it home. When he had set it up, he placed little glowing candles on the boughs to represenet the stars of heaven.

The manner in which Christmas is celebrated in other lands is always intriguing to children. They enjoy such random facts as instead of turkey Norwegian children enjoy Christmas porridge and perhaps a slice of cod fish or barbecued young pig, dressed up with an apple in his mouth and paper frills on his ears! Or that in Holland the children were wont to call Santa Claus St. Nicholas and to believe that he travels about on a white horse. Instead of hanging up their stockings, they would leave their little wooden shoes, filled with grass and hay for the white horse to eat on the step outside the front door. And lo! when morning came the grass and had disappeared and in their place were gifts for such thoughtful children.

From Spain comes the gentle admonition that cows must always be treated with special kindness, for did they not stand close to the Christ Child in His manger bed and blow their warm, sweet breath on Him all through the chilly night?

Holland gives us one story of the origin of Christmas bells. It hails from the little town of Lochen, where the peasants say that long ago Satan appeared one day and carried away the bells from the church tower and dropped them into two ponds. Since then, so say the peasants, if you stand near the pond at 12 o'clock on Christmas Eve, you will hear the joyful pealing of ancient bells rising triumphantly from the depths of the water to greet the new-born King.

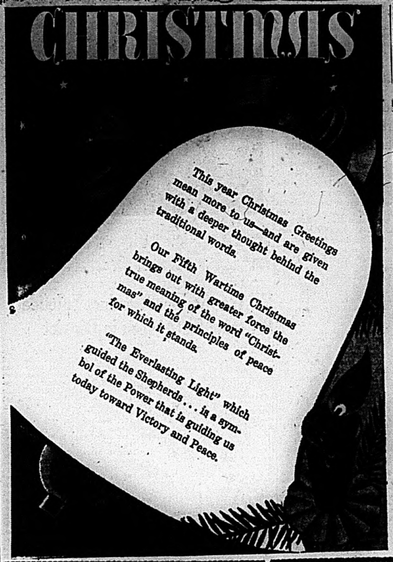
The idea of Christmas seals, or stamps, was conceived by Einar Holboell of Denmark in 1904. The proceeds from their sale went to aid the fight against tuberculosis. England, France, Sweden, Canada, and the United States lost no time in adopting this Christmas custom, and millions of dollars are raised annually for a noble cause.

The mystic beauty of the Christmas story appeals to all children. Year after year they delight in hearing it repeated until every detail of the lovely pageant of the wise men, who followed a star until it came to rest over a lovely stable in Bethlehem, is as familiar to them as the alphabet.

Dickens never fails to charm with his Christmas tales. If the children are very young, there is a youthful version of "The Cricket on the Hearth", and the smallest listener will delight in how the chirping cricket brought good luck and, furthermore, engaged in a singing match with the tea-kettle in Dot Peerybingle's kitchen!

Homemade Toys

This year Canada again rediscovers the personal joy of homemade toys, gifts, and decorations More charming than the most opulent array of imported ornaments is the old-fashioned Christmas tree trimmed with paper chains, strings of snowy white popcorn, and shiny red cranberries. Lace-paper doilies frame cranberry corsages and fashion cornucopia hats. Finishing touch will be gay striped peppermint candy canes and bouquets of lollypops.



This year Christmas Greetings mean more to us—and are given with a deeper thought behind the traditional words.

Our Fifth Wartime Christmas brings out with greater force the true meaning of the word "Christmas" and the principles of peace for which it stands.

"The Everlasting Light" which guided the Shepherds . . . is a symbol of the Power that is guiding us today toward Victory and Peace.

Our Fifth Wartime Christmas

When Christmas Day dawns this year, one thousand five hundred and fifty-four days of this war will have run their course. It is not a happy record; it is not a total upon which we can look with pride at this season of "peace on earth, goodwill toward men".

During that stretch of more than four years, we have witnessed the fall and occupation of many nations, the bloody battering into submission of others. We have seen our young men and women go forth by the thousands to battle fronts the world over. We have come to see, as the days, weeks, and months have worn on, that world domination was the sole thought that spurred on our enemies, world domination that you and I shall live as slaves, without these precious freedoms.

That is the unhappy side of the picture. But let us not forget — indeed, let us make it a point to remember this Christmas — that there is a brighter side. For the tides of war go exceeding well; at the same time there must be no slackening in our determination to achieve total victory.

While it cannot be a Merry Christmas in the old sense, there is much more reason for glad cheer this year than at any time during that long, dark stretch of one thousand five hundred and fifty-four days.

To be merry, the dictionary says, is to be full of mirth and good humor, gay, sportive, jovial, pleasant. The gay light-heartedness with which we have been accustomed to great the Christmas season in scarcely fitted to a country fighting a war for its very life, its institutions, its future. But that light-hearted Christmas revelry is not, after all, the essential thing about Christmas.

Since that night in Bethlehem a thousand wars have mangled and crucified humanity. Yet is Christmas forgotten? A thousand times ill-will has obtained the temporary mastery over that ancient promise of goodwill toward men, yet in the hearts of millions of men the flame of good will burns uninterruptedly. It is as inextinguishable as man himself, as eternal as God. It will come again to the surface to light the world once more, just as when the glory of the Lord shone down on the shivering shepherds in old Judeaa.

That flame reflects other blessings too. Standing out boldly in its cleansing heat is the brave, indomitable spirit of our sailors, our soldiers, our airmen; the spirit of Victory at any cost. — There, too, we see the noble endeavors of our brave allies, the skilled hands of our workers turning out munitions of war in ever-increasing quantities, and every Canadian — man, woman, and child, young and old —, talking the significance of this brutal, callous war to his or her heart.

No, we cannot today have peace on earth. Perhaps, one day, we shall again be able to speak those hallowed words. It depends on us. We must fight the good fight — for keeps!

Toys For Christmas

Although war with all its sacrifices and sorrows will undoubtedly overshadow another Christmas in this strife-tossed world — when Christmas approaches there still will be youngsters looking for toys Letters will be written to Santa Claus and parents will be hard up to explain why toys were not delivered as expected. And long as there are children there must be Christmas for them and Christmas to children means toys.

Manufacturers and retailers make no secret of the fact that toys will be short this Chrismas. Not alone in quantity but in variety. Steel and metal toys are out for the duration but that does not mean that toys cannot be provided.

In many homes there are unused toys and dolls of all sorts that could, with a little time, patience, and energy, be made almost brand new. In most communities, there are several troops of Boy Scouts, Cubs, Rangers, Girl Guides, and Brownies. Some way should be devised to bring the troops and the toys together. The smaller Cubs and Brownies could collect the toys and dolls which citizens undoubtedly will donate. The older boys could repair the toys and Guides redress the dolls.

The ingenuity of the Canadian boys and girls could get to work on building new toys such as small carts, guns, wooden soldiers, ring-toss, and other playthings to supplement the remodelled donations.

All could be placed on display in a community toy shop and sold to parents, who by Christmas-time are going to find it difficult to procure such goods in the stores. The merchants say they will not have them in quantity comparable to other years. Reasonable prices would make for a quick turnover and the funds for Scouting and Guiding enriched to a commendable figure, or the proceeds devoted to some worthy war effort.

Evergreens

Evergreens are synonymous with Christmas, but if you would comply with tradition you should not put them in place before Christmas Eve. It should be a part of the children's Christmas duties to bring them in and hang them in the designated places. They should be left in place until January 6 (Twelfth Night), when every leaf must be burned. Tradition maintains that even one leaf left to wither will encourage witches and sprites.

Holly protects your home from evil spirits. In ancient times Christians hung holly wreaths to invite the spirit of the Christ child to come and spend the holidays with them. The Christmas candle is symbolic of the Star of Bethlehem. Holly is supposed to be particularly lucky for men.

Many gardeners know that there is a male and female species of holly—the male holly has sharp prickly-edged leaves, and the female variety smooth-edged, glossy leaves. There is an old Christmas tradition, originating in the English Midlands, that if you bring in he-holly, the husband will rule during the coming year On the other hand, if you select she-holly, your wife will have the upper hand. It is best to play safe and bring in a little of each.

Mistletoe

Do you know that when enemies meet under the mistletoe bough they are supposed to lay down their arms for at least a 24 hours truce? That is why a hostess tries to hang some mistletoe near the doorway of her home, thus assuring perfect harmony while her guests are under her roof. The Druids held the mistletoe bought sacred. It was also considered symbolic and an invitation to the spirits of the forest to come in and bring good cheer. The custom of kissing under the mistletoe dates back to ancient Britain. To bring the best type of luck to the one kissed, it is claimed that the bough must be cut with a golden knife.

Christmas Greeting Cards

There! The Christmas cards were all signed and addressed. Now to seal and stamp them, and then into the mail. But could it be pos- suddenly developed a life all of its own! A voice, with a decidedly sible? That card on the top of the neatly stacked holiday greetings had British accent, could be heard coming from the envelope. . . .

I say, there, may I have your permission to do a bit of my own 'trumpet-blowing?" asked this come-to-life Christmas card. "I must say that I feel quite spry for all of my hundred and one years. You see I was born in England in 1842, and I've had a most interesting life, although somewhat hectic.

"To begin with, there was some confusion as to just exactly when I had been born. And a thing like that can be rather upsetting, don't you know.

"According to some records, it was 1843. But, personally, I have always disputed this fact. For I can recall being told that I was born shortly after the adoption of the postal system in the British Isles.

"So, I did feel rather smug recently when the British Musequm in London reported that they had come across my 'birth certificate" dated 1842. My birth certificate, of course, is the first known Christmas card. And my father, according to the Museum authorities, was a young Englishman, William Maw Egley.

"I was born amid the splendor of the early Victorian era", the Christmas card continued. "I depicted the gay holiday festivities of that era in a montage etching of four scenes. I showed dancers doing the Sir Roger de Coverly, a dance named for the popular literary character; a lively Christmas dinner party with the traditional plum pudding very much in evidence, distribution of the soup to the needy; and cane-toting, top-hatted ice skates. There was a blank space at the bottom of the card marked, "From" — so I was obviously intended to be sent out by many, many people and not merely as Egley's private card.

"And that brings me back to what I was saying about the postal system. In olden times, I've been told, if one wished to send a letter or a greeting to a friend, he would have to employ a special messenger, who received payment on delivery by the person at the other end. I've heard tell as how William Wordsworth, collecting his mail, had to pay seven pounds for the privilege of reading the letters sent to him.

"To explain about that 1842 question—it seems in that year Sir Henry Cole, a man with many friends throughout England, decided to greet them on Christmas morn with a personal holiday message reading (yes, you've guessed it) "A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to You.' Sir Henry asked his friend, J. C. Horsley, a prominent member of the Royal Academy, to execute the design.

"And that was my infancy! But how the British people did take to me", said Mr. Christmas card with a note of pride in his voice. "I'm really astonished that mankind managed to get on for so considerable a period of time without me. I'm so handy, and so easy an aid to remembering all one's friends.

"Several British firms commissioned Royal Academicians to design their Christmas cards. But I've always been especially partial to one English gentlewoman, Kate Greenaway, whose extraordinary talent in portraying the delightful grace of young children created a sensation that has survived down through the years.

"Although England has known all about me since 1842, it wasn't until thirty odd years later that I was introduced to the American people. I made my debut in the United States through the auspices of Louis Prang, the master lithographer of his time, who has been called the father of the American Christmas card.

"In the late 1870's he created the first set of truly artistic greeting cards in this country. He was determined to procure the very best in art, for his Christmas cards, and conducted several design contests on a national scale. The generous prizes he offered induced some of the most famous artists of the period to enter into competition, and these paintings were judged by the major art critics of the day.

"Those were happy days", said Mr. Card, continuing his reminiscing. "And Mr. Prang's creations did much to counteract the bad impression I was forced to make by the cheap German importations which made me appear a prime example of bad taste.

"Prang's pioneering soon led many others to venture into the field of Christmas card creations, and I was started on my long career as a well-loved addition to the happy holiday customs that add so much to the joy of the season.

"And the way I figure it", said Mr. Christmas Greeting Card, his voice getting a bit weak after so much talking, "the more uncertain the times, the more precious are the changeless things like Christmas and friendship. And the more important a word of greeting becomes. And I think that this year, more than ever, I'll be able to bring people messages that will carry a warmth and sincerity to gladden their hearts right through the New Year.

Don't Let the Bird Give YOU the Bird

Are you going to let that bird make monkey out of you again this year? Of course not. Not when it's so simple. If you make up your mind to it, Mister, and read carefully the following easy rules, you can pass yourself off to your wife and your friends as a master carver. Make the bird take that back this year!

Here are the simple rules:

1. Use a platter large enough to hold all the carved pieces, or use an extra plate to hold some of the servings. The carving knife and fork should be the best you can afford. Have the knife absolutely sharp. Place the platter above the plates and before the host. Drumsticks should be at the host's right hand.

2. The host being you, you carve first the side nearest you. Steady the bird with the fork, tines down, placed in the thigh. Cut close to the body of the bird with long strokes. With the fork, draw leg away from the body joints as the knife cuts off the leg.

3. Rest leg on platter (the bird's, of course, not yours). Sever drumsticks from thigh, using a clean stroke from outside tip of the joint to the inside bend. Cut the thigh meat into three or four pieces. Slice meat from the drumstick and place to one side of the platter or put on the auxiliary plate.

4. Thrust fork into second joint of wing. With long stroke, cut off the second joint and lay it to one side.

5. The next three steps are planned to make uniform serving pieces of the white meat. Note that the slicing works from above the wing joint up toward the breast bone. First, make an incision above the wing bone, cutting into the breast until the knife strikes the ribs. Withdraw the knife without cutting off any meat.

6. Start to slice the white meat, beginning about two inches above the incision and cutting down to it. Slice thin, using long strokes. Lay slices on platter or auxiliary plate.

7. Continue to cut slices of white meat. For each slice, start about a quarter of an inch higher on the breast Keep cutting until the breastbone is reached, with the slices uniform in thickness.

These seven steps will dispose of the near side of the bird in professional fashion. Then, if additional servings are needed, carve the other side in the same way, without turning the platter, Carve enough dark and white meat to serve a piece of each to every guest, before beginning to serve plates.

Traditional Christmas

Christmas is a rich and many-sided holiday. It seems that just about everything that's sweet and gay and jolly and generous and traditional goes into the making of it. In addition, it is one of our few red-letter days that has a religious quality about it too.

For that reason parents should not overlook this aspect of Christmas.

The Christmas story should be told in great historical detail or read to the older ones. Music recounts it in the old carols. Art has portrayed it most tenderly, especially the art of early Italy. Modern books depict it for children. These media of expression will all help you.

The War Today—
Germans Try to Delay Russians So Nazis May Retire to New Line

By WILLIAM FRYE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

Despite the fury of German counter-attacks in some sectors of the long eastern front, there is nothing in the news from Russia to indicate the Nazis hope to do more than keep the Red Army at bay long enough to withdraw in orderly fashion to a new line farther west.

The Nazis have assaulted the Russian positions around Zhlobin, rail junction on the upper Dnieper above Gomel; in the Korosten area, farther south in the Kiev bulge, and near Kirivograd.

None of these, unless it was the attack in the Kirovograd area, had enough punch to break through the Russian lines or even to gain ground, and there is little likelihood the Germans hoped for a breakthrough.

The Nazi commanders are past masters of the art of war, and they know better than anyone else that they dare not surrender the initiative to the Soviet generals along the entire front. Repeated counter-attacks force the Russians to keep reserves scattered in several areas to meet a possible German success, and as long as that goes on, the Red Army cannot be massed for additional major offensives.

If it were not for the element of luck, an important element in most military campaigns, the Russians might be able to concentrate their forces anyhow, disregarding the Nazi counter-attacks. But luck might give one of the Nazi drives a break through, and the Germans—not expecting or even hoping for such luck—are thorough and canny enough to back up their spearheads with enough strength to exploit an opening if it should come.

Eventually, of course, attrition or planned withdrawals will so reduce German strength in a new sector that the Russians will be able to crack the Nazi lines and pour through in a new offensive, just as they have done in the north.

505 Visits Made By V.O. Nurses During November

The December meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held in the Chamber of Commerce building on Tuesday night. Following the transaction of the usual business, further plans were made for the annual meeting. A nominating committee was appointed to bring in a slate of officers for 1944. The nurses' report for the month of November was presented as follows:

"The life of the nurses has not been lacking in variety or activity. The nurses made a total of 505 visits attending at one whooping cough clinic and four well baby conferences. Mrs. Weese, our relief nurse, made 78 of the visits for us, taking complete charge of some of our elderly patients who require special care. A large percentage of our visits were to mothers and babies, 244 such visits being made in a nursing care or instructive capacity. Seventy-eight child hygiene visits were made, twenty pre-natal calls and 146 medical and surgical visits.

"At the Well Baby conference, we saw 112 children; the mothers were interviewed and health problems were discussed. In these busy times we continue to stress the importance of regular medical supervision for the children.

"The war has made us all busy—it seems to affect every phase of our lives directly or indirectly. Health publications have recently been stressing the effect war has on the life of the nation and how life is linked with pertinent questions in the nation's life. for example, how stable is the home life? What are the housing conditions? What community responsibility is taken for teen-age boys and girls? and many other factors. As we approach our annual meeting, remember that our task is two-fold, 1, Maintaining an essential home service during the war; 2, Constantly building an informed thinking group which will be abreast of the needs of the future (the post-war period, it is called, but it really means going on living right here, with whatever we are building now.)

"An article in the recent issue of "Health," called "War Brings Epidemics," stressed that certain diseases can be prevented, listing chiefly diphtheria, whooping cough, scarlet fever and smallpox. During National Immunization Week, a whooping cough immunization clinic was sponsored here at which 49 children were treated. At another clinic, 59 attended, and it worked out very well.

"It is our custom to speak to all mothers about having the children immunized. We advise them to speak to their family physicians about the matter. The one and only point is, of course to have as large a percentage immunized as possible."

Special Treats and Christmas Dinners Will Cheer Canadian Forces in Italy

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Italy, Dec. 24—(CP Cable)—Canadian soldiers living in slit trenches, along guns and tanks and trucks, in mud-stained tents and in the bowels of shell-torn houses are planning to make the best of their first Christmas in action.

Many will spend the day right up at the front among the exploding German shells and mortar bombs while many more will be spread back through the Canadian area where they perform the jobs that contribute to the advances by the front-line fighters.

Taking advantage of what they can, all will attempt to better their immediate circumstances and so add a special touch that will make their wartime Christmas one to be remembered.

The Canadian commander has issued orders that wherever possible his troops will have "sitdown" Christmas dinners with their officers and non-commissioned officers waiting on them in the old army tradition.

Rations will be plentiful and include such extras as nuts, oranges and apples. Thousands of mince pies are being cooked all over the Canadian area.

Uniformed padres who have been with the troops in the worst moments of battle will hold Christmas services where they can and say prayers for the soldiers who have given their lives and for a victorious peace which the men who have been spared hope may bring them home by next Christmas.

The wounded in field hospitals will have tasty meals as well as band concerts or other special entertainment that day. The Canadian commander will call at their bedsides and the winners of awards for bravery will be presented with their robbins.

Extra Cigarettes

Every man will get extra Christmas cigarets and chocolate.

The postal service has concentrated on delivery of parcels for the last few days so that as many as possible will have had something from home.

Front-line troops have also made preparations of their own. Members of a maritime unit which shared in heavy fighting, one of its companies having cleared a gully south of the Ortona-Orsogna road, plan to have fowl for dinner if German shelling and mortaring does not interfere. (This was a referance to New Brunswick's Carleton and York Regiment.)

Pte. A. W. Nason of Trace, N. B., whom cook E. E. Thomson of Hampstead, N. B., calls "the unit's best scrounger" brought in six chickens Tuesday which he and Pte. Hawkins of Woodstock, N. B., "found."

Also the cook has at least two geese lined up, one cooped in a shellhole.

Western infantrymen had their eye on roast calf for a Christmas special but an eastern unit got in ahead of them. The calf was found wandering around the battlefield and the westerners decided to round it up. They waited a little too long and the easterners got there first.

Pte. Dick Kelton of Vancouver who took part in Ortona street fighting hopes to have a good Christmas dinner there. He says that if he can find a safe place to eat it he knows the cook will get it up.

Kelton declares his battalion's cook provided the troops with apple pie that "really hit the spot" when the fight beyond the Moro river was raging.

This Christmas, the fifth away from home for some of the troops, will have an unusual setting.

Grass in the battle area is still green and fresh though many trees along the valleys and river banks show the bright colors of Autumn in Canada.

The weather is much like Canadian Indian summer though the deep, blue Apennine mountains rising a few miles inland have snow around their peaks. The quiet Adriatic on which Ortona looks down is warm enough to swim in.

Paul Bibeault Is Acquired By Toronto Leafs

Toronto, Dec. 24 — (CP)—Coach Hap Day of the Toronto Maple Leafs announced today that Leafs had acquired goalkeeper Paul Bibeault from Montreal Canadiens. Day did not release the terms of the deal between the two National Hockey League clubs.

Day said he did not believe Bibeault would arrive in time to play against New York Rangers here tomorrow night, and it was not known immediately whether Benny Grant — who has played goal for Leafs so far this season — would be released immediately or the two goalkeepers would be kept to compete for the position. A few weeks ago Day said that if Leafs did get Bibeault, he would have to show he was a better netminder than Grant before the veteran Owen Sound, Ont., netman would be replaced.

Bibeault recently was discharged from the Canadian Army.

GETTING MORE LIGHT

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 24 — (CP)—The city of Hamilton is 1,800 street lights brighter than at the height of its hydro conservation program and 1,400 bulbs dimmer than its prewar brilliance. Ald. D. S. Gordon, chairman of the special committee on street lighting, reported an additional 400 lights of the blacked-out 1,400 will be back in service before the new year.

REPORT BULGARIAN GUERILLAS SEIZED GERMAN-HELD POST

Istanbul, Dec. 23 —(Delayed)—(AP)—Reports from the Balkans said today that Bulgarian guerillas had stormed and captured a German-held Macedonian outpost recently, but that they were forced to evacuate the position when Axis reinforcements arrived.

A statement issued by the Bulgarian Ministry of Interior said 404 men have been slain in guerilla fighting inside Bulgaria since September.

H. AND P. E.

The battalion's first crossing of the river was made two nights before the Canadians launched their man attack on the valley line. A company commanded by Capt. Paul O'Gorman of North Bay, Ont., went across the flat, sticky valley bottom and forded the narrow stream, in a diversionary move.

Two Companies Cross River

O'Gorman's men came under fire of machine-guns strung along the sandy northwest slope of the valley where the enemy was well established. The troops were pinned down by crossfire for some time and were withdrawn.

On the following day the battalion concentrated on the north-east of the river and in early afternoon under artillery barrage pushed two companies across the river. The first, led by a captain who later, fatally wounded, established a narrow bridgehead and got one pontoon to the top of the ridge above the valley. A second company commanded by a captain who was later wounded, came in on the left.

The enemy blasted the first company with heavy mortar and machine-gun fire which forced the men to the ground. The second became engaged in confused fighting in which it was outnumbered and a withdrawal order was issued for both.

However it failed to reach the second company, now commanded by Capt. George Dinwiddie of Toronto, which moved forward behind a carrier platoon commanded by Capt. Herb Long of Port Hope, Ont., and reached its objective near a gully running into the valley side.

Two More Companies Follow

It was near dusk when the company reported its objective achieved and the Colonel, waiting until dark, brought two more companies across the valley and into position alongside the troops getting ready to spend the night there.

They were followed by the troops originally withdrawn who now were commanded by Capt. I. N. Carr of Port Hope, and the battalion spent the night under shellfire below the crest of a hill.

When daylight came there was more enemy shelling and mortaring, and strong enemy patrols tried to work their way down to the battalion's position. During the night rainfall had softened the ground, preventing the crossing of Canadian tanks which were to support the H.P.E.

But the roar of the tank motors as they tried to drive through the mud made the enemy cautious.

Barrage Paves Way for Attack

In the late afternoon a big artillery barrage hammered the valley to pave the way for the general Canadian attack and the Hastings mounted two platoons on a road junction ahead of their position. At the Colonel's suggestion a pair of anti-tank guns were dragged by troops around a blown bridge and over the river where no motor transport could move.

The battalion brought across part of its mortar section and ammunition and rations on mules whose drivers were guided through shellfire by RSM. Angus Duffy of Trenton, Ont.

The Hastings forward outposts reported enemy tank movements about midnight and a deluge of enemy artillery fire came down on the battalion. In the words of Capt. Ralph Bentley of Toronto "It seemed as if we were plastered with everything on earth."

The Hastings sat tight and waited for the end of firing. It stopped about one o'clock in the morning and a German attack developed in the centre of the Hastings' position. The second prong of the counter-attack came in from the left.

Withstand Every Enemy Effort.

The battalion withstood the enemy effort without abandoning any of their forward positions. At dawn a light patrol went forward in the area of the road junction where the Germans had come down in greatest strength.

The patrol captured one German officer and 25 other ranks and recovered a wounded Canadian soldier who had received care from the enemy.

Meanwhile the battalion remained in positions on a reverse slope below the flat land spread with vineyards, dotted with trees and houses and suitable for enemy tanks.

Two forward platoons near the road junction were covered by their companies through which they could retire in an emergency. The Hastings prepared to move over to the left to protect the Canadian bridgehead behind San Leonardo when a fresh counter-attack was reported from the left.

The report was followed by another that a counter-attack was also developing quickly in the centre and then there was third launched by the Germans on the right. The Hastings kept the counter-attack under control by shell and mortar fire and with small arms. They cut to ribbons the German soldiers who worked into their position.

Cpl. Garrison of Belleville Mentioned

During the counter-attacks the battalion kept in communication with the higher command by means of a line laid under fire by the signal section including Jess Garrison of Belleville, L.-Cpl. Bob Warner of Edmonton, Signalman A. F. Jones of Montreal and Pte. Joe Bourrassa of Sudbury.

Direct Battery Fire

Excellence of communication also permitted the battalion to direct the fire of its mortars behind the river with devastating effect. The German counter-attacks failed and toward dusk prisoners started to come in. Lieut. Squibb Mowat of Kingston, Ont., counted 50, among them four officers. One of the officers carried orders indicating the Germans intended to hold the Moro line at all costs.

German casualties inflicted by the Hastings and Artillery supporting them were estimated at least 125. Fire also disabled an enemy self-propelled gun.

Pte. Grant Gillespie of Buckhorn, Ont., was among stretcher bearers who carried out Hastings wounded to a jeep ambulance driven by W. I. Fiddler of Saskatoon who with Pte. H. L. Marshall of Cobourg, Ont., took them to field hospitals.

Mortar Section's Service.

Members of the Mortar Section who during the battle fired more than 1,000 bombs at the enemy included Sgts. W. E. Morris and N. C. Mounney, both of Bancroft, Ont. Stan Downs of Trenton, L.-Sgt. Joe Fierry of Oshawa, Gus Shea of Hearst, Cpls. W. H. Bates of Bowmanville, R. T. Carswell of Madoc, L.-Cpl. George Vesterfelt of Marmora, Ptes. J. A. Campbell of Windsor, L. R. Burns of Dutton, L. E. S. McGinn of Amherst, and W. A. Sexsmith of Napanee, all in Ontario.

Much of the patrol work was done by Capt. Long, Lieut. Wayne King of Ottawa and C.S.M. Cecil Yearwood of Madoc. The battle provided the first frontline action for the Padre, Rev. Fred Goforth, of Toronto, who earned the admiration of all the battalion.

ROOSEVELT

In disclosing a military appointment vital to the conduct of the war in Europe, Mr. Roosevelt did not neglect an opportunity to note that Japan, too, would feel the weight of tremendous new blows.

All Plans Considered

In talks with Mr. Churchill and Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek of China at Cairo, the President declared that "all the manifold military plans for striking at Japan with decisive force from many directions were considered. He said he believed the Chinese president had gone back to his capital with "positive assurance of total victory over our common enemy."

He referred to the visit which Gen. Marshall had just completed to the headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Australia and of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz in Hawaii and said the conferences there "spell plenty of bad news for the Japs in the not-too-far-distant future."

The address, delivered from the Dutch colonial library which bears the President's name, was carried by the largest international radio setup ever arranged in America. It was so planned to reach as many as possible for the 3,800,000 U. S. men on overseas duty—a number which the President said would climb to more than 5,000,000 by next July.

The speech carried a warning, foreboding note which echoed a prediction of a high Washington authority Wednesday that heavy casualties might be expected in the ranks of America's fighting men.

"The war is now reaching that stage," Mr. Roosevelt said, "where we shall have to look forward to large casualty lists— dead, wounded and missing.

"War entails just that. There is no easy road to victory. And the end is not yet in sight."

REDUCED IN RANK

Camp Carson, Colo., Dec. 24 — (AP) — Maj. Byron N. Butler sent his blouse to the tailor shop for minor repairs. Back it came—adorned with sergeant's stripes.

MISREAD THE AMOUNT

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 24 (AP) — One Norfolk citizen mailed to city treasurer B. Gray Tunsall a cheque for $150 to pay his poll tax. Tunstall deducted $1.50, the tax, and mailed the balance back to the sender. The only explanation evident to the city treasurer was that the taxpayer didn't know what the "capitation" tax bill was for and misread the amount.

NAVY "WORKING DRESS"

London — (CP) — It took a long time but the Admiralty has at last made a reluctant concession. Its men can now wear "battledress" officially, but even at that, it will be by another name, viz, "working dress." Other services adopted the battledress long ago.

INDIA'S HANDLOOMS

London, Dec. 24 (CP Cable) — Canadian troops probably will be fighting on two fronts when British and American forces join the Russians in co-ordinated attack on German-held Europe from the west, south and east, and Canadian's contributions in combat soldiers is likely to be somewhat larger in operations against the west than in the attack on the Mediterranean southern front.

This will certainly be the case when many services and special units such as paratroops are included in the estimate.

The Canadian Corps in Italy should be ready for operations whether in Italy, the Balkans or southern France. Meanwhile the remainder of what was originally a five-division overseas army is preparing with British and American forces for a massive assault against Europe.

The decision to have a large formation in Italy and to have the Canadian army fight "in part" rather than "in whole" involves a number of important adjustments in Canadian military plans but it appears possible at least that another all-Canadian corps would participate in the invasion.

Canadian army military headquarters which would normally direct the two all-Canadian Corps still functions in England.

Anti-Tank Guns Inflict Smashing Losses on Germans

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associate Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Dec. 24. (AP)— The Russians have recaptured the initiative in the bulge west of Kiev and the Germans today were on the defensive over a large area in this sector.

At no point in the bulge do the Nazis currently hold the upper hand.

In one of the greatest accomplishments of this war, Russian artillery has turned the tide of battle in the great struggle which has raged for weeks in the area 55 to 85 miles west of the Ukrainian capital.

For the last three days, Soviet big guns, mobile cannon and tremendous squads of anti-tank rifles have sapped and bled the ranks of the German tank divisions, inflicting one of the highest tank casualty rates of the whole war.

Within the last 48 hours, the Russians have continued to gain ground in the Korosten direction south of Malin and in the Zhitomir salient. Korosten and Zhitomir, both on the Odessa-Leningrad railway, where highwater marks in the initial Russian drive and both towns were recaptured by the Germans in their counter-offensive.

Beaten back west of Kiev, the Germans exerted great tank pressure today in the white Russian area southwest of Zhlobin, but dispatches from that front said the Red Army was standing up to the test.

Outstanding Sport Surprise Of Year, Defeat of Notre Dame

By The Canadian Press

Following a poll of 80 sports writers of the United States, The Associated Press yesterday announced at New York the result of a survey to determine the outstanding sports surprise of the year. The results, according to 60 of the 80 first-place ballots, was the selection of the last-minute defeat of Notre Dame football team by the Great Lakes Naval Training Station 19-14. This was the final game of the season for the Irish who had previously swept to victory in every match. Second choice among the year's surprises was the victory of the New York Yankees over St. Louis Cardinals in the world series.

In observing his 81st birthday yesterday, Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics told a luncheon meeting that he had made one great mistake in his long baseball career, namely the selling of southpaw Herb Pennock to the Boston Red Sox in 1915. Pennock, now general manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, was a guest at the luncheon but made no comment.

Two days after his physical examination, pitcher Hal White of the Detroit Tigers, was inducted into the U. S. Navy at Utica, N. Y., yesterday.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission yesterday indefinitely suspended George (Sonny) Horne, middleweight boxer of Jamaica, N. Y., and his manager for alleged failure to fulfill contract engagements at Boston.

Catcher Bobby Bragan of the Brooklyn Dodgers receiver notice yesterday, after he had made requests for a salary increase, that he had been put on the sales list by President Branch Rickey. Bragan is now employed in a war plant at Birmingham, Ala.

During the first seven days of winter racing at Tropical Park, Miami, the betting total at $1,996,126 was an all-time record for the period, compared with the wagering of $1,672,636 in the seven days of 1941. Attendance, however, was down to 27,284 from 48,846.

Commissioner K. M. Landis yesterday approved the trade by the New York Giants of first-baseman Dolph Camilli to Oakland of the Pacific Coast League for shortstop Bill Rigney, now in the Navy. If the Giants retain Rigney, they are to pay $25,000 cash to the Oakland club. Camilli, previously with the Dodgers, will be Oakland's player-manager.

Mrs. Anna May Pannell, widow of jockey Joseph Pannell who was killed in a spill on the Charleston track Dec. 9, told the Maryland Racing Commission yesterday jockey Matthrew Quinn had offered her husband $150 to pull his mount White Sea, in the first race at Marlboro Nov. 27. The horse subsequently won the event. Quinn had denied he made any offer. The case was taken under advisement by the Commission, conducting the inquiry at Baltimore.

Hamill continued as the league's bad man with a total of 28 minutes in penalties.

New York, Dec. 24. (AP)—First word on the big league baseball group touring Alaska comes from Pte. Howard Kosbau, editor of the "Sourdough Sentinel", via tub-thumper Jackie Farrell of the Yankees. . . .The big leaguers have visited many military installations in Alaska and the Aleutians, mostly talking naturally, with Frank Frisch along) and Kosbau reports they've made a tremendous hit. . . "In fact", he says, "the soldiers would rather talk to a big league baseball player than to Betty Grable" . . . There's been just one drawback on the tour. Hank Borowy has become such a K.P. expert since the baseballers have had to cook their own bacon and eggs and wash the dishes that he's afraid he'll never escape those duties at home. . . .

Cleaning the Cuff.

It would be a great duel between Sammy Baugh of Washington Redskins and Sid Lackman of Chicago Bears if they ran the ball instead of throwing it at Chicago Sunday. The season's statistics show that Sid tried to run 22 times for a net loss of 40 yards and Sammy lost 44 yards on 19 t-ies. . . Miss Pat Kay, probably the youngest feminine horse trainer in the business, is only "Exercise Boy" for her horse, Coley Bay, at Miami . . . Pat is only 18 and Florida won't give her a trainer's permit until she's 21 although she has papers in Illinois. . . . At 81, Connie Mack says that all a pitcher needs is a good fast ball and a good curve. . . .How about a punctured eardrum?

MUD BRUNETEAU 'BACK ON BEAM' AND WINGS WIN

Detroit Defeats Rangers With Bruneteau Scoring Two Goals

SMITH IN GOAL

By ALAN HARVEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

A current history on the rise and fall of Detroit Red Wings can be written almost exclusively around Modere (Mud) Bruneteau, now serving his ninth season with the world champions.

Without saying flatly that "as Bruneteau goes, etc.," these facts are worth emphasizing:-

Last Nov. 28, Bruneteau scored two goals (his 14th and 15th of the season) as Detroit defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 6-4 to move within two points of second place. He didn't score again until last night, when Wings walloped New York Rangers 5-3 in the only scheduled National Hockey League game.

In the interval, the 1942-43 Stanley Cup bosses won one and tied one of eight contests. The muffling of their chief sniper marked a toboggan ride from third to fifth place.

While Bruneteau must be the chief character in any plot about the Wings, some space should be reserved for Normie Smith, the 35-year-old netminder who has guarded the nets for Detroit in their last two winning games. Smith was beaten last night on shots by Dutch Hillier, Johnny Mahaffy and Bill Gooden, but the 20 saves he made indicated he has lost none of the agility which marked his play prior to his "retirement" five years ago.

Slim Crowd Attends

Two closely-spaced scoring bursts enabled Detroit to record their largest scoring total in three weeks before a slim home crowd of 5,646. Hiller opened for Rangers 35 seconds after the first face-off, but Joe Carveth counted twice before the period ended to send Detroit into the lead. After Mahaffy tied it up at 3:54 of the second, Bruneteau's two goals and one by Don Grosso gave the Wings a safe 5-2 margin. Gooden ended the scoring at 13:28 of the third period.

The Detroit victory, which moved them within three points of the fourth-place Chicago Black Hawks, before a two-game winning streak for Rangers, who suffered two possibly graver blows in injuries to goalie Ken McAuley and Grant Warwick.

McAuley, regarded as one of the league's most promising backstops, was struck in the face by a puck from the stick of Carl Liscombe, returned to the game to finish the second period and then went to hospital with a possible fractured jaw. He was replaced by 16-year-old Harry Lumley of Owen Sound and Barrie, Ont., Detroit spare goalie who has been playing with Indianapolis Caps of the American League.

Warwick also received a head injury in the second period and was taken to hospital for observation.

JOEY SADLER LEADS PARADE

Toronto, Dec. 24 — (CP) — Joey Sadler of Toronto St. Michael's led the junior A Ontario Hockey Association scoring column in statistics released today. Sadler's total of 30 points was made up of 21 goals and nine assists.

Two points behind Sadler was Bob Schnurr also of St. Mike's, with 13 goals and 15 assists, while Ken Smith of Oshawa Generals was in third place with 27 points. Johnny Ubriaco of Galt Kists and Bill Ezinicki of Oshawa forced a fourth-place tie with 23 points and Johnny McCormack of St. Mike's and Mirdo Narduzzi of Hamilton were tied for sixth place with 20 points.

Stratford Kroehlers' Jackson led the penalty parade with 44 minutes in the box.

SMOKE EATERS TEAM TO MATCH FOR ALLAN CUP

Take Strong Calgary Team in Three Straight Exhibition Fixtures

SMOOTH SQUAD

Vancouver, Dec. 24 — (CP)—Allan Cup tip: Watch Trail Smoke Eaters.

With a nucleus of several of the topnotchers who led Smoke Eaters to the Canadian senior hockey championship in 1938, Trail has been playing in comparative obscurity since this week when Smoke Eaters hooked up with the strong Calgary Army team.

When Smoke Eaters outscored Calgary 9-6 in the first game, Calgary's travel weariness seemed a logical reason but that didn't stand up when the Smokies trounced the Soldiers 9-3 in the second game. Although beaten 10-5 in the third battle, Smokes have shown definite title possibilities.

Smokie players including Joe Benoit, Bunny Dame, Ab Cronie, Mike Buckna and Jimmy Norris, are divided among three teams in Trail's commercial league and an all-star team will be picked for the provincial playoffs.

Meanwhile in British Columbia's only organized league — the Pacific coast senior circuit — three service teams have been walloping the man-poor civilian trio rather consistently.

The outstanding team on recent form, Sea Island R.C.A.F. Seahawks, was liquidated by the Air Force ban. Seahawks are tied in 1st place with Esquimalt Navy. The Airmen have smooth attack and Navy's strong point is its defence featuring Chuck Rayner in goal.

Nanaimo Army Commanders, pre-season favorites, have played in-and-out hockey and are two games behind the leaders with a record of six wins and six losses.

Victoria Machinery Depot, the best of the civilian trio, might have passed the Soldiers but for their inconsistent form.

Vancouver St. Regis are fifth and New Westminster Lodestars sixth, both well behind the leaders.

Hockey's Big Seven

By the Canadian Press

Last night's lone National Hockey League game between Detroit Red Wings and New York Rangers failed to make any difference in hockey's big seven. Joe Carveth, top-scorer for Detroit collected two goals to give him a total of 24 points—10 goals and 14 assists—but he failed to touch Montreal Canadiens' Buddy O'Connor who is in seventh place with 27 points.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

MERRY CHRISTMAS ALL.

* * *

How to be Happy:

Make up your mind to be happy
Learn to find pleasure in simple things.
Make the best of your lot.
Don't take other people too seriously.
Don't let your neighbors set your standards for you.
Don't cherish enmities and grudges.
Don't keep up old quarrels.
Hate takes all the joy out of life and hurts us far worse than it does anyone else
Keep busy.
That's the real remedy for unhappiness.

(Open Christmas.)

Under ordinary circumstances the Hume Arena should swing open its doors for public skating on Christmas Day, so the lads and lassies can exercise a bit after stuffin' themselves with Yuletide turkey and what have you.

Manager Walt Gerow stated today the Belleville juniors could have the ice surface. Saturday evening for a short limbering up practice period. The idea isn't to engage in a scrimmage, but rather to loosen up the leg muscles and get the feel of their skates. If sufficient junior aspirants desire such a period they should contact Manager Gerow or Coach "Toots" Holway in order that arrangements for such a period can be made by the Hume Arena management. Also juniors seeking berths are asked to turn in their identification cards provided as soon as possible, urges Secretary Wally Berry.

(Strange triple play.)

Even Bob Ripley probably will doubt this one, but it actually happened some years ago, according to Major Lee Gilstrap, who is stationed in Iceland with the American Army Corps.

Coaching at Oklahoma Military Academy, Major Gilstrap's club was battling an Indian nine on a windy March afternoon. In the fourth inning, the Indians had runners on first and second, with none out.

"The next batter hit a pop-up to the second baseman," the major explained, "but my infielder lost the ball in the sun. The batter was automatically out on the infield fly rule, and the runner on first, trying to advance, collided with the ball before a fielder touched it, so he, too, was out. The runner on second base became infuriated, walked off the base, picked up the ball and heaved it out of the park.

"Thus, that gave us a triple play without any of my players even touching the ball!"

(Where's the ball?)

Anytime a baseball fan mentions the St. Louis Cardinals, one always connects them with the famed "Gas-House Gang" of the Dean era. Then of course on a little further comes Ripper Collins, the Cards, colorful first baseman: Whenever "The Ripper" appears at a ball fanning bee some person is bound to rib him something like this — "Remember the time you argued with the umpire, Rip?"

It seems that there was a close sacrifice play at first and the Gentleman in Blue called the runner safe.

"Safe?" screamed the Ripper. "I had him out a mile!"

Suddenly the man on second broke for third, and Collins, interrupting his violent harrangue with the umpire, reached into the glove for the ball. But there was no ball. Al Lopes was chasing it back near the stands because the excited Ripper, unknown to himself, had neglected to hold on to it in making the original "putout." He's never been given a chance to forget that sterling deed since.

(Perish the thought.)

Says Doug. Vaughan in the Windsor Star: "Raymond (Hap) Dumont, president of the National Baseball Congress, has popped up with an idea that would really do something to baseball if adopted. His suggestion is that batters be allowed to take off for either first or third base after hitting the ball. It's a plan that is hardly likely to be adopted but at least it is worthy of consideration. At any rate, here is his explanation of the proposal: "A batter would have the choice of running to third or first but would have to continue his advancement around the bases in the same direction he left the plate. If the batter hits the ball toward first, he can take out for third. If the batter, with a runner on first, figures his ground ball will result in a double play, he can go to third. Thus the runner on first would not be forced to advance. With the possibility that runners from third and first might attempt to steal second from opposite directions, there would be double action for the fans, with the two runners, coming from opposite directions, sliding into the same base on the same play. Infielders would have to be on their toes all the time. In the case of a sacrifice, they would have to outfigure the batter, who could race either to first or third." Dumont is going to try the idea at the 10th national semi-pro tournament next August."

Ohio State-Illinois Game Voted Year's Top Oddity in Sport

New York, Dec. 24. (AP)— Step up and have a look at Sports' freak show for 1943, folks.

An extra-inning football game between Ohio State and Illinois was chosen as the sport oddity of the year by 43 of the 75 sports writers voting in the annual Associated Press Poll on the year's sports oddities.

The banishment of Bill Cox from baseball for betting on ball games was far back in second place, with only four first-place votes and 26 1-2 points. However, the boys had a lot of trouble making up their minds whether Bill's ouster or the story he told Commissioner K. M. Landis in his appeal was the odder oddity.

In third place with 17 1-2 points was Clint Wager, the Chicago Cardinals' end, who fractured his jaw while trying a drop-kick.

Altogether 70 different items were listed in the poll, all the way from the one Norman Coder of the St. Joseph (Mo.) Newspress forwarded about pro football Referee Jimmy Cain trying to slip into his small daughter's nightgown, thinking it was a sweatshirt, right up to the story about the West Virginia Hunter who wrestled a big deer after slightly wounding him—and hanging onto him, too.

But that Inninois-Ohio State game was the headliner. The gun went off with the score tied 26-26; the two squads went to their locker rooms and the customers started home to dinner. Then head linesman P. C. Goebel announced there was an off-side on the last play, so the two squads came back out. 12 minutes later for one more play. A lot of the players were only half dressed. And. Ohio's State's John Stungis kicked a 25-yard field goal.

Detroit—(AP)—Goalkeeper Jimmy Franks has been invited to return to the Detroit Red Wings by Manager Jack Adams for N. H. L. games away from home, it was announced last night. Normie Smith would continue to mind the net for home games and work in a war plant. Franks would replace 16-year-old Harry Lumley, drafted from Indianapolis.

Toronto, Dec. 24 — (CP) — The Canadian Press last year announced discontinuance for the duration of its annual year-end poll by sports editors to determine the Dominion's outstanding sports developments and its leading athletes. CP explained then: "The Dominion's greatest athletes now are doing their stuff in service uniforms, not on golf courses, football fields or hockey rinks." That situation remains unchanged and the poll suspension continues. The fellows turning the best athletic tricks of the year include airmen putting the shot with bombs over Berlin; soldiers on smart by-passing plays en route to Rome and farther; sailors on corvettes running interference for ocean convoys.

See who's here:

After the Turk Broda incident last October blew the lid off service hockey there were rumors the former Toronto Maple Leafs goalkeeper would not play hockey this season. Rumor was wrong. Pte. Broda played goal last Saturday night at Pembroke Ont., when Petawawa Grenades beat Montagnards 4-3 in the Ottawa senior city league. Reports of the game said Broda made sensational saves to give Grenades the win.

Anticipation:

Manager Paul Thompson of Chicago Black Hawks chips in with Red Dutton in forecasting increased number of games for N.H.L. teams after the war. "I look for clubs to be playing every other night and I don't think a season's schedule of 80 to 90 games for each club will be out of line," Thompson told Vern DeGeer of the Toronto Globe and Mail. He figures the players could stand the gaff and would draw fatter contracts for longer schedules and proportionately greater box office figures,

Incidentally:

Russell Andrews, who has been bowling only one year and has a five-pin average of 224, rolled a perfect 450 in a Vancouver commercial league game. His three-game score was 957...Fred (Montreal Gazette) Kerner reports the Quebec Lacrosse Association plans all-out effort to introduce lacrosse into intercollegiate sport after the war...Nick Cizik, one of the leading jockeys on the western Canada circuit, now is in the Canadian Army.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 268

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When slams are bid in proper manner, they should be made. So help me Hanner. Some bid slams when hands are certain. Some bid slams on prospects. Curtain.

To bid a slam safely, you should first discover 12 tricks, what's trump, and enough aces and kings. You must have some method of finding out how many aces and kings are held in your pair.

The signal for asking partner how many aces and kings he has is a bid of four no-trump signal. To bid four no-trump, your own hand must contain two aces and a king, or better.

Neither of your aces need be in any suit that has been bid. Nor must the king (or better) be in any suit that has been bid. They can be any two aces and any king or better.)

So, comes it lesson number 42 in Horse Sense bridge: A bid of four no-trump admits (1) seeing 12 tricks, (2) knowing what's trump, and (3) holding two aces and a king, or better.

Tarry with this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A K J 7 5
♥A K J 7 5
♣J 5
NORTH
♠Q 6 4 2
♥Q 6 4 2
♦A J
♣A 4 2

South and north exchange bids. South quickly learns that their pair holds at least 12 tricks and that spades will be trumps. There is a slam if they also hold enough aces and kings.

To find out about aces and kings, he uses the convention signal; a bid of four no-trump. But only because his own hand also contains at least two aces and a king or better.

So, that four no-trump bid says: "Partner, I have seen 12 tricks; I know what's trump; I have two aces and a king, or better; tell me how many aces and kings you have."

That should bring rain, or something.

AT THE CAPITOL — Lalubelle, Vera Vague, and Scotty, appearing in "Swing Your Partner," starting Monday at the Capitol with the Technicolor attraction "Crash Dive," starring Tyrone Power. Matinee daily at 2.15 for this program.

AT THE McCARTHY — Deanna Durbin has Franchot Tone making love to her while Pat O'Brien looks on in Universal's "His Butler's Sister," starting Christmas Day at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE — Claudette Colbert, featured with Fred MacMurray Ilka Chase and Richard Haydn, in the rollicking romantic comedy "No Time for Love," coming to the Belle Theatre, Christmas Day "Caribbean Romance," an eye-filling Technicolor production with famous vaudeville and screen stars, is a special extra attraction.

AT THE BELLE

"No Time For Love"

For the first time in his life 71-year-old Frank H. Roberts, known throughout Southern California as "the hermit of Escondido" saw his first motion picture.

He was brought to Hollywood for a studio preview of "No Time For Love" the new rollicking Paramount romantic comedy featuring Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray, Ilka Chase, Robert Hayden and a cast of famed funmakers coming to the Belle theatre Christmas Day, offered an inside peek at pictures under production, entertained by studio officials at lunch and introduced to stars.

"I've sat at home a good many nights wonderin' what a movie was like," Roberts mused at the preview conclusion, "but I never imagined anything as fine as that.

"Why, those girls and boys jest talk an' walk around like they were in the room, don't they? Yes, sir, than's fine.

"And those dances. Say now, that's a treat for an ol' bachelor like me."

A few minutes later he was introduced at a studio luncheon to Fred MacMurray, who has a featured role in the picture.

"Say young fella, that was a mighty good likeness of you I saw," he told MacMurray.

Family Objected

"My mother and other members of the family always thought it wasn't quite right to go to shows," explained the Escondido man. "There were stage shows in those days, of course, but I dinda thought I'd better stay away from movies, too, so I just never went to one.

"But, my, they cheer a fella up an' I'm goin' to see as many as I can from now on."

Roberts ekes out a living by raising vegetables on a plot around his hillside shack. Word reached Hollywood from Escondido residents that the so-called "hermit" had never witnessed a picture and the invitation resulted.

"I'll have a lot to tell 'em down there" he predicted.

"Caribbean Romance" in Color

And out of the same happiness package as "No Time For Love", a new idea in entertainment will be presented on the same program in "Caribbean Romance," a stage show on our screen, an eye-filled production, famous vaudeville and screen stars, new song hits, and all in radiant technicolor. The Canadian Paramount News, a Popeye cartoon "Her Honor the Mare", and the seventh chapter of "Batman" serial will be exhibited. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday and Monday. The engagement ends on Tuesday.

Fun and Thrills, Tonight

Fun and thrills blend in "Mexican Spitfire's Blessed Event," featuring the screen's two top comedians Lupe Velez and Leon Errol. Suspense that will have you sitting on the edge of your seats is promised in "Murder on the Waterfront" the second feature attraction at the Belle tonight. A Merry Melodie cartoon will also be exhibited.

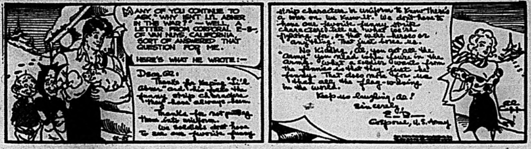
A Merry Christmas From Mistah Capp

By Al Capp



MANY OF YOU CONTINUE TO ASK, "WHY ISN'T LI'L ABNER IN THE WAR?"—WELL, A LETTER FROM CORPORAL E—D—, OF VAN NUYS, CALIFORNIA, SORT OF ANSWERED THAT QUESTION FOR ME.
HERE'S WHAT HE WROTE:—
Dear Al: Thanks for keeping "Li'l Abner" and his pals the funny strip characters that have always been. Thanks for not putting them into uniform. We soldiers don't have to see our favorite funny strip characters in uniform to know there's a war on. We know it. We don't have to have our favorite funny strip characters tell us what we're fighting for, or that we're heroes or anything. That just bores us.
No kidding, Al, you get all the "Army" you need while you're in the Army. What a soldier wants from the funnies is that they just be funny. That does more for us than all the flag-waving in the world.
Keep us laughing, Al!
Sincerely,
E— D—

Winnipeg Stockyards Glutted With Hogs

Winnipeg, Dec. 23 — (CP) — A new market rush has brought 12,000 hogs to the St. Boniface and Winnipeg stockyards, creating new problems for packers and shippers.

Pens are filled to capacity today and many of the animals have been housed in cattle cars on sidings since Monday night.

"We have no present solution," said Hubert Burns, president of the Winnipeg Livestock Exchange following a meeting here last night attended by exchange members and government representatives.

At the meeting, described as informal, were John Bracken, national leader of the Progressive Conservative Party; Hon. D. L. Campbell, Manitoba Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. Errick F. Willis, Provincial Minister of Public Works.

"There was general regret over the loss of confidence on the part of farmers as a result of recent Federal government policies," said Mr. Bracken commenting on the meeting.

He said it was considered the government had made an "error in policy" when the price of bacon for overseas shipment was not raised.

"It was felt efforts should still be made to have the price raised," he added. "It was thought production would be at least one-third less next year as a result of the present policies."

Mr. Burns said Ottawa authorities had been warned some time ago of a possible crisis in the stockyards here.

"They failed to take any action," he said, "and this is the situation we have on our hands."

He added that hog shipments now in transit to the yards would make the situation even more serious.

The Winnipeg Tribune said today that a member of the livestock exchange had reported an embargo would be ordered to halt shipments until the present glut is cleared, but there was no immediate confirmation of this report.

ADVANCE ON ROAD TO ROME SLOW

5th Army's Experience is That Fight for Rome is Strictly Infantry Warfare

By DON WHITEHEAD
Associated Press War Correspondent

With the Allied 5th Army in Italy, Dec. 22 — (Delayed) — (AP) —The 5th Army's advance on the road to Rome is going to be the same bloody, slow,costly battle it has been all the way from the beaches of Salerno.

This is becoming more evident as the days pass and the army is able only to inch forward against the Germans entrenched in strong mountain positions which flank highway No. 6 running up the valley through which the Army must pass.

The 5th Army has stormed one mountain stronghold and wiped out an enemy dug into caves with hidden machine-gun nests, only to find another on the next ridge.

There can be no blitz warfare here to sweep the army forward in a great smashing drive. There is no terrain suited to tank warfare. Tanks must travel roads covered by anti-tank guns and our artillery is being hit without being able to hit back.

Thus the fight for Rome is strictly infantry warfare. The Geramns must be dug from their caves one by one with hand grenades in close-range fighting. Head-on assaults against such positions are costly and slow.

Partisans Close In Around Sarajevo

London, Dec. 24 —(AP)— Pressing "successful offensive operations" in eastern Bosnia, Marshal Josip Broz' Partisans today reported their units closing in further around the town of Sarajevo, where the First Great War was touched off. The communique was broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio.

While the Berlin radio claimed that all organized guerilla resistance in Serbia had ceased, Tito's war bulletin reported that in the neighboring province of Bosnia, Partisan forces had occupied territory between Breza, a town of a branch railway 15 miles north of Sarajevo and Vares, northern terminus of the line. A power station was blown up and 50 Germans were killed in this action.

Other Partisan columns were reported approaching Sarajevo from the south, Tito asserted.

The Yugoslav communique said the Partisans were on the offensive in all other parts of Bosnia, turning back numerous German attempts to crack their lines.

SEVERAL SHIPS SUNK

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 24 — (AP) — Several small enemy troop and supply ships were sunk and "many casualties were observed among troops" as a result of persistent Allied air attacks on shipping in the Aegean in the last two days, a Middle East communique announced today.

A long-range German reconnaissance seaplane at Samos also was sunk.

New Canadian Army Show Is Now in England

Accompanied by Large Draft of Canadian Soldiers and Airmen

SOME C.W.A.C's.

An East Coast Canadian Port, Dec. 24 — (CP) — Accompanied by the new Canadian Army show, a large draft of Canadian soldiers and airmen, together with a small group of C.W.A.C.'s, and fighting men from other parts of the Empire and Allied nations, have arrived in England after sailing from this port recently aboard a British transport. Their arrival — just in time for Christmas — was announced last night in London.

The Army show, second such type of entertainment to go overseas from Canada in this war, — an Air Force troupe having preceded it by some months — boasted a personnel of 134, including 33 C.W.A.C.'s In England it will be divided into five units and even now may be giving holiday entertainment at Canadian camps throughout the British Isles. Aboard ship, the troupe was under the command of Capt. William Wren of Timmins, Ont.

The show is ready to perform in basements of bombed-out buildings, drill halls, on wooden platforms in the field and in auxiliary service huts.

Organized in 1942

The show, first organized in October, 1942, drew upon Canadian theatrical and musical talent serving in the army and before closing in Toronto last September had played 45 cities and camps from the eastern seaboard to Prince Rupert, B.C.

The players were trained to do solo or precision chorus work, comedy or serious drama depending on what might be required. Technicians eliminated every waste pound, designing sets so they were almost as portable as an umbrella.

Unit No. 4 is headed by Sgt.-Maj. Jimmy Cameron, Toronto. Performers include Pte. W. H. Rodgers, Barrie, Ont.

Sgt.-Maj. G. Harding of Toronto heads unit No. 5, whose C.W.A.C. personnel includes Pte. M. Dagg, Midland, Ont. Technical crewmen are Pte. R. Flower, Brantford, Ont., and Pte. F. F. Monte, Hamilton.

May Change Policy

A new departure in Canadian Army policy was suggested by the presence on board ship of a large growth of army examiners or personnel selection crew, who have been allocating troops in Canada to posts where best suited.

Unaware of their final destination —whether England or the fighting fronts — spokesmen for the group said they believed they were the first personnel selection crew to go overseas from Canada.

Officer Commanding a group of 50 Canadian Army Corps women going overseas was Lieut. M. L. Still of Ottawa. Included among the group was Private Ruby Person, Moscow, Ont.

Among Canadian Army Corps officers headed for England were Lieutenants W. P. Jackson, Orillia, Ont., and W. T. Copping, Merrickville, Ont.

New R.C. Archbishop Of Winchester Supports Plan of Beveridge

London, Dec. 24 (CP)—Rt. Rev. Bernard W. Griffin, newly-appointed Roman Catholic Archbishop of Westminster, announced his wholehearted support of Sir William Beveridge's plan for post-war social security and said he hoped the government would soon put it into effect.

"We need it," he said. "We want to get it going as soon as possible."

Mgr. Griffin, whose appointment by Pope Pius as successor to the late Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, came as a surprise to most English Catholics, said he hoped to have the "full co-operation of all churches for the social welfare of the country." He added, however, that he saw no prospect of a reunion of Christian churches in England.

Allied Soldiers Throng Shrine At Jerusalem

By GEORGE TUCKER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Jerusalem, Dec. 24 — (AP)—Allied soldiers of all ranks—converging from battle stations in storied Persia, Syria, Egypt, Africa—thronged with other humble pilgrims to this shrine of Christianity today to pay homage to the Prince of Peace.

The drama that has lived for 2,000 years was reborn again with intense reality for generals and privates alike, walking with visitors of all ages, dress and tongue to Gethsemane, to Golgotha, to Bethlehem.

Jerusalem and Bethlehem, blacked out by war for three Christmases, burst into candlelight from 10,000 windows as authorities lifted the restrictions this year.

The climax of the Christmas celebration will come at midnight at the Church of Nativity with a special mass and a pontifical procession to the Grotto where Christ was born.

By the scores, the soldiers coming from all war theatres in this half of the world entered the old walled city and toured the hallowed "way of Pain," which begins at the Praetorium where Pontius Pilate tried Jesus and ends on Golgatha where he died.

Step by step they retraced the 14 stations where Christ carried His cross. In little knots, they visited the Garden of Gethsemane where He worked in His agony. They stood solemn under the emotional impact of actually seeing the place where He was nailed to the cross.

Then in sixes, dozens, and half hundreds they followed the old Roman road to the Holy little hamlet of Bethlehem six miles away across the Judean hillside. There in the grotto beneath the Church they saw the place where the Redeemer was born, and touched the large silver star that marks the exact site of His birth.

Urges A.R.P. Personnel Interest Themselves In Public Service Work

Expression of appreciation for the co-operation shown in air raid precautionary work by personnel of the now disbanded civilian defence committee has been received in the city from Captain M. McIntyre Hood, secretary of the provincial organization, the letter of appreciation was received by Mr. Harold Seldon with a request that the message be handed on to the various members of the former local organization.

Taking the view that the training received by civilian defence personnel would be wasted if members were permitted to disband entirely, Captain Hood urged that with the prevalence of juvenile delinquency efforts should be made toward community service work among the young people. In this way boys and girls would receive sound and active training in first aid and other activities with the result that delinquency might be combatted.

It was urged that wherever possible the opportunities for assisting in this work should be examined with the Y. M. C. A., boy scout work, church work among boys, and the various cadets corps, being mentioned specifically.

Court Grants Divorce, But Family to Remain Together Over Christmas

Moscow, Ind., Dec. 23. (AP)— A 10-year-old girl softly sang "Silent Night", as she waited in an adjoining room—while her mother and father stood before District Judge A. L. Morgan to obtain a divorce.

At home was the family Christmas tree, holding gifts for all.

Judge Morgan granted the mother a divorce and custody of the child. But he added a proviso: the family must remain together over Christmas.

CHAPTER 5

Colin said nothing, but Irina guessed his thought. "You're wondering how two people could fall in love who only saw each other once a year."

"Maybe. As far as Rod is concerned, I think he must have loved you all through those years. There is a picture on his desk of that little girl riding a Shetland pony—it's been there long as I can remember. So I suppose it's you I'm wondering about.

"And perhaps distrusting."

"Why should I?"

"Oh, there are dozens of reasons if you want to hunt for them. Come, be honest."

The waiting, upraised face, the full gaze of those clear green eyes, challenged him.

"I'll be honest," he answered slowly. "I owe more to Rodney Selkirk than to any man alive. I don't want him to be hurt — by either man or woman. I know very little about you. I think you have it within you to bring a man much happiness or much sorrow."

"Much sorrow?" Irina repeated the words, then swiftly shook her head. "Believe me when I say I want to bring no one sorrow. I've lived too intimately with pain myself." Rising, she came close to him. "Don't distrust me, Colin, and don't expect too much from me. And don't forget that the hours ahead may not be easy."

Irina led the way down the trail. Yes, she was frightened.

And Colin marveled that this girl who had confronted him in her room, who had sat unmoved while they ripped the pontoon in landing, could be unnerved at the prospect of seeing the man she was about to marry.

But why had Selkirk never spoken of one whose picture stood for so many years on his desk? Well, that was Rod's way. Intimately as Colin had known him, there were long gaps in his life that Colin himself never understood. All that was really known was that years ago he had appeared in Learmonth, a quiet youngish man, through untiring loyalty to the company, rose to be chief factor of the best fur district in northern Canada.

Down in Winnipeg, where Selkirk was often called to give counsel on matters of policy, he became a tower of strength because of the unquestioning trust the trappers—Indian and white—placed in his honesty and fair dealing. Rod Selkirk had done more to build up good will in the fur trade than any factor in the history of the company.

Engrossed in such thoughts, Colin saw with surprise that they were near the trading post. On the hill just ahead rose a rough tangle of log buildings fronting the river, and set a few yards back from them stood Selkirk's bungalow. The company flag floated from the porch, and only with difficulty Colin restrained his impulse to break into a run, for in the doorway of the bungalow a familiar figure stood waiting.

He's older, Colin thought; then to the girl. "You go ahead."

Irina stepped forward through the bright sunlight. With an awkward, fumbling gesture Selkirk pulled the fur cap from his head and ran down the steps toward them. Slight, delicate of frame and feature, his hair was white, his small moustache grizzled and the eyes, that always seemed a little tired, were fixed with a kind of eager hunger on the face of the girl.

Uncomfortable, wishing himself elsewhere, Colin stood aside, knowing himself to be wholly forgotten in that moment of meeting. Then Selkirk spoke the single word, "Irina!"

She stretched out both hands and as Selkirk took them she said, "Please kiss me, Rodney."

Twice he kissed her, then held her back from him, and his eyes would not leave her face.

"You're—you're — " His voice trembled, and to bridge that moment of weakness she asked, "Have I changed in eight months?"

"You're lovely. So lovely, I—I simply don't know what to say."

Over her shoulder his eyes met Rae's. "Colin, my boy!" Instantly the strain was broken. Selkirk's voice was more robust now; he squared his spare shoulders, and Colin felt the firm grasp of his hand. "It's good to have you back. But come in, come in, both of you—I keep you standing out here in the wet."

Into the long library he led them—a room heaped high with books and bright with many windows. Colin looked about him—the same table, the green reading lamp and the two white skins of timberwolves on the floor.

Selkirk laid Irina's coat across a chair. "I've a million questions to ask you both, but they can wait." Again his eyes rose to Irina's face. "You're tired," he exclaimed.

She gave a little laugh, and her hand reached out to the back of a chair. "I am tired. This big friend of yours has walked me off my feet."

"Of course you're tired." Selkirk threw open a door. "Lie down in my room. Later I'll take you over to the inn."

With a nod, Irina passed to the inner room and closed the door behind her.

"No wonder she's all in." Selkirk drew up a chair. "Blair told me about your trip." He reached for a cigar, then impulsively looked up. "Don't you—isn't she exquisite, Colin?" Pride that he made no effort to conceal vibrated in the factor's voice.

"She's lovely," Colin answered, "and she's one brave girl. But why didn't you ever tell me about her? Who is she?"

"She's a girl who has led a strange life. When I met her in Europe years ago, she was just a youngster with big eyes—and lonely, wandering around in a great stone castle—one of those places filled with echoes and always musty. Both her parents were American, but she inherits some Hungarian blood from her mother. The castle belonged to her mother's family, and I imagine they were very well-to-do, but the war ended that, and two years ago her mother died.

"Irina knows the Continent as well as she does America. She went to school there while her father dashed around Europe".

"What's he do?"

"Radio expert, and something of a genius in his line. He's over in occupied France now. Irina adores him, but since the war they haven't seen each other often".

Selkirk laid his hand on Rae's arm. "I want you both to be good friends. And now I want to hear about you. What brought you here? Your note seemed guarded".

"It was guarded". Colin straddled a chair. "The thing that brought me was Van Downe's death".

"Poor fellow—I heard about that. They never knew who did it".

"I think I do".

Selkirk looked sharply up, but before he could speak Colin asked, "Do you know Jonathan Dove?"

"Of course. He founded the new Indian school across the lake".

"What do you know about that school?"

Selkirk hesitated. "Nothing very much."

"Neither do I. That's one of the things I came here to find out". "Dove says he's teaching the Indians and breeds how to be self-supporting".

"How?"

"Making trappers out of them—equipping them with modern steel traps and teaching them to compete with white trappers. They sell the skins to the school, and Dove has them auctioned off in Winnipeg".

"He pays good prices, I hear".

"Better than we can afford to pay. He's cut in on the company's fur trade badly".

"Is he unfriendly to you personally?"

"Not to me—he's antagonistic to the company. He uses all his influence with the trappers to keep them from selling to us. Dove and I don't see very much of each other. He's away a great deal. But what has he to do with your coming to Learmonth?"

"Everything". Colin laid his pipe on the table. "When the company sent me to Wolverwine last month to help Van Downe, they told me that things were going wrong. The Indian trappers weren't as friendly as they had been; they weren't selling their skins to us, and the few who still wanted to deal with us were afraid to. Van Downe believed that the trouble all headed up in Dove's school. They were telling the trappers that the company had been robbing them for years, and the stage was all set for trouble. Whisky was being smuggled to the Indians even on the reservation, and although the mounted police were doing all they could, the war had taken so many they couldn't handle the territory even in normal times.

"It looked to Van and me like a deliberate attempt to throw the whole country out of gear, but neither of us could understand why. Part of the motive was to tear down the influence of the Bay Company, but there had to be something more—it was too elaborately planned."

"Was Dove there?" Selkirk asked.

"He arrived two weeks after I did. Van Downe and I had never seen him, and we went down to the post office the night he came in. The crowd from the school gave him a rousing welcome, and it wasn't until he passed me that I got a good look at him." Colin shifted in his chair. "Rod, I can't describe the way I felt at first sight of him. His face was absolutely expressionless. His hands were enormous—twice too big for a man of his size. And powerful—I'll never forget those hands; it was as if each one had a separate life of its own, as if they lived apart from the man himself, restless, always moving, like the tentacles of an octopus. Did he affect you like that?"

"Not exactly. But go on."

"Van Downe was standing beside me and I heard him give a queer, half-stifled gasp and felt him clutch my arm. Then Dove looked up at him. Something passed between them, Rod, some kind of recognition, just before Dove moved away with the crowd. Van Downe's face was gray. He started to walk and for a long time he never spoke a word, and his eyes were like the eyes of a man in fever. Once he stopped and looked at me and then he said, "Colin, can the dead come back?"

"Van must have realized how wild his words sounded for he went on, "No, I'm not crazy. Not quite, anyway. But if I'm right, you've just seen the most dangerous man in Canada.'

"I asked him what it was all about, but he was still too shaken to talk. Only when we got to the post he said to me: 'Colin, I think I see now what's behind the trouble here; there's a game being played bigger than you or I ever dreamed—big enough maybe to change history itself. Come over to the cabin tonight. I want to show you something. And if you think it makes sense, we'll lay it before the sergeant at the police barracks. But don't let anyone know you're coming—and come alone."

Colin drew a long breath. "They were the last words he ever spoke to me. Van Downe's cabin is about a mile beyond the post, not far from where the trail forks to Dove's school. I went over soon after supper. The moon was almost full that night, so the trail was easy to follow, even under the trees. Near the forks, I heard footsteps; and, when the wind veered toward me, I could hear a man humming to himself. I still don't know why I stepped behind a tree and waited—maybe it was Van Downe's warning.

"The man was coming from the direction of Van's cabin, and just before he reached me he took the fork to the school. It was Dove. I can swear to that. Still humming, he passed me, not fifteen feet away, and I saw those hands moving in the moonlight. I hurried over to Van Downe."

Colin walked the length of the room. "Well, you read what happened."

"He was dead?" Selkirk asked softly.

"Dead at his desk. Three weeks ago tonight."

"How was he killed?"

"Horribly. The autopsy showed that his head had been twisted away from the spinal cord."

"Did you tell at the inquest about seeing Dove?"

"Yes. The ground was too hard to show any tracks, but Dove himself admitted he'd passed on his way back from a trapper's cabin. He was exonerated at once. His reputation as a solid citizen and founder of the Indian school made it unthinkable that he could be guilty, and physically it looked impossible for so slight a man to kill Van Downe in that strong-arm fashion.

"After the inquest everybody advised me to forget about it. The Winnipeg office practically ordered me to lay off—told me, the company had been criticized enough for its hostile attitude toward the Indian schools. Dove was too important a man to antagonize, and the company sent an inspector up to persuade me to pull in my chin."

"Why didn't you?"

"Because I'm everlasting certain Van Downe knew something; something he thought was of enormous importance, and because of that knowledge he died. I'm the only one to carry on and Van was my friend."

Doubtfully Selkirk shook his head. "Knowing you, I know how you feel. What did you do?"

"I applied for leave to come to Learmonth and the company turned me down."

"Then why—"

"I came anyway."

"Without permission?" Selkirk frowned. "That wasn't wise, Colin. You shouldn't have done it. And after all, what do you think you can find?"

"This is Dove's headquarters. He would have all his slates clean up in Wolverine, but here he might not expect visitors so soon. Ten days ago I had a letter from Blair that made me wonder about things down here. I want to see to talk to the trappers and find what goes on in his school; I want out what makes the wheels go round. I'd like to know how they can pay high prices for fur and still make money. Rod, I'll bet you a year's salary that school is a screen for something else, and I want to know what that something is."

Again Selkirk shook his head. "After all, your only reason for suspicion lies in seeing Dove on the trail."

"No, you're wrong." Colin rose to his feet. "I've two more reasons. First, Dove is worried; he doesn't know how much Van Downe told me. The day I left Wolverine, two of Dove's trappers came down on the same train. I'm pretty sure they went through my baggage and I think they intended to give me the works and then swear I started a fight. As soon as it was dark, I slipped off the train and hired a car to Winnipeg. They were there ahead of me; they figured that I would make straight for the company office with any information I might have, and they were waiting for me.

"I dodged them and went to the hotel. I knew if I didn't get out of Winnipeg quick, they were bound to catch up with me. At the Hotel I heard Miss Meredith ask about flying to Learmonth, and we chartered Blair's plane and flew here. By his time, Dove must know where I am, but the last boat of the year left two days ago, there are no more planes to charter in Winnipeg, and Canadian Airways won't start until the lakes freeze. So I've some time to look around?"

"And after that?"

"After that, my guess is Dove will be here, too; and if he decides I'm really dangerous—" Colin gave a short laugh of irritation. "I never thought I had a nerve in my body, but I can't forget the look on Van Downe's face and I won't ever forget Dove as he walked by me that night, humming to himself and his fingers moving."

For a while both men were silent. "It's hard to believe," Selkirk murmured, "and yet—" He watched the smoke rising from his cigar. "You said you had two reasons for believing Dove guilty. What was the second?"

"This." From his pocket Colin drew a photograph. It was wrinkled and yellow with age, but it showed a group of twelve young officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force. "This was taken in 1917. I found it behind Van Downe's desk. He might have been looking at it the night of his death and shoved it out of sight when he heard the killer coming. Rod, I believe this photograph is what he wanted me to see."

Colin pointed to one of the men. "That's Van Downe. He was among the youngest pilots in the First World War. But look at that little fellow on the left. See anything familiar?"

Curiously Selkirk held it to the light. "Something perhaps." He straightened. "It certainly couldn't be Dove."

"I wonder. I've asked myself that question a hundred times. The face bears no resemblance, but the eyes—and the hands."

"Can't you trace it back?"

"That was one reason I went to Winnipeg. I—" Colin stopped.

Behind him the door creaked. No wind had stirred, but it was as if a cold draft touched him, and he saw Selkirk rising in his chair. Again the creak of hinges, the soft scrape of leather on the floor. Slowly, almost against his will, Colin forced himself to turn.

The door was open wide, and on the threshold, blandly smiling, stood Jonathan Dove.

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

This editorial, which has justly become timeless, was written in the New York Sun in 1897 by Francis Pharcellus Church in answer to a letter from a little eight year old girl named Virginia O'Hanlon who had been told by some of her friends that there was no Santa Claus.

Virginia, your little friends are wrong.
They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age.
They do not believe except they see.
They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds,
All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little.
In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect,
an ant, in his intellect,
as compared with the boundless worlds about him,
as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus.
He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy.
Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus!
It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias.
There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence.
We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight.
The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.
Not believe in Santa Claus!
You might as well not believe in fairies!
You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down,
what would that prove?
Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus.
The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see.
Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn?
Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there.
Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside; but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart.
Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond.
Is it all real?
Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.
No Santa Claus!
Thank God! he lives, and he lives forever.
A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Five Christmases at war!

In this, the fifth, a great and wonderful light is melting the darkness of the past. It is our fervent prayer that before the next festive season comes around "Peace on Earth" will echo round the world in vibrant reality. In the meantime, as Merry a Christmas as is possible, to all.

Our sincere thanks to our many customers for their kind understanding and co-operation. Our warm appreciation for the loyal support of our employees.

GERMANS ANNOUNCE EVACUATION OF ORTONA

Canadians Capture Port After Much Bitter Fighting

Western Infantry Troops Supported By Tanks Forced Way Thru Town

5TH ARMY ACTIVE

London, Dec. 28 — (CP) — The German communique said today German troops have evacuated the "ruins of Ortona," Adriatic port of 9,000 inhabitants which has been the scene of bloody street-fighting for more than a week.

The communique was broadcast by the Nazi D.N.B. news agency.

Northern anchor of the German winter front in Italy, Ortona is 11 miles southeast of the important 8th Army objective of Pescara.

Canadian 1st Division troops forced their way into the town Dec. 20 in the face of German bayonets, flame throwers and tanks.

Methodically since then, street by street and house by house, the Canadians pushed the stubbornly-resisting Germans out of the town.

Forces Identified

In a dispatch dated Dec. 23 William Stewart, Canadian Press War correspondent with the Canadian 1st Division, identified the troops working their way through Ortona as Western Canadian infantry supported by tanks.

The Western Brigade of the 1st Division is made up of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, the Loyal Edmontons and the Seaforth Highlanders, a British Columbia battalion.

Other Canadians have been engaged nearby, crossing the important Ortona-Orsogna lateral highway.

With the fall of Ortona the next objective of the Adriatic flank of the 8th Army will be Pescara whence a major highway runs across Italy to Rome.

No Announcement From Allies

The Allied communique did not announce the capture of Ortona but indicated progress was made by the hard-fighting Canadians. It said:-

"There have been no large-scale movements of the 15th Army group front in Italy for the last 24 hours. Canadian troops of the 8th Army made further progress in clearing Ortona and mopping up pockets of resistance."

The term 15th Army group is used to designate the entire Allied force in Italy under command of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander who has the British 8th and Anglo-American 5th armies under him.

Just west of the Canadians, Indian troops of the 8th Army captured prisoners, the communique said.

Capture Two Heights

On the 5th Army front American troops captured two more heights of the Samucro mountain range overlooking the strongly-defended German town of San Vittore, one of the main barriers to the road to Cassino and Rome.

On both the 5th and 8th Army fronts intensive Allied patrol activity was reported. Fifth Army patrols, completing their consolidation of their Samucro position 1½ miles east of San Vittore, were sent down the southwest slopes to find the town firmly held by the enemy.

Southwest of Castel San Vinenzo in the centre of the Italian front, fierce local battles raged for a ridge called Catenella Degli Mainardi, while other Allied forces captured a high point in the Monte Morrone Range north of Alfedena.

French Moroccan troops were attacking an important height "to which the enemy is clinging tenaciously" the communique said, but did not identify the location.

Air Activity Increases

Fighter activity over the 5th Army front increased with slightly better weather and fighter-bombers blasted Civitavecchia, northwest of Rome, hitting shipping, the railway yard and harbor installations.

Medium bombers ranged far north to attack viaducts at Recco, and Zoagli, south of Genoa, while other bombers crossed the Adriatic to bomb shipping near Zara in Yugoslavia.

Rail targets were destroyed on the Ancona-Pescara line and a factory and railway yard bombed at Anagni.

The raids were carried out without loss.

SMUTS PROPOSES TIGHTER COVENANT THAN LEAGUE

Propose Allies Led by "Big Four" Form Framework for Preserving Peace

REALISM, IDEALISM

Pretoria, Union of South Africa, Dec. 28—(CP)—Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, urging an even tighter covenant against aggressors than was adopted by the league of Nations, proposed today that the United Nations led by the "big four" should be the temporary framework of a post-war international organization for maintenance of peace and security.

The 73-year-old Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa said that neutrals should be entitled to join the group but that defeated enemy powers should wait until "under the proper guardianship they have been cured of their dangerous obsessions and distorted outlook on the world."

In a broadcast accepting the Woodrow Wilson foundation medal for Distinguished Service, awarded at a New York ceremony, Field Marshal Smuts assailed critics who declared that the covenant of the League of Nations went too far, demanded too much and imposed obligations on its members which might possibly mean "dangerous entanglements."

Did Not Go Far Enough

"The covenant, in fact, did not go far enough and was not explicit enough in imposing definite obligations for the preservation of peace," he declared. "Even those who tried to escape the light but necessary burdens of the league were engulfed in the infinitely-heavier burden of the most destructive war in history."

Smuts, who sat at the Versailles peace table, said, "It is perhaps true that the founders (of the league) were dominated by idealistic expectations badly out of tune with the hard realism of the times. . .

Land-Based Giants Converge On Raider and Blow It to Pieces

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 28 — (CP)—Canadian airmen flying in big coastal command aircraft patrolling the Atlantic and Mediterranean shipping lanes shared recently in the destruction of three German submarines sent to the bottom in separate attacks. Two of the U-boats were destroyed the same day.

Attacks against one sub threatening an Allied convoy were carried out by three Liberators from bases in Iceland and Northwest Ireland. The land-based giants converged on the raider in mid-Atlantic and blew it to pieces. Survivors were picked up later by British naval vessels.

One of the Liberators belongs to the famous R.A.F. dawn patrol squadron commanded by Wing Cmdr. P. A. Gilchrist, D.F.C., of Kelvington, Sask., and there were three Canadians in the crew. The co-pilot, on his first operational flight from the United Kingdom, was 27-year-old FO. C. E. Goodwin of Moose Jaw, Sask. PO. G. L. Parker of Midnapore, Alta., and Flt. Sgt. K. J. Field of Clifford, Ont., were wireless operator-air gunners.

The submarine remained fully surfaced during the running battle which ensued and its anti-aircraft guns blazed away at the attacking planes.

Two Separate Attacks

Each Liberator made two separate attacks before the final kill.

"Flak from the U-boat was inaccurate during our first attack but it was intense and fairly accurate when we made our second run over the conning tower," Goodwin said. "One of our gas tanks was holed and flak came through our undercarriage. But we did a spot of shooting ourselves at that submarine and its conning tower and hull were repeatedly hit."

The Lib's final attack was described as "devastating." – Depth charges found their mark and the

SIR A. TEDDER NAMED DEPUTY TO EISENHOWER

Air Power Expected To Play Mighty Role in The Main Invasion Of Europe

MASTER STRATEGIST

London, Dec. 28 —(CP)— In a move which clearly foreshadowed the mighty role air power will play in the main invasion of Europe, Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, Britain's master air strategist, today was appointed deputy to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of the Allied invasion armies.

Selection of Sir Arthur who cleared North Africa's skies of the German air force and directed air cover for the invasions of Sicily and Italy, was greeted with approval in London and his appointment was regarded as assuring that the building of air strength would rain new momentum.

It was announced at the same time that Gen. Sir Bernard (Tolly) Paget, who fought a grim battle of withdrawal in Norway and for two years was commander-in-chief of the British home forces, has been appointed commander-in-chief in the Middle East at Cairo.

Thus the lineup of commanders for an encircling assault from west, north and south was practically complete.

Although no naval commanders for the British-based invasion have yet been named, Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, commander-in-chief of the British home fleet and hero of the Scharnhorst sinking, was regarded as a possible leader.

Promises Complete Defeat.

As Gen. Eisenhower yesterday promised the complete defeat of Germany in 1944, the Berlin radio said that Field Marshal Gens. Erwin Rommel and Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt had held an invasion council of war at which Rommel "convinced himself of the preparedness for action of the western European area."

Sir Arthur, who has been Eisenhower's chief air advisor in the combined Allied command in the Mediterranean established last February, is noted for the way he cuts red tape. He once expressed his aversion to precedent with the words, "to hell with history—what is the problem?"

In another shaping of Allied command, it was announced from New Delhi yesterday that Lt.-Gen. Sir Wilfred Gordon Lindsell, who had the tremendous quartermaster's job of keeping supplies moving across North Africa to Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army, has been appointed principal administrative officer at Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's southeast Asia command base in India.

Lineup Complete

London, Dec. 28 — (CP) — With selection of Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder as Deputy to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the main Allied invasion armies, the line-up of Allied land and air commanders for an encircling assault from the west or north and south was almost complete.

Besides Eisenhower and Sir Arthur, it includes:—

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, Chief of British Land Armies.

Lt.-Gen. Carl Spaatz, Chief of the American Strategic Air Forces.

Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Commander of the Mediterranean theatre.

Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Commander in Italy under Wilson.

Gen. Sir Bernard (Tolly) Paget, Commander in the Middle East under Wilson.

No naval commanders for the British-based invasion have yet been named.

CARRY MAIL BY PLANES

Ottawa, Dec. 28 — (CP) — The R.C.A.F. said last night a big batch of letters from Canadian servicemen in the Mediterranean theatre of war will be carried to Canada shortly by planes of the R.C.A.F.'s new mail squadron.

POPE KNOWS IDENTITY

New York, Dec. 28—(AP)—Implying he knew the nationality of the plane which bombed Vatican City Nov. 5, Pope Pius said in a statement broadcast last night by the Vatican radio that the attack was "deliberately planned and dishonorably and unsuccessfully screened behind the anonymity of the pilot." He did not identify the attacker.

Battleship Duke of York And Force of Destroyers Sink the Scharnhorst

London, Dec. 28. (CP) — The British Battleship Duke of York and a force of Destroyers participated in the naval battle which resulted in the sinking of the German Battleship Scharnhorst, the Admiralty announced tonight.

The Cruiser Jamaica also was in the formation.

The force which participated in the battle against the Scharnhorst when she attacked a convoy off the Norway North Cape, December 26, was disposed in two main divisions under the immediate command of Admiral Sir Bruce A. Fraser, commander-in-chief of the home fleet, the Admiralty said.

Admiral Fraser was in the Duke of York, flagship of the Home Fleet.

The cruiser Jamaica and four destroyers were with the Duke of York.

One Formation Escorting.

The other formation consisted of the Cruisers Belfast, Norfolk and Sheffield and was actually escorting the convoy southeast of Bear Island and when the Scharnhorst, steaming at 28 knots, first made contact with it.

The convoy was diverted northward and the cruisers opened fire on the Scharnhorst, the Norfolk claiming one hit. The 26,000-ton German battleship then turned away from the course of the convoy and was later seen taking evasive action to the northeast and proceeding at maximum speed, the Admiralty's statement continued.

Several hours later the Scharnhorst again tried to close in on the convoy and once more was engaged by the cruiser squadron.

The Norfolk received one hit aft.

Turned South, Retreated.

Then the Scharnhorst turned south and retreated at full speed for the nearest refuge on the Norwegian coast.

The cruisers continued to shadow the German ship, reporting her position to the 35,000-ton Duke of York, which was then moving up from the southeast to intercept.

By then darkness had closed in and the Scharnhorst kept to her southerly course at maximum speed until the Duke of York made first contact with her about 6.15 p.m. The enemy was on the Duke of York's port bow.

The Duke of York altered course to the southeast so as to bring her broadside to bear and quickly obtained a hit, the Admiralty said.

Scharnhorst Altered Course

Seeking to shake off the British forces closing in on her, the Scharnhorst altered course and sped eastward. The British took up the chase, the Duke of York to the west and the cruisers and destroyers in shadowing positions.

"There was danger that the Scharnhorst's superior sped might allow her to draw away from Admiral Fraser's flagship," the admiralty statement went on. Accordingly the destroyers Savage, Saumarez, Scorpion, and the Norwegian destroyer Stord, which had been travelling at full speed to get ahead of the enemy, turned in and attacked with torpedoes.

"The Scharnhorst was hit probably by three torpedoes in this attack which reduced her speed and enabled the Duke of York to close the range and engage again.

Seen Nearly Stopped

"Shortly afterward the Scharnhorst was seen on fire and lying nearly stopped. The cruiser H.M.S. Jamaica delivered a final torpedo attack after which the Scharnhorst sank at 7:45 pm. in a position about 60 miles northeast of North Cape."

The communique said some survivors were picked up and made prisoners of war. The convoy "which had sustained neither damage nor loss proceeded toward its destination without further incident."

There were "a few casualties and minor damage" to the Norfolk and the Saumarez," the communique said.

It concluded:

"A message of congratulation has been sent by His Majesty the King to the Commander-in-Chief of the home fleet, stating: 'Well done Duke of York and all of you. I am proud of you'."

A Berlin announcement that several German surface units engaged in the battle raised the possibility the Royal Navy might be chasing other enemy warships that attempted to attack the convoy.

Berlin's acknowledgment that several German "surface units"—plural —engaged in the prolonged battle indicated a possibility that Germany's last two remaining capital ships which are in fighting trim, the pocket battleships Admiral Scheer and Luetzow, were the objects of a Royal Navy chase.

The German news agency, D.N.B., quoting the Berlin newspaper Nachtausgabe, intimated the other ships

CANADIAN ARMY. TO FUNCTION AS ARMY--RALSTON

News Adds Strength to the Belief British Divisions May be Merged With Them

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(Canadian Press War Correspondent.)

London, Dec. 28. (CP Cable)—Announcement in Ottawa by Defence Minister Ralston that the Canadian Army will function as an army under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied Invasion Chief, adds strength to the belief a number of British Divisions will merge with the Canadian forces in England and give the Canadian Army a composite character for the European invasion.

It is possible for these British formations to come under Canadian Army Headquarters Command.

If this course is not followed, the Canadian Army here could scarcely function as an army which, in military parlance, implies a formation of at least two corps.

Formation of a corps in the Mediterranean, disclosed Sunday night to be commanded by Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, has reduced the number of Canadian troops here, although the strength remaining cannot now be cabled through the censorship from Britain. Any gaps in the army structure here, however, could easily be filled by excellent British troops.

One possibility is that an all-British corps might be put under the Canadian Command; another is that a composite Canadian-British Corps might be formed to operate with the other Canadian troops as a complete army formation.

MARINES SPREAD INVASION FRONT ON 2 BEACHHEADS

Tanks Now Move Along Road to Gloucester Airdrome

CAPE NOW HELD

By ROBERT EUNSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 28 —(AP)—Light and medium tanks moved along the road to the Cape Gloucester airdrome as United States marines spread their invasion front on two beachheads in western New Britain today.

The jungle-tested soldiers drove enemy opposition from Target Hill, a 450-foot hump near Borgen Bay which was pounded heavily from the air and by naval warships before the marines landed early Sunday morning. Japanese resistance on the hill failed the first day.

Marine artillery began shelling the Cape Gloucester airdrome, and light and medium tanks were last reported rumbling along the coastal track six miles west and north of the Gloucester airstrips.

In addition, Japanese positions at Bergen Bay also came under attack of the artillery batteries.

Japs Withdraw.

On the Arawe front, 60 miles southeast of Gloucester, advance patrols of the U. S. 6th Army were forced to withdraw under three enemy counter-attacks, but a spokesman at Allied Headquarters said the Americans made such a firm stand at Untingalu village that the enemy broke contact the following morning.

The army patrols now are fanning out again to the north and east, the spokesman said. The American troops landed at Arawe, on the southwest coast of the island, Dec. 15.

U.S. TROOPS READY FOR EMERGENCIES IN RAIL STRIKE

Experienced Men Will Be Used to Help Out Any Shortages In Manpower

OFFICIALS NAMED

Washington, Dec. 28 — (AP) — Swiftly taking over physical possession of the railroads of the United States, the Army is concentrating troops with railroad experience to supplement any possible manpower shortages.

War Secretary Harry Stimson disclosed the use of troops at a special news conference.

Asserting that "terrific dangers" confront the United States if a strike is carried out, Stimson announced that seven railroad presidents had been appointed Colonels and were ready to take over the operation of as many divisions.

In addition, Martin W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, was named general advisor to Lt.-Gen. Brenon Somervell, Chief of Army Service Forces, and Maj.-Gen. Charles P. Cross, director of transportation. Stimson said the two generals also would have the assistanct and advice of the staff of the American Railroad Association headed by John Pelley.

Stimson said an organization had been set up to operate the railroads and that wages and labor conditions as of 7 o'clock last night, would be held in "status quo" until the railroads were returned to civilian management.

Somervell and Stimson declared the railroads would be kept operating.

Somervell said that in addition to having troops with railroad experience ready to fill in on any jobs where necessary, the army also planned to use its trucks should the need arise and to make available army stocks of vehicles and food to supplement any civilian shortages.

The entire railroad system in the United States went under army control today, taken over by order of President Roosevelt to avert a strike that threatened to interfere with "major military offensives now planned."

The President's action was announced at 7 o'clock Monday night and became effective immediately.

The President explained his abrupt action by saying "I can not wait until the last moment to take action to see that the supplies to our fighting men are not interrupted. I am accordingly obliged to take over at once temporary possession and control of the railroads to ensure their continued operation.

"The government will expect every railroad man to continue at his post of duty.

"The major military offensives now planned must not be delayed by the interruption of vital transportation facilities. If any employees of the railroads now strike, they will be striking against the government of the United States."

17 Unions Withdraw Calls

Seventeen of the 20 unions had withdrawn strike calls and accepted the President's proposal to let him referee the dispute, and two more days remained before the Thursday strike deadline to induce the other three to do likewise. These three—conductors, firemen and switchmen—represent about 150,000 of the 1,450,000 railroad employees in the United States.

Although the leaders of the three operating brotherhoods did not comment immediately, the possibility of an interruption of railroad service appeared definitely passed.

Lt.-Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, acting for War Secretary Henry Stimson, carried out the railroad seizure order. Maj.-Gen. C P. Gross, Chief of the Army's Transportation System, was placed in charge of operating the lines.

Two Unions Given Increases

Simultaneously, the President awarded an increase of five cents an hour and a week's vacation annually to the employees represented by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who had accepted the President's offer last week to referee their dispute.

An award of four cents an hour already is in effect. The additional five cents, the President said, is to be paid "as the equivalent of or in lieu of claims for time and a half pay for time over 40 hours and for expenses away from home."

Cut Two Railroads Out of Germans' Communications

Troops Now Within 15 Miles Zhitomir-Odessa Lateral Railway Line

CAPTURE ANDRUSHEVKA

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Dec. 28 —(AP)— Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's 1st Ukraine army swung southwest of Kiev today in a new plunge toward Rumania and the Polish border, cutting two railroads out of the Germans' fast-dwindling network of communications and threatening the flank of the enemy forces along the lower Dnieper river.

Vatutin's spectacular advance through the town of Andrushevka, 120 miles from the Rumanian frontier, was preceded by terrific artillery barrages. It carried his troops forward approximately 40 miles from the starting point of his offensive in the Brusilov sector to within 15 miles of the Zhitomir-Odessa lateral railway line.

This strategic railroad, which Nazi Marshal Fritz von Mannstein cleared at heavy cost by his ill-fated November tank onslaught, was again in imminent danger, according to dispatches from the front.

Near Key Rail City.

Capture of Andrushevka put the Russians 20 miles northeast of the key city of Beridchev, even closer than they were last month before Von Mannstein's attack pushed them back from the Zhitomir-Korosten sector. Berdichev is on a major Axis railway feeding German forces in the Ukraine from Poland.

The Soviet forces, turning southwest from Brusilov, crossed the east-west Fastov-Zhitomir railroad and another line running southwest from Kiev to Vinnitsa and Zhmerinka which controls the eastern web of the vital Warsaw-Odessa rail network. They passed Vcheraishe, a town 70 miles southwest of Kiev.

Vitebsk, the White Russian fortified zone which is the goal of the other current Red army offensive under Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian, has been almost isolated, following severance of the Vitebsk-Polotsk railroad yesterday. Germans in the Vitebsk sector now have a single escape rail link, leading south to Orsha and then southwest through Minsk to Poland.

In Vatutin's drive southwest of Kiev toward southern Poland and Rumania, Russian guns tore wide gaps in the enemy lines, the Russian war bulletin said.

Berlin said that nearly 500,000 Russians were slashing at the German lines and broadcasts reflected anxiety over what the new Soviet drive may portend.

Washington, Dec. 28—(AP)—Britain is arranging to pay cash for certain types of long-life capital goods such as machine tools, which can be utilized in the post-war period, a foreign economic administration spokesman said last night.

Striking Steel Workers Begin Return to Mills

Pittsburgh, Dec. 28 (AP)—A one-day walkout by more than 170,000 steel workers appeared ended today with the granting of their demands for possible retroactive pay from new contracts being negotiated.

Reports fro mthe scores of plants in nine states which were closed by the work stoppages showed most of the men were obeying orders telegraphed last night by Philip Murray, President of the United Steelworkers of America (C.I.O.), to resume "uninterduptedly the production of steel."

Murray's instructions were dispatched a few minutes after the War Labor Board in Washington issued a directive which incorporated suggestions of President Roosevelt that retroactive pay be guaranteed.

Steel operators had little alternative but to accept the order. Reports in informed sources were that the War Production Board would readily consider requests for higher steel prices, which Benjamin F. Fairless, President of the U.S. Steel Corporation, said some time ago would be necessary to cover any added cost such as more pay to the workers.

Republic Steel Corp., largest of 214 companies whose contracts with the union expired at midnight Christmas Eve, precipitating the crisis, estimated it would require "about 48 hours" for production to return to normal.

More than half of Pennsylvania's 40,000 idle went back. Others were to follow on the afternoon and evening shifts. Ohio reported big turnouts from its army of more than 80,000 idle.

The 20,000 employees of Wheeling Steel in Ohio and West Virginia were slow in responding to the back-to-work order but a company spokesman said it "seemed reasonable to assume operations would be restored during the day."

The break in the crisis came just as steel production dropped to its lowest rate since 1940 when the United States defence program began its "all-out" wartime production campaign.

The Labor Board, in agreeing to retroactivity by an 8 to 4 vote, reversed the stand labor members of the board took last Wednesday when they voted down a virtually identical proposition made by the public members.

Col. Drew Returning Home This Week

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP) — Acting Premier T. L. Kennedy of Ontario, said today he had received a cable that Premier George Drew, who has been in England since early in December, will return to Canada this week—probably Thursday.

Mr. Kennedy said Premier Drew probably will not resume his duties at Queen's Park until January 6, when he will confer with his cabinet on arrangements he has made for the reopening of an Ontario office in London.

Captured Nazi Reveals Hitler Ordered Mass Murder of Russians in 1941

New York, Dec. 28 (AP) — Adolf Hitler expressed contempt for international law in 1941 and ordered mass murder of Russians on a scale bigger than that related at the recent Kharkov trials, according to a captured German staff officer of "high repute," a broadcast from Moscow said last night.

The broadcast, by the Soviet-sponsored Free Germany Committee, said the officer, Maj. Bernhard Bechler, related that he attended a staff meeting in March, 1941, before the invasion of Russia, at which Hitler communicated his views to a group of generals and SS. (Elite Guard) leaders."

"His (Hitler's) plans," Bechler was quoted as saying, "including a demand to wipe out the whole Russian intelligentsia, mayors, economic leaders, engineers, officers, and so forth, by the fighting troops themselves.

"For making this possible, military courts were to be abolished. He described this permanent mass murder as necessary for the destruction of Bolshevism and for the Germanization of the east."

Bechler said he was at another conference at which Hitler cried:

"International law, indeed! We shall determine what is international law once we have won the war."

Bechler said German generals first opposed Hitler's murder order because it might impair troop discipline but that later the high command issued it, with instructions to shoot all captured political commissars of the Russian army without trial.

LITTLE DAMAGE IN NUMEROUS CALLS

Although the Belleville Fire Department was called on several occasions on Christmas Day there were no holiday casualties resulting from the celebrations and comparatively little damage done in any of the instances. A car fire in front of Pappas' Billiard Parlor on Front Street brought the fire trucks out on the first call but the only damage done was the burning of the insulation from the ignition wires. A false alarm called the department to the hospital. The thermostat alarm was short circuited and put in the alarm. There was no damage reported in the call, that sent the city firemen to 243 Bridge East to extinguish a chimney fire and most of the grass behind the Nurses' Home at the Belleville General Hospital was burned in a grass fire which started from undetermined causes. No Christmas tree fires were reported in the city during the week-end.

TIRES, TUBES STOLEN FROM PARKED CAR

Tire thieves were reported active in the Frankford area over the Christmas weekend when two complete sets of tires, tubes and rims were stolen from a parked car in that village, Provincial Police learned yesterday.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD CHILD BITTEN BY DOG

Four-year-old Patricia Squire, 165 College St., sustained a nasty arm wound when bitten by a dog near her home Sunday afternoon. The little girl was attended by Dr. G. S. Cronk. The dog to attack the four-year-old lass is said by police to belong to a family named Crawford residing at 101 Cannifton Road. The owners were warned to keep the animal secured on their own property in the future. The dog was playing with other children when the incident took place.

CLOTHES ARE TORN BY STRAY DOG

Mrs. William Dix, 77 College St., complained to authorities she had been attacked and bitten by a wire-haired terrier in the vicinity of the intersection of West Moira and Sidney Sts. over the weekend. As the result of the attack Mrs. Dix's rubber was torn and her stocking damaged. No serious personal injury resulted. Thos. Thorne, Humane Society Inspector, investigated and today stated a dog answering the same description had attacked and torn the clothes of other people in that vicinity last week.

BROWN COCKER SPANIEL PLACED IN DOG POUND

Found wandering at large a brown cocker spaniel dog was placed in the confines of the city dog pound by Dog Catcher Thos. Thorne on Christmas Day. The canine was wearing a collar, but had no dog tag to prove identification of ownership to the department. It is a well bred spaniel, Mr. Thorne announced.

CARELESS DRIVING CHARGE PREFERRED

Property damage estimated at over $500.00 resulted to two motor cars that were in collision on Highway No. 2 twelve miles east of Belleville Monday evening. Traffic Officer Wm. G. Milton investigated and reported that a motor car driven by Kenneth Grange of Deseronto, was proceeding easterly and in some manner is alleged to have sideswiped a westbound automobile driven by Clare Cassidy of Oshawa. After the two vehicles were in collision both went into the north ditch and considerable damage resulted to the right side of both automobiles. A charge of careless driving was preferred against Grange today, revealed Traffic Officer Milton.

Ice-Covered Pavements Cause of Many Accidents

Traffic accidents in Belleville remained at a low level over the extended holiday weekend, not a single fatality being reported, while the majority of collisions resulted from freezing rain, that left city streets glaring with ice on Sunday and Monday.

One of the most serious accidents occurred on East Dundas Street early Friday evening with 78-year-old George Cross of the Hastings County Home sustained a fractured leg, when hit by a motor car driven by Mrs. Annie Burshaw of Point Anne. Mrs. Burshaw was driving east on Dundas Street when the elderly man walked out from the curb directly into the path of the motor car. Besides the fractured leg head lacerations resulted. The injured man was removed to the nearby institution, where he resides and the fracture reduced.

Push Cart Hit

Leo Palmer and Oscar Fox, residing at 379 1-2 Front Street sustained injuries when the push cart they were directing on Station Street was struck by a motar car driven by Thomas Lyon of Corbyville, Friday evening. Palmer told police the headlights of a motor car he was meeting blinded him and he was unable to see the men pushing the cart. Palmer was the more seriously injured sustaining fractured bones in his right foot and bruises necessitating medical attention in hospital.

Fender Damage Results

On Christmas afternoon at the intersection of Cedar and Catherine Streets a motor car driven by Edward Smith of Carrying Place collided with an automobile being driven along Catherine Street by M. K. Carson R.R. No. 3 Belleville. Investigations by police revealed Smith had failed to observe the 'stop street' precaution, while driving along Cedar Street. Fender damage resulted. Late Christmas night cars driven by Ray Crawford, Forin Street, and James Robertson, 169 Moira Street West, sideswiped as they attempted to pass on Dundas Street, where other motor vehicles were parked on both sides of the thoroughfare. Fender damage resulted and the matter was amicably settled, police reported.

Roads Attributable

On Sunday evening the icy condition of North Front Street, due to rain freezing on the pavement, a motor car driven by W. R. McMechan, Smithfield, skidded into the rear of a stalled automobile driven by Annie McLuskie, No. 3 Grove Street, causing damage estimated at $150.00 to Mr. McMechan's front fenders and radiator. The vehicle driven by the lady had stalled on North Front Street as McMechan approached from the north. The slippery pavement resulted in the McMechan car skidding when the driver applied his brakes. Ice-covered pavements at the intersection of East Bridge and Albert Streets were attributed to a collision of cars driven by Reg. Scriven, 103 Dundas Street West, and Douglas McIntosh, 275 John Street on Monday afternoon. Here the damage was negligible, police said.

Charges Pending

Reports of a hit-and-run motorist on East Dundas Street Friday afternoon resulted in Chief Probert and Sergt. Ellis apprehending Chester Baker, 23 Forin Street for questioning. Police say the right side of Baer's car was badly damaged, when they discovered it at the rear of his home following the reported collision. Charges are pending, police reported today.

As the result of the weekend's rains, that froze leaving city streets glaring sheets other minor collisions occurred when fenders bumped and bumpers were dearranged.

Drivers Did Not Stop

Two hit-and-run cases were reported to police on Sunday resulting in property damage only. Rev. J. S Spearman, 13 Green Street, parked his car on East Dundas Street Sunday evening only to return and find the front grill, left fender and headlight had been damaged

About the same time fender damage to a parked car on Coleman Street resulted after a hit-and-run incident. This car is owned by George Dentes, 18 Howard Street, who was visiting at Coleman Street when the damage occurred. Police were notified on both occasions, but little information was available relative to the responsible parties.

Pte. Jos. Rowland Killed in Action

Veteran of the Sicilian campaign last summer and recently engaged with his unit in heavy fighting in Italy, Private Joseph Rowland, formerly 19 Isobel Street, Belleville, has been killed in action, according to word received in the city over the holiday. According to the information received he was killed December 16th.

Resident of Belleville for the greater part of his 24 years, Private Rowland attended Queen Mary School and was a member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. He enlisted in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment early in the war and has been overseas since July, 1940. In recent letters home he indicated he was proud to be a member of the H.&P.E., speaking very highly of the Regiment's fighting ability.

Married since going overseas, he is survived by his wife Vivian in Brighton, England, as well as his foster father Arthur W. Rowland of this city, and three foster sisters, Ella and Mabel, at home, and Mrs. Audrey Travis.

POLICE BLOTTER

Sneak thieves stole two leather seats from a parked car on the Cities Service parking lot some time over the holiday weekend, police were informed by the proprietor of the West End Motors. Both the front and rear seats of a sedan were taken.

Police Recover Bike

Police recovered a bicycle that had been left abandoned along the Moira River bank at the foot of St. Charles St. on Sunday. The bike was taken to the police station for safe keeping. A youthful skater is believed to have forgotten his bike.

Chickens Stolen

John Wallan, third concession of Tyendinaga Township, reported to Provincial Police the theft of a dozen chickens stolen from his chicken coop sometime over the weekend. The investigation has not been completed as yet.

No Crime Reported

No serious crime was reported in Belleville over the Christmas holiday period. As a matter of fact only three persons had to be cautioned relative to imbibing too freely of the season "spirits".

Royal Bank Assets Exceed $1,500,000,000

New high records in practically all departments of the bank's business are revealed in the Annual Balance Sheet of The Royal Bank of Canada for the year ended November 30, 1943. Total assets, which a year ago reached the highest point in the bank's history, have again expanded and now stand at the record figure of $1,509,097,571 as compared with $1,291,615,946 on November 30, 1942. Deposits have likewise reached a new high level, and now total $1,380,769,152, an increase of more than $216,000,000 for the year.

Current loans in Canada are again moderately higher, and now stand at $277,921,237 as compared with $255,148,401 a year ago, an increase of over $22,700,000. It is understood that this increase is due largely to increased borrowing by the public for the purchase of the Fifth Victory Loan. Apart from this, it is understood that many firms have found it unnecessary to borrow because of rapid turnover and prompt settlement of accounts in connection with war production. Furthermore inventories are, generally speaking, lower.

Loans outside Canada show a moderate reduction.

The liquid position of the bank continues very strong, with quickly realizable assets equal to 78.09% of the bank's liabilities to the public. There has been a marked expansion in liquid assets which now total $1,104,703,439, as compared with $906,440,239 a year ago. Included in these liquid assets are Dominion and Provincial securities amounting to $641,898,620, which is an increase of $122,000,000 as compared with last year. Cash on hand, deposits with the Bank of Canada, other cash items and bank balances also show a substantial increase and now stand at $323,225,988 as compared with $261,884,475 in November 1942.

After providing $2,281,952 for Dominion Government taxes, an increase of $267,786 over a year ago, and after providing for bad and doubtful debts, profits for the year amounted to $3,426,289, a moderate increase over the figures for the previous year. From these profits dividends amounting to $2,100,000 were paid. For the Pension Fund an appropriation of $370,000 was set aside and $400,000 for Bank Premises. The sum of $556,289 was carried forward to the balance of Profit and Loss Account which now stands at $3,815,487.

DID NOT TARRY LONG

Seattle, Dec. 28—(AP)—Miss Carl White, 18, told police she was walking home when she was seized by a youth who spun her around, kissed her soundly and sprinted away.

Partisan Attacks Cause Nazis To Retire in Croatia

London, Dec. 28 — (CP) — German troops fell back before fierce Yugoslav Partisan attacks in Croatia, Marshal Josip Broz's headquarters announced today, while farther south, in the Livno-Duvno sector of Western Bosnia, several hundred Nazis were reported killed.

The reinforced Germans sent a column into the town of Glamoc, 15 miles north of Livno, but the war bulletin by Broz, known as Tito, said Partisan forces sent them back in disorder toward their base at Livno, after suffering heavy losses in men and equipment.

The Yugoslavs were battling Germans and Chetniks in all parts of Eastern Bosnia, Tito reported. Everywhere the Partisans were on the offensive, especially around the towns of Kladanz and Zivinizar.

Yugoslavs staged a surprise attack on an airfield in the neighborhood of Zagreb, the Croat capital, and destroyed a three-engined bomber, captured 225 prisoners, including a German captain, and gathered huge stores of loot, the war bulletin said. A large enemy camp at Turopolje, in the same area, was blown up as well as a nearby bridge. Sixty German officers and men were captured with machine-guns, rifles and ammunition.

Guerilla columns operating near Velik-Goritza, less than 10 miles from Zagreb, derailed an enemy troop train and tore up several miles of railway track between Zagreb and Dugo Seloh.

Tito said his Partisans clashed with Chetnik troops of Gen. Draja Mihailovic near Novo Selo in Bosnia and routed them with heavy losses. This followed reports from the Yugoslav government in Cairo that the internecine struggle between Chetniks and Partisans was diminishing, "at least in some localities."

LAND-BASED

U.boat's stern was lifted completely out of the water. The submarine slid below the surface leaving large quantities of wreckage and oil and numerous Nazi sailors in the water.

Another U-boat, found prowling around a North Atlantic convoy, was sunk by a Liberator in which Flt. Sgt. H. E. Miskiman of Vancouver is second pilot. The airmen counted 35 Nazi survivors in the water.

Dropped Flame Floats

"By this time it was getting dark and we couldn't remain any longer," Miskiman said. "We dropped flame floats and gave the convoy the position of the Nazi survivors. Then we headed back for base."

Two successful attacks on subs in the Mediterranean and Atlantic in three nights were made by an aircraft piloted by 20-year-old Sgt. Pilot Donald Mervin Cornish of Scout Lake, Sask.

His aircraft was equipped with the Leigh Light, which throws a beam of millions of candlepower, and his fine work earned him the immediate award of a D.F.M. It was the first time he had sighted a sub in 400 hours on anti-submarine patrol.

Spotted Wake of U-Boat

In the night attack, Cornish and his crew spotted the wake of a U-boat. They circled low over it, preparatory to attacking, and tracer bullets flashed by in the darkness. Some bullets hit the aircraft.

"We were right on top of him when we switched on the light and felt certain we had laid our depth charges accurately," Cornish said. "Coming back later, we found the U-boat stationary on the surface. We knew he was badly damaged. For three hours we hovered around the area, keeping an eye on him from a distance. Then he disappeared, apparently for good."

The next day, 49 survivors from a U-boat were picked up in the area and landed in Portugal. It was definite proof of the nocturnal kill.

BRITISH CONVOY

fled before the Scharnhorst went down, her guns blazing to the last, and "as far as can be ascertained, the battleship faced a superior enemy alone during her decisive hour."

First reports of the battle as heard in Stockholm over the German radio said Scharnhorst was disabled by a torpedo and then knocked out by salvoes from British warships escorting the convoy. The broadcast said the battleship sank in the Barents Sea.

The battle developed Sunday afternoon in the stormy Arctic where at this time of the year there is only about three hours of twilight daily and no real daylight.

Stockholm dispatches said a Nazi naval squadron led by the Scharnhorst apparently left its Norwegian hideaway Christmas day to attack the Allied convoy as it skirted along the ice ring bordering the Arctic Ocean.

Either the German naval commanders didn't anticipate the presence of British capital ships in the vicinity or deliberately attempted a suicide mission to lure the British fleet into a fight so the 45,000-ton Tirpitz, crippled by torpedoes last September, might break out to sea and sneak down the Norwegian coast to a Baltic port for repairs.

No Planes Used.

Stockholm advices said eight to 10 German destroyers were believed involved in the battle and there also might have been other heavier German surface craft.

Bad weather, including swirling snowstorms and fog, would make the operation of shore or carrier-based planes almost impossible in that part of the world and, except for the possible presence of Nazi U-boats, it was believed the clash was entirely a surface engagement.

In the absence of detailed official information, it was believed in London that the entire crew of Scharnhorst, around 1,400 officers and men, probably died in the latest blow at Nazi sea power—brilliant sequel to the sinking of Bismarck in May, 1941.

Admiral Sir William James, chief of British naval information, said that German surface striking power now is reduced to "two pocket battleships of some 10,000 tons (Admiral Scheer and Luetzow) and some small cruisers."

D.N.B. hinted German losses were not restricted to the Scharnhorst, declaring "such an action in difficult conditions of the Arctic Sea always is connected with the risk of heavy losses."

However, the German High Command declares there were no other Nazi losses in the battle.

The Admiralty, which never issues a detailed report until a naval operation is completed, made no further announcement after its brief statement last night that Scharnhorst had been sunk.

Spotted by Aircraft

The German High Command, through a DNB broadcast, gave these details of the sea fight:

"Several days ago an enemy convoy bound for Murmansk was observed by German reconnaissance aircraft. This convoy carried war equipment and food supplies for the Russian front. A force of the German Navy was sent therefore against it, and off the North Cape the enemy convoy was intercepted.

"Poor weather allowed only limited visibility. On Dec. 26 toward 11 a.m., the battle cruiser Scharnhorst, with Commander of Destroyers Rear Admiral Bey as Commander-in-Chief on board, established fighting contact with escort units consisting of destroyers and cruisers protecting the convoy.

"Shortly after the engagement had begun one of the heavy enemy units intervened in the battle. In the course of the engagement the enemy succeeded, by a surprise move which owing to the prevailing poor visibility could not at first be discerned, in bringing up heavy units.

"After several hours of the fiercest action Scharnhorst, under command of Capt. Hintze, was encircled by enemy units. She sank with her colors flying, toward 7:30 p.m., after having inflicted heavy damage upon the enemy, firing until the last shell was spent.

"Remaining German units participating in the battle suffered no loss. Next-of-kin of the crew of Scharnhorst will be informed of their fate as soon as the news becomes available."

Dominate North Sea

With Scharnhorst sent to the bottom, the Home Fleet now virtually dominate the North Sea to protect troop transports and supply ships which may be taking that route when an invasion of Western Europe is begun.

British naval commentators declared the loss of Scharnhorst is likely to have a far-reaching effect on Allied naval strategy, pointing out that for many months it has been necessary to keep large forces of the Home Fleet in northern waters to cope with the possibility that German sea raiders might attempt to dash out of their Norwegian hideaways.

German naval policy for the last two years has been aimed at keeping a major British naval concentration in northern home waters. The Nazis ventured forth only twice previously in the last 12 months, the first time last New Year's Eve, when they tried to find a north bound Russian convoy and ran into a vigilant British light force and fled. The second time was Sept. 22, when Scharnhorst and Tirpitz steamed out to attack the tiny Norwegian garrison on Spitsbergen.

Germany's biggest warship, the 45,000-ton Tirpitz, and the 26,000-ton Gneisenau, sister ship of the Scharnhorst, both were written off the active list by Admiral James and Admiral of the Fleet Lord Keyes.

The Germans' reckless and ill-fated gamble in risking one of their three remaining capital ships indicated they have reached a desperate stage in their attempt to the supply route to Russia.

Belleville and District Men Took Part in Moro River Crossing

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Italy—(Delayed) — (CP Cable) The battle of the Moro river which began December 8, put the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in its fiercest series of engagements of the Italian campaign. Men of this Central Ontario unit, fighting under the heaviest German fire that had been poured on them in Italy, pushed the Germans out of positions dominating the Moro valley, dug themselves in and held.

The enemy tried time after time to force the battalion back across the river but every man stood fast and as more Canadian troops crossed the valley the Hastings moved forward beyond the ground they had held so well.

The battalion's first foothold across the river was established by a company whose commander was wounded by shrapnel when the enemy subjected the company to heavy artillery and mortar fire after they had gained a position near the top of a sandy shoulder above which the enemy sat.

Withering Fire.

The troops, who had faced withering fire after they had left the paved road and started across the muddy valley bed, were not budged by the rain of shells and bombs. Two more companies and finally a fourth which had crossed originally followed them over.

Looking back across the valley from a trench in the yellow slope where his company commander was hit when a shell exploded in a tree nearby, Lieut. J. D. Seaton of Brockville, Ont., said he wondered "how in hell his men ever made it."

The flat valley bed, with its vineyards and tall yellow reed stalks, was exposed to machine-gun fire from the 150-foot northwestern slope. Big W. J. R. McKnight, of Bowmanville, now the Acting Company Sergeant-Major, said it took his company an hour and 11 minutes to get across the valley's 800-yard width. One sergeant started across with a platoon but had only two non-commissioned officers and six men left when he reached the sand bank on the German side.

The platoon commanders of the company were Seaton and Lieuts. H. J. Vallery of Peterborough and Tom Davis of Montreal. Their N.C.O.'s and men included Sgts. R. D. Pickell, Belleville, Dick Impey, Picton; Cpls. Doug. Knight, Lansdowne, Blake Faulkner, Stirling, L/Cpl. Tom Moore, Lakefield; Ptes. Bill Torrance, Peterborough, Archie Agnew, Galt, Jack Sharpe, Uxbridge, Chuck Murney, Peterborough, Art Bell, Newboro, Bill McCarthy, Ottawa, Lawrence Brown, Cornwall, Andy Herron, Toronto, Floyd Lambier, Essex, Joe Long, Woodford, Graham Wigglesorth, Liverpool, N.S.

Belleville Corporal.

Cpl. Doug Ruttan of Belleville and Pte. C. R. Turner, Havelock, both armed with tommy-guns, set out at dusk on the southwestward patrol to get information. They crept across slopes in front of German positions for more than two miles. Cpl. H. E. McKnight, a brother of the company sergeant-major, made three trips along the valley to get information, locate the right flank of another battalion and round up as much as he could of a disorganized mule train. Presence of enemy tanks was detected on one occasion by Davis and Cpl. Jim Buckley, Cardinal.

A pair of anti-tank guns, each weighing nearly a ton, were manhandled a mile and a half through the valley mud up a rough trail and set up below a road where a movement was heard. Their crews were directed by Sgt. Hubert Guay of Iroquois, Ont., and the troops performed a job which had been considered impossible and looks impossible even now.

Meanwhile, mule trains were led across the valley under heavy fire in charge of C.S.M. Angus Duffy of Trenton and the battalion during its battle never was short of either ammunition or food.

One of the counter-attacks was spotted by Pte. George Fields.

During the counter-attacks the truck drivers who hadn't been able to get their transports across the valley and who helped guide the mule trains, took a hand in sniping.

Picked Off Four

Among them were Cpl. Rollie Fleming of Madoc, Tom O'Brien of Bancroft. Pte. Irwin Jackson of Gunter, Ont., handyman among the battalion headquarters personnel, accounted for four Germans with his rifle.

During one of the heavy German counter-attacks, Sgt. Bill Nolan of Bancroft, whose platoon occupied a forward position, refused to move despite the severity of the assault.

C.S.M. Cecil Yearwood of Madoc established himself in a two-storey building overlooking the Hastings position, knocked a hole in the tile roof, and sniped away while one of his men fired through a hole in the wall directly below him.

Artillery fire was directed on the enemy by Capt. Con Harrington of Montreal who was forward observation officer with the battalion. It was his first action and was commended on all sides.

Pte. Avon Duffy, brother of the Regimental Sergeant Major, took two prisoners and buried the bodies of four Germans killed by shell-fire. C.S.M. George Ponsfort of Picton carried food across non-man's land during the fighting and brought back wounded.

There were numerous other acts of distinction in the battalion whose fight protected the main Canadian bridgehead. During a series of counter-attacks the enemy sometimes was within 30 yards of the men of the Hastings and the groves in front of them were littered with German dead.

When Sgt. Jim McCaw of Belleville was asked what men distinguished themselves particularly in the company in which he platoon sergeant he replied: "we had 100 of them in our company."

U. S. Destroyer, Transport Ship Lost in Action

Washington, Dec. 28 —(AP)— An American destroyer and a coastal transport ship went down under Japanese bombs in the landings at Cape Gloucester on the western tip of New Britain island, Secretary of the Navy Knox announced today.

Knox, reporting the losses at a news conference, did not name the vessels, nor was he able to provide any information on the number of men lost.

He described as "fantastic as usual" Japanese claims that two heavy cruisers and two transports were sunk in the operations.

The loss of the destroyer and small transport, he said, resulted from an air attack four or five hours after the operation started. They were our only losses, Knox said.

'We Will Win European War in 1944'

The European war will be won during the year 1944, said General Dwight D. Eisenhower, new commander of the main European invasion force, in a press conference before leaving the Mediterranean theatre for Britain to take charge of plans for the great assault on Hitler' "fortress" of Europe by the British and American forces.

That assurance coming from the commander who has made his reputation in two wars, differing so greatly in scope and in method, will bring confidence to the entire United Nations world. Hopes have been expressed that the war would reach its end in 1944. General Eisenhower has now declared it will be ended in that year and makes no qualification in his prophecy. He notes that "the only thing needed for us to win the European war in 1944 is for every man and woman, all the way from the front line to the remotest hamlet of our two countries, to do his or her full duty."

That is a call to a full effort and should need no other urging. Performance of the full duty resting upon everyone is necessary and with that there will be the long-desired victory that will bring peace to Europe, which has been twice torn by the Germans lust for power.

The Allied commander sees the full scale and all-out partnership in operation which is essential to the Allied effort. He says that the job will be a "terrific" one "but we will do it."

Support of the viewpoint of General Eisenhower is given by Vice President Wallace of the United States who predicts that unless Germany has a "really effective secret weapon" her military power will be completely destroyed within "a few months after a successful second front has been opened."

Gen. McNaughton's Service

Canadians will regret that General McNaughton's health has compelled his retirement as commander of the Canadian army overseas. His name has been linked with the Canadian army ever since its formation and he has labored long and with tireless interest and enthusiasm in bringing it up to the point of perfection as a striking unit, inferior to none in the world. Several years ago he called it a dagger pointing at the heart of Berlin. The Canadian army has been built into a force with the heaviest possible armor development.

General McNaughton is a practical soldier and a scientist, with the spirit of research. In the past war he had part in the development of the counter artillery barrage.

He served Canada nobly in the first European war and also in this struggle where his aptitude for organization and scientific research and his practical skill and knowledge as a soldier have developed the Canadian force. Its work in Sicily and in Italy is a proof of the perfection of training which his men have received under his guidance.

Canadians have every confidence in the Canadian army as it has been built up by General McNaughton to play the part in the coming victory.

The people of Canada will hope that the time is not far distant when the General will have been restored to health so that he will be able to serve the Dominion in a way that will utilize the full benefit of his experience and exceptional abilities as Prime Minister King said in a tribute.

General McNaughton is the type of soldier and leader in whom Canada takes pride. He is beloved by his men and by the nation. During the war he suffered the loss of a gallant son while serving in the forces.

Hun Battleship Sunk

Germany's navy was dealt a heavy blow by the sinking on Sunday of her 26,000-ton battleship, the Scharnhorst, in the Arctic Ocean as she attempted to raid an Allied convoy and was attacked and sent to the bottom by units of the British Home Fleet. This craft with the Gneisenau and the Tirpitz has been sought by the British and now with her gone to Davey Jones' Locker, it is thought that the Germans have not a single battleship left in fighting trim as the other two are believed incapacitated. Reports express the belief that the German navy can have not the faintest hope of ever staging a naval combat against the Royal Navy.

Germany's navy has not had a brilliant course in this war for early she lost the Bismarck in one of the great British naval victories.

And her sea warfare with the U-boat has failed and huge losses of the Hun sea marauders have been reported.

Nazi sea power is at low ebb and will not be able to play a prominent part in the final scenes and events of this epic struggle. The British navy and the American navy control the ocean ways and have rendered a service in this war which everyone realizes to be of the greatest importance in linking up the far-flung fronts against the enemy. Japanese undersea and naval warfare has also suffered heavy losses from the Allied fleets.

All in all, the Allied might on land, on the sea and in the air is achieving the defeat of the Germans who tried to build a powerful air force which failed to achieve its purpose and who have failed on the sea. On land the German armies are being defeated and cut down in Russia and in the Mediterranean area and the next gigantic move will see the air, sea and land power of the United Nations battering Germany into submission and defeat which it is intended will forever crush any German spirit to drag the world into war.

After Christmas

Christmas is past but the spirit of Christmas is not gone. It lingers on in the influences it has set at work. If Christmas could just come and go and the spirit which emanates and flows from it meant nothing more, then it would not be Christmas as we know it.

Christmas is a part of everyone. It is more than mere giving of gifts, it is attuned to something that is divine in humanity and it permits man to give expression to ideals and sentiments which have a benign influence throughout the year.

Though the 25th of December is past, the associations of that day, and the emotions stirred up in anticipation and in realization of that time carry on.

The Christmas spirit radiates into the future. It is the forecast of a world of good will for nothing else is so powerful as good will. It has built up and inspired traditions and memories which do not pass. They exist because they are so necessary to the human heart.

As the Christmas we have just observed recedes and the weeks go by, there is the hope that the next Christmas will come upon the world with Germany defeated and the end of the war in the Far East that much nearer.

Christmas and the United Nations are on the side of the angels. The ideals they express and foster and create are for the betterment of humanity.

The message of Christmas is always peace and good will and in that spirit the Allied Nations have been fighting to bring to a conclusion the most ravaging of wars set in motion by the spirit that would destroy. The spirit that activates the enemy is evil, its every expression is evil because aggression and militarism are rooted in evil, and Nazism being evil, is bound to fall before that which is true, beautiful and good.

The highest mileage steamed by an Indian warship stands to the credit of H.M.I.S. Jumna, the sloop which shot down four Japanese bombers in Dutch East Indies waters early in 1942. Her 'tally' of 51,179 miles represents an average of 140 miles a day during twelve months.

MORE PROGRESS

Blow on the bugles and rattle the drums.
Into our circle a new delight comes!
Never a week passes by but our store
Of raptures to boast is increased by one more.
Now in a letter they've sent us the news:
Ellen Elizabeth laces her shoes!

Quarter-past-three, and that smart little tot
Already has learned how to fashion a knot.
Morning and night now she brushes her teeth!
Had I some laurel I'd make her a wreath.
Gasp in amazement as this you peruse:
Ellen Elizabeth laces her shoes!

Scorns all assistance and sits on the floor,
Proving to mother she needs her no more.
Tiny her fingers and still a bit slow,
As with the latchet they work to and fro.
Still to applaud her there's none would refuse.
Ellen Elizabeth laces her shoes!

Grandmother says, as she's boasting her joys:
"Little girls always were smarter than boys,
Little girls always were quicker to learn."
Grandmother often has talked out of turn.
Still as a topic to boast, this I choose:
Ellen Elizabeth laces her shoes!

On Christmas eve and the following evening the north dial of the new town clock was illuminated and shone brightly through the heavy atmosphere. When fully illuminated the effect will indeed be striking. The town is to be congratulated on the possession of the largest and most powerful clock in the Province — a boon which will be even better appreciated hereafter.

Many of the young people enjoyed themselves on Christmas Day skating at various places in the town and coasting on the many hills in the town and vicinity. Innumerable cutters and sleighs — many with handsome robes — and loaded with happy townspeople, dashed about the streets in the afternoon and all were happy. The weather was very favorable and many persons walked about the streets greeting and talking with their friends.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

The settlers' narrow clearings, always grudging in their harvest yields were hard hit by the cold weather of 1816. People called it the "summerless year." Not a month passed but there was frost. Little corn or wheat ripened. When it came time to gather in the crops, men went out to the fields fortified with overcoats or zero-weather jackets.

In the new townships, people had little to complain of when tax day rolled around. Municipal records of a district in Upper Canada in 1826 show that several ratepayers paid 8c. or less, and only one person paid as much as $15 Rates were based on whether the house was built of logs, brick, frame or stone. Let us read between the lines, however, and we'll soon realize that if taxes were low, incomes were correspondingly tiny After all, a man hasn't much money to jingle about in his pocket when he only gets 2 or 3 shillings a bushel for his grain. Some hard-pressed citizens travelled days to the nearest town in order to sell a load of hay, knowing that the sum realized would just pay their taxes

There were no flowers but the wild ones with which to deck the log cabins. So the women set great store by the loveliness they gathered in the woods, and they took great pains in drying the prettiest blossoms to make them last as long as possible. It was a job requiring a delicate touch. First, fine clean sand must be sifted, then washed until the last waters were perfectly clear. It must then be dried and heated hotter than the hand could bear; then cooled and used at once. Directions then proceed: "Cork hole in flower pot-fill one-third with dry sand-set flowers in carefully. Add sand to cover and place pot under stove for 24 hours. Gently remove stopper, let sand flow out. Flowers will be found to be dried in natural shapes and colors. Care must be taken to remove dew or dampness before drying. Bell or funnel-shaped and double flowers should be placed upright and dried without press of too much sand. Flat or wheel-shaped flowers should be set face down. White flowers tend to become yellowish with drying."

By 1870 the North-West had "grown up" and was ready to keep step with its eastern neighbors. In that year, the Dominion Government paid 300,000 pounds to the Hudson's Bay Company for its proprietory rights and its monopoly of trade. A twentieth of all lands surveyed for future settlement was promised to the Company, and guarnatees were given, against excessive taxation . . . Through the long years the Hudson's Bay Company had come to havegreat prestige in all the western territories. This influence was vastly helpful during the ensuing transition from a fur-trading land to a region of steadily developing agriculture and commerce.

Going fishing with an Indian during the years when the Hudson's Bay Company was opening posts through the west brought many revelations of the red man's ingenuity. Lacking metal, the Indian fashioned hooks from prongs of bone skilfully bound with whale sinew...and how he brought in the fish; His lines were tough weaves of spruce root or bark shreds that compared well in strength with the cords used by the white man. When the colonists made gifts of iron fish hooks the Indian promptly discarded his homemade varieties. Today the Indians fancy trolling spoons, and usually amass larger catches than do their white brothers.

EMPLOYERS TO JOIN SHOW

Chicago, Dec. 28—(AP)—The 20-minute New Year's Eve party planned at the Douglas Aircraft Company will not be strictly an employees' show. "What about the guys who run this plant?" asked members of a committee planning the party. The talents of four top executives were enlisted and they will render a barber shop quartet number, "Sweet Adeline," of course.

ROUTED GARTER SNAKES

Belgrade, Neb., Dec. 28—(AP)—A stubborn drain pipe prompted Mrs. Adella Ward to summon the plumber. Undaunted, the plumber routed 60 garter and bull snakes from the pipe where they had crawled to hibernate for the winter. The pipe empties into the Cedar river,

Dentistry And Diet

It is known that there is not one person in a thousand who has perfect teeth, that is absolutely free from any decay in a single tooth. Thus when we read of a whole town without a single toothache—Hereford, Deaf Smith County, Texas—and of an institution in Philadelphia—St. Vincent's Home for Mothers and Children Under Four—where no decayed teeth have been found in any of the children examined during the past five years, we naturally want to know the reason.

In the Journal of the American Dental Association, Anna de Planter Bowes, M.A., Harrisburg, Chief Division of Nutrition, Pennsylvania Department of Health, states that studies at Pennsylvania State College and University of Pennsylvania Dental School prove that diet is the big factor in preventing tooth decay.

Referring to Hereford, Texas, it is pointed out that analyses of foods grown there "show an astonishingly high content of phosphorus, one of the most vital of all soil minerals. Wheat, the chief food product, contained 600 per cent more than normal. Carrots contained 50 percent more, cabbage and lettuce, 60 per cent. The calcium (lime) contents of foods also was high".

We are apt to think that people with high incomes have better diets than those with low incomes but this is not always true. The studies proved that most of the private patients whose diets were studied not only had good incomes but were college graduates. Moreover, they were interested in their health and teeth as evidenced by their quarterly and semi-annual visits to their dentists. "Yet the mineral content (phosphorus calcium) for one week was actually lower than those of clinic patients who ate more oatmeal, potatoes beans and cabbage".

Referring to St. Vincent's Home for Mothers and Children Under Four", each child receives a full quart of milk plus what is used in cooking, and 4 teaspoonsful of cod liver oil a day; which insures liberal intakes of calcium, phosphorus and vitamins A and D".

The fact that certain foods—dairy products, fruits and green vegetables—prevent decay of teeth does not mean that brushing the teeth is not important. Brushing the teeth regularly prevents decay of the "surface" of the tooth, the hard enamel, which forms the "outer" protection. While we think of diet as assuring the "inner" protection, studies show that diet is also a factor in preserving the enamel also.

Sixty-Three Members Attend Older Boys Parliament

Kitchener, Dec. 28. (CP)—The 23rd Ontario Older Boys Parliament will discuss possible measure to help juvenile delinquency during its sittings here this week, J. Albert Smith of Kitchener said in his speech from the throne as lieutenant governor of the parliament at its formal opening session last night.

He added that post-war reconstruction wartime education and race relationships also would be discussed.

"The youth in our land has in too many cases been left leaderless, parentless, Christless and consequently purposeless in their growing process", said Mr. Smith.

Sixty-six members attended the session from Barrie, Belleville, Brantford, Hamilton, Kitchener, Lindsay, London, Midland, North Bay, Orillia, Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, St. Catharines, Toronto, Sudbury, Windsor, Burford, Port Elgin, Newcastle, Spencerville, Meaford, Oakville, Seaforth, Perth, Lyndhurst, Brighton, Uxbridge, Seagrave, Parry Sound, Cookstown, Avonmore, North Cobalt, Oakwood, Fenwick, Fort Erie and Brockville.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

Doctors not only disagree with one another but often are inconsistent with themselves.

On March 9, 1821, Secretary of State John Quincy Adams wrote in his famous diary: Henry "Clay is an eloquent man, with very popular manners and great political management. He is, like almost all the eminent men of this country, only half educated. His morals, public and private, are loose."

Four years later Adams, who had been chosen President of the United States, appointed Henry Clay to succeed himself as his secretary of state.

Thirty-four years later, Abraham Lincoln, in a speech at Ottawa, Illinois, referred to Henry Clay as "my beau-ideal of a statesman."

"Criss-cross" is merely a corruption of "Christ's cross."

The ancient Hebrews called the Red Sea "yam suph," "the sea of reeds," referring to the vegetation in the shallow, marshy upper reaches of that body of water.

In Georgia the probate court is called the "court of the ordinary," which is a survival of English ecclesiastical law in which an ordinary is the deputy of a bishop or archbishop.

Patrick Henry made his famous "give me liberty, or give me death" speech in a church.

The letters "L.S." on legal documents are the abbreviations of "locus signilli," meaning "the place of the seal" in Latin. The Romans used to take off their signal or seal rings and imprint their seals on all documents, and the present legal practice is a survival of that custom.

William Backhouse Astor, son of the first John Jacob Astor, was known as the "landlord of New York" because of the great number of residential buildings in that city owned by the estate that he administered.

A scalloped or pattypan summer squash is often called a "cymling squash." This name comes from an old English word "simlin," meaning cake.

"Halitosis," which was popularized in connection with a patent medicine, signifies a malodorous or foul-smelling breath. It was suggested by Latin "halitus," breath.

The name of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania enjoys the distinction of having three widely used and generally acceptable abbreviations—Pa., Penn., and Penna.

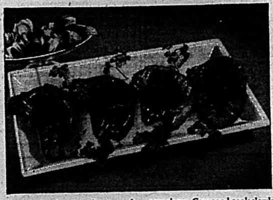
Cranberries



Now's the time to enliven meals with the tart flavour and high Vitamin content of Canadian Cranberries

Cranberry sauce is practically a "must" for the holiday season and, just in case you haven't a good recipe handy, we give our favourite method in the panel opposite.

But there are other delightful ways of using this valuable fruit in meat dishes. For instance, now that fresh pork is a little more plentiful you might like to try these Cranberry Pork Chops. (If pork is still hard to get where you live, try the recipe with veal).

4 pork chops
½ tsp. salt
2 cups raw cranberries
½ cup honey
¼ tsp. cloves
¼ tsp. nutmeg

Brown pork chops in heavy frying pan. Season. Grind cranberries, mix with honey and spices—pour over chops. Cover and cook slowly for 1 hour.

Yuletide Activities At Christ Church

Following the midnight service in Christ Church on Christmas Eve, a small group from the men's club presented Mr. Everett Smith with a violet stole in recognition of the help which he as a deacon, is rendering to the Church, and to its rector. The presentation was made by Mr. William Kempston, the club president, in a few well-chosen words of commendation. Mr. Smith was completely taken by surprise, but was able to find words of thanks to the men's club for their kindness and support of him, and of the church.

The church had been filled to the doors with a reverent congregation to welcome the anniversary of the Child of Bethlehem. The rector, Rev. G. G. Wright was the celebrant at the Holy Communion, in the administration of which he was assisted by Rev. F. C. Beazer of Roslin, and by Mr. Smith. He also delivered the Christmas message from the text: "Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins"; pointing out how God's Son is offering himself to a world bound by shackles of its own creation, as the one sure way through man's ignorance. The inventions brought about by man's ingenuity are marvellous, but man's present condition is the result of his ignorance as to how to use the things his cleverness has created from God's bounty.

The church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and lights for the Christmas Festival, while the men's and boys' choir rendered the music of the service, under the direction of Mr. A. W. Simpson, with Mrs. Calvert at the organ. On Christmas Day the services at St. George's, Station Street, and at Christ Church were well attended and finely rendered. On Sunday evening the annual Christmas Carol Service was held, with the choir rendering a group of old tradition Christmas Carols in many of which the large congregation was asked to join. At both the services on Christmas Day the rector expressed his thanks to the officers and members of the congregation as well as the various organizations which had aided so materially in the work of the church. The splendid spirit of harmony which had prevailed had resulted in a year of progress in every direction. He emphasized especially the co-operation which had been given him and thanked all for the many kindnesses which had been shown him, his wife and family. That same spirit will, in the coming year, mean much for the work of the Kingdom of God.

39 Nurses Return To England From From Italian Front

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 28 — (CP Cable) — Thirty-nine Canadian Nursing Sisters have returned to England from serving in the Central Mediterranean war theatre to pass on their experience to hospital staffs here in preparation for the invasion of Western Europe.

The Sisters, who returned by sea, served on Canadian general hospital staffs in Sicily and North Africa and will be replaced by nurses from Canadian hospitals in England under an exchange decided upon by Canadian authorities.

"None of the girls wanted to come home," said Lt.-Col. Agnes Neill of Peterboro, Ont., the Matron-in-Chief overseas.

Most of the nurses also said they were sorry that they were obliged to return. Many said their one hope now is to have another spell of front-line nursing when the second front opens.

Olive Hackney of Kirkton, Ont., said if she couldn't be at a post in North Africa she would like to be in Canada.

"It was beginning to look like spring when we left," she said. "It was cold at night but warm enough to swim in the daytime."

Never Used an Iron

"Life had its rigors in Africa," Jean McCormack of Preston, Ont., admitted. "We did all our washing under one tap — all of us — and we didn't see an iron all the time we were there. We pressed our clothes by putting them under our bedrolls. But you don't mind that if everyone is doing it."

Ethel Molyneaux of Toronto said she wanted to tell the people back home that the "Canadian boys in the Mediterranean were wonderful no matter what they went through."

"The chief thing they need is mail and the faster it gets there the better — there's no cure like it," she said. Also the troops lived for their parcels from home as long as they didn't contain bully beef or soap. She said they like soups and any other kind of meat and also flashlights and batteries.

Other members returning: Bernice Hampton, Gananoque, Ont., Dorothy Lows and Florence Cooke, St. Catharines, Ont., Ally Malmborg, Eagle River, Ont., Dorothy Richardson, Napanee, Ont., Edna Benns, Claremont, Ont., Patricia Collins, Denfield, Ont., Sarah Eede, Harrow, Ont., Anne Jack, Newton, Ont., Helen McKay, Woodstock, Ont.

ITALIANS FIGHT WITH NAZIS

New York, Dec. 28. (AP)— The Nazi-controlled Fascist radio said in a broadcast reported today by U.S. Government Monitors that 14,000 soldiers recruited by Benito Mussolini's government now were fighting alongside the Germans on the Southern Italian front.

Of this number, 6,000 have been organized into their own detachments while 8,000 have been placed in German units, the broadcast said.

Marmora and District

Marmora, Dec. 28—Mrs. G. N. Henderson received word on Friday from the Director of Records, Ottawa that her son, Private Marshal Sopha, had been wounded in Italy on December 14th. Shortly before this she received an airgraph from her son, stating he had come through the Sicilian campaign unscathed. This is the second time for Private Sopha to become a casualty, he having been wounded in the knee in England about two years ago. His only brother, Norman has also been overseas for several months.

POLICE CHIEF INQUISITIVE

Huntsville, Ont., Dec. 28 — (CP) — Police Chief W. D. Carson, indulging his hobby of photography Sunday morning, had focused on a scene near Huntsville bridge. Two men crossed his vision, one of whom the Chief recognized as a youth wanted for more than a year for assault on a Chinese resident. Yesterday the youth paid fines and damages amounting to $45.

Southern California Gridders Favored for Rose Bowl Game

(By The Canadian Press)

Although they had lost their four best players to the armed forces, the gridders of University of Southern California were reported last night to be ruling favorites for the Rose Bowl footban spectacle at Pasadena, Calif., New Year's Day against University of Washington. The Trojans' popularity was based on the fact they had yet to lose a post-season play-off in the Bowl. At the same time, during the regular schedule, the Califorians had been rocked by a 35-0 trimming by March Field and the latter had been trounced 27-7 by the Washington Huskies.

Supporters of the Trojans point out that Washington played only four games last fall and haven't figured in an engagement for nine weeks but a keen tilt can be expected because the northerners boast the three best players on the Pacific Coast, End, Jack Tracy, Guard, Bill Ward and Halfback, Sam Robinson.

Manager-Coach Clarence (Hap) Day announced Monday that Toronto Maple Leafs have signed Paul Bibeault to be regular goaltender for the remaincer of the season. Bibeault, recently discharged from the Canadian Army, replaces Benny Grant, Owen Sound, Ont., product who came out of retirement at the start of the season and has played most games for Leafs this year. Grant will be retained by the Club.

Sickle, leading sire at the Elmendorf Farm, of P.A.B. Widener, Lexington, Ky., was buried in a special plot at the farm, it was announced Monday night by Manager G. W. Tomlinson, the famous stallion having died last Sunday. The horse was bred in England by Lord Derby and was unplaced in only one of the ten races he entered before he was retired in 1929.

The playoffs of the baseball League of Italy had to be called off because of rains and a return to battle-action, according to word received last night by the parents of L. Cpl. James Meek in Hamilton. The soldier was one who had been participating in the Canadian Army series behind the lines.

The Orange Bowl football game at Miami at New Year's promises to be a grudge battle between Louisiana State and Texas A. and M., according to a prediction last night by Coach Bernie Moore of the Bayou Tigers. They would rather trim the Aggies than any other team in the country, he said. The Texans bested the Louisians 28-13 when they met in a conference fixture last October.

Wally Kilrea of Hershey Bears continued to lead his team-mate, Gaston Gauthier, by two points in the American Hockey League statistics for the week, according to the official standing issued last night at New Haven. Kilrea's total is 37 points on 12 goals and 25 assists but Gauthier has scored 19 goals.

THREE CARDINAL PITCHERS ON TOP IN E. R. AVERAGES

First Time Trick Turned in 32 Years of National Loop

THREE WIN 21

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—One club—the St. Louis Cardinals—placed three pitchers at the head of the earned-run averages for 1943, the first time the trick has been turned in the 32 years the E-R-A has been a part of the National League mound statistics.

Mort Cooper of the Carls, Rip Sewell of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Elmer Riddle of Cincinnati each won 21 games to lead in that department but the stinginess of the Cardinal trio dominated the league, the official averages released today reveal.

Howie Pollet, who left the club in mid-summer to do his flinging for the army, was the most miserly. He allowed only 1.75 earned runs for each nine-inning stint on the hill. Next came Max Lanier wth 1.90 and Cooper with 2.30.

To make St. Louis' domination even more complete, two other Cardinal hurlers—Alpha Brazle and Harry Brecheen—were the leaders among the pitchers who did not hurl 10 complete games. Brazle, who joined the club when Pollet entered the service, allowed only 1.53 earned runs in nine innings and Brecheen 2.27.

Lumping all the pitchers into one group, the Cardinals grabbed the first five places—another loop record. Cooper is the only righthander in the quintet.

While the Cardinals topped the field under the E-R-A standard and Cooper, Sewell and Riddle won the most games, Whitlow Wyatt of the Brooklyn Dodgers finished the year with the highest percentage—.737 for his 14 triumphs and five setbacks.

Two other records were established during the season, both going into the book to the credit of Ace Adams of the New York Giants. He appeared in 70 games to wipe out his own mark of 61 which was set in 1942 and finished 52 games to break the standard of 49 he set up the year before.

DETROIT WINGS A BUSY TEAM

By the Canadian Press

Detroit Red Wings are going to be the busiest team in the National Hockey League this week. Tonight they play Bruins at Boston and Thursday night Canadiens at Montreal, and both games promise to be tough with plenty of action.

Bruins will be out to capture sole possession of second place which they now share with Toronto Maple Leafs. Both teams have 22 points—nine behind the leading Canadiens.

On Thursday night the Canadiens will go on the ice remembering their damages at the last meeting in Detroit. Although they gave Wings a 5-1 drubbing, Ray Getliffe received a black eye and a lacerated chest while Leo Lamoureux suffered a foot injury which kept him from playing two league games.

With all their players back in shape again, Canadiens looked good at a workout last night. And their coach, Dick Irvin who spent Christmas in Regina, is expected to be back in time for the game.

Top Characteristics Of Past Sports Year

New York, Dec. 28—(AP)—A $200,000,000 increase in betting on race results, a falling off of attendance at sports events featuring amateurs while the pro crowds virtually held their own and a dearth of good boxers were the top characteristics of the 1943 sports year in the United States.

That, at least, is the opinion of the 86 editors who expressed their views in the Associated Press' poll regarding the effects of the second year of war upon sports.

Almost every ballot mentioned the betting increase as the greatest of the war-bred changes. The estimated 1943 mutuel play in 15 States is $710,779,422 compared to $563,579,895 in 1942.

PHIL TERRANOVA RETAINS TITLE AGAINST CALLURA

Scores Technical Knockout of Hamilton Boxer in Sixth Round

5,000 SEE FIGHT

New Orleans, Dec. 28 — (AP) — Bunch-muscled Phil Terranova is still the National Boxing Association's featherweight champion after punching to a technical knockout here last night over Jackie Callura of Hamilton, Ont., in the sixth round. Some 5,000 persons saw the title scrap.

The payoff blow was a sharp right to the jaw which dropped Callura after catching him flat-footed and dazed. The Canadian fighter from whom Terranova lifted the crown here last summer went down three times in the sixth, each time from a right to the head. Two seconds after his final tumble officials stopped the bout.

Before the fight Callura said it was to be his last unless he licked the New York youngster, who twice previously put him to sleep.

Callura, who entered the ring last night weighing 126 pounds, packed a 2½-pound advantage, but it only seemed to make him fall the harder.

Only once, in the fourth, did Callura have the champion in trouble. A vicious body attack set Terranova momentarily on his heels.

The battle was a scheduled 15-round decision affair.

Bobby Gleason, Terranova's manager, said after his winner crawled through the ropes:

"The champion is ready to fight anybody any time. His next bout will likely be with Manual Ortiz, N.B.A. bantam king at Los Angeles, Jan. 19, for a $15,000 guarantee."

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 28—(CP)—In the good old days of bare-fist boxing, a fighter was always willing to back up his convictions with a bet of cold, hard cash against the man he fought.

Then promoters and managers took over and boxing became big business. The only betting, almost, was among the professional gamblers, or private bets laid against the professionals. But Britain has been seeing a small revival of the old practice recently and one of the biggest side bets of recent years has been posted for the fight between Jimmy Molloy of Liverpool and Jimmy Moore of Birkenhead.

They will fight 51 rounds for £1,000 ($4,500) a side and the scrap, producing the logical contender for Ernie Roderick's British welterweight title, has aroused such interest it probably will be held off until Spring so that it can be put on in the open.

Liverpool probably will be the site of the bout.

Eire is to have more horse racing in 1944, the government having allowed a maximum of 90 meets, 10 more than the limit allowed in 1943. A central racing advisory committee, with a chairman nominated by the Minister of Agriculture, will advise the racing authorities on the preparation of fixtures.

Hamilton, Ont., Olympics will be glad to hear that their champion sprinter, Sgt. Jerry Bell, now is with a conversion unit as a fitter, and the fellow making the report to us added "and is fitter than ever."

Bell is helping train his unit's track and field enthusiasts—three men. Small in number, they are large in performance and took back four firsts from a R.C.A.F. meet in London.

Cpl. Harry Hurst, Montreal welterweight, is a corporal-disciplinarian at the station where the famed "Moose" bomber squadron holds forth. Harry has been hitting as hard in his first fights over here as the squadron has over Berlin—Sgt. Al Chatfield, former Winnipeg lightweight, is teaching boxing to some of the Canadians over here.

The restrictions on horses trained in Britain competing in Eire, imposed on hurdlers and steeplechasers two years ago, has been lifted.

From June 1, 1941, only horses located or trained in Eire, on or before that date could run under Irish National Hunt rules. Later Irish trainers were allowed to accept horses from Britain provided they reduced their strings by an equal number on Oct. 1, 1942.

Several owners here had sent horses to Eire even under the restrictions, the biggest string belonging to Dorothy Paget. They had, of course, to remain there. Lifting of the restriction will make it possible to send a horse over for any one race, returning it here after running.

PATHFINDERS PRAISED

Ottawa, Dec. 28 — (CP) — The R.C.A.F. said last night the R.A.F. bomber command's Pathfinder force, of which one of Canada's most famous squadrons is a member, was given a "big slice of credit" for the success of recent night raids on Berlin. In an overseas press release, the R.C.A.F. detailed the work of the Pathfinders, who mark out the area to be bombed with target indicator flares.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS

Toronto, Dec. 28 —(CP)— Probably the greatest disappointment caused by R.C.A.F. withdrawal from Allan Cup hockey was in Vancouver where the R.C.A.F. Seahawks were giving the citizens some of the best hockey they had seen since the good old days of Cyclone Taylor, the Patricks and Company. Vancouver had just got its forum out of hock with the military and, celebrating its return, the forum accommodated a crowd of 5,500, a record for the rink, at a Seahawks-Army game.

Amateur hockey had never previously flourished at Vancouver and, with the fans savoring their first taste of really good hockey in some years, it is not surprising they are bitter. Ken McConnell, sports editor of the Vancouver Province, said the R.C.A.F. action was taken "ignoring agreements with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the various leagues throughout Canada and forgetting the fans."

McConnell refers to Allan Cup victories the past two seasons by Ottawa service teams and comments: "It does seem passing strange that when the West Coast does finally come up with a potential champion and Ottawa is left with little hope of success in hockey, a blackout is ordered."

It is incidental that rumor says one reason for the R.C.A.F. hockey blow-up was an interview with Jim McCaffrey of Ottawa which McConnell published in his column. McCaffrey was the man who lined up the Ottawa Commandos army team which won the Allan Cup last season. McConnell quoted McCaffrey as saying: "In our case we simply made arrangements, through the rinks, lined up the talent we thought was required and the boys were taken care of in a satisfactory manner."

Sports columnists across the country jumped on this interview as an example of the manner in which hockey players in the services could be moved around at the wish and for the benefit of influential civilians. It is rumored backstage that the R.C.A.F. wanted no part of such a set-up.

Incidentally, McCaffrey returned east just in time to help save the Quebec senior league from collapse following withdrawal of the Montreal R.C.A.F. team. At a league meeting, McCaffrey said Ken Reardon, going overseas shortly, played a great game Dec. 18 in his final game with Commandos. "He didn't want a cent for playing either," said McCaffrey, but Bill Brunton, son of the Ottawa rink operator, offered the information Reardon was paid $40. "That was the best $40 worth of hockey I ever saw," said Brunton.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Wild, Wild West

A Shakespearean theatrical company found themselves stranded one morning in a small town in the United States Middle-West. The small sum of money they possessed had only just covered their hotel bill. There seemed only one thing to do so they decided to risk a performance in the local town hall.

Bills were displayed advertising "A Midsummer Night's Dream—by William Shakespeare" and in the evening the wooden hall was packed to capacity with hard-bitten, gum-chewing cowboys.

The audience behaved very well during the play, and when the curtain descended on the last scene, members of the company were in the wing, nervously waiting to hear how the cowboys would acknowledge the performance. To their amazement, the audience rose as one man, cheering, clapping, stamping and yelling. "Author! Author! Author!

The Westerners became noisier and noisier and the problem of how to produce the author became more acute. At last, the company told the manager that he would have to appear. He refused at first, maintaining that to pretend to be William Shakespeare—even before such a rough audience—would be shameful. But at last he relented, and slowly and solemnly walked on to the stage.

The cowboys shot him.

The holiday weekend rains, followed by mild weather, put a halt to junior hockey practice at the Hume Arena. Last night public skating was permitted and the ice surface was covered with water. However, Coach "Toots" Holway is hoping for colder weather soon when the local kids strut their stuff in aspiring for team positions.

"The kids are all anxious to get out and judging from their enthusiasm Belleville should ice the best junior squad we've had in many years," remarked Coach Holway today as he told of expecting at least 30 teen aged lads out to the initial practice, all of whom have had either junior, juvenile or senior Interscholastic experience.

It was learned over the weekend, that Jack Boyd, ace forward with the Grimbsy "Peach Buds" last season and now attending Albert College, would not be available for hockey here.

(Remember when—)

Sylvanus Apps, National Hockey League centre for the Toronto Maple Leafs, was voted Canada's outstanding athlete of 1937 in the annual Canadian Press sports poll six years ago yesterday. He failed by only one point to win the N.H.L. scoring title in his first professional hockey season Apps is in the Canadian army now.

Then it was just four years ago tonight that King Clancy found refereeing an N.H.L game between Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs a hideous nightmare. He called back two Habitant goals, was pushed around by Canadiens in general, cracked on the noggin by a player and berated by almost every fan in Montreal's Forum rink. The Leafs finally won 6-4.

(Same in all sports.)

Arthur Daly, in the New York Times says: "No world series game, for instance, ever filled a ball park the way a run-of-the-mill Sunday double-header in mid-season has done. The Yankee Stadium has never touch 70,000 for a series, but it often has topped that figure for regular games of no particular consequence.

The same holds true for Madison Square Garden basketball. The biggest attraction Ned Irish has year after year is Notre Dame-N.Y.U. Yet this never draws as many clients as some unheralded thin bill which gets last-minute box office rush.

That is why every entrepreneur strives zealously to avoid the use of the word "sell-out." If he even whispers it, he never gets one."

(Fired ball feud.)

The deal by which the New York Yankees obtained Carl Mays, famed submarine pitcher of his day, from the Boston Red Sox in mid-July of 1919 almost split the entire structure of major league baseball. The deal was made after Mays had walked out on the Red Sox after a game in Chicago. He was blaming defeats on loose support. Ban Johnson, former American League president, refused to sanction the deal and ordered Mays back to Boston, but the Yankee Colonels—Ruppert and Huston—went to court and restrained Johnson's umpires from interfering with Mays pitching for New York.

Johnson refused to recognize games won by Mays for the Yankees, and, through the old National Commission, held up the New York players' third-place money. It resulted in one of the worst feuds in baseball, with New York, Boston and Chicago lining up against Johnson, and the other five clubs, called "the Loyal Five," supporting him. Litigation was dropped at the February, 1920, meeting of the American League, but the scare did not heal, and the American League club owners opposing Johnson, working with seven National League clubs, forced Garry Herrmann's resignation as chairman of the old National Commission and paved the way for the appointment of Judge Landis as commissioner of baseball late in 1920.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Dec. 28. (AP)— That constant moaning you hear in the background these winter days is merely baseball magnates talking about the manpower prospects for next season. . . .Recently the Reds' Warren Giles pointed out that "the chief worry of major league baseball is player strength". . . . and Brooklyn's Branch Rickey tearfully praised the Giants for their "gameness" in making a few deals. . .He and most of the other big league bosses, Branch said, were "forced" to stand because there was no guarantee that the players they might get would be available next summer. . . .Rickey went on to point out that clubs with plenty of reserves could stand losses better, so it seems from here that there ought to be a heck of a lot of bartering right now with the teams that are short of manpower trying to build up their "stock piles". . . .instead, it's the dullest trading season in years.

Buck Saves Bucks.

When Referee Buck Davis stepped on the floor and blew the whistle to open the basketball season in Helena, Mont., there were more than a few pop-eyed fans in the stands. . . .Because Buck was garbed in the regulation striped shirt, gym shoes—and tuxedo trousers. . . . .Davis insisted that he wasn't absent minded—nor even a social climber—it was just that regulation black slacks for Refs cost $12 and tux pants only $8.50.

Maj. Frederick McLaughlin, owner of the Chicago Black Hawks, hasn't seen his hockey team play this season, due to a heart ailment and high blood pressure. But that hasn't stopped him from giving away 500 choice seats to service men for every Black Hawk home game. . . .That means the major tosses away $750 every time the Hawks have a sellout—which is often.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 269

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some bridge partners you may have met bid slams that are bound to be set. But what prompts you to slay is when some of them say "it must have been something we et."

For a slam to be safe, your side needs enough aces and kings. To find out how many aces and kings are held by your pair, you must ask your partner how many he has.

The way to do that is by bidding four no-trump. That four no-trump bid is merely a convention signal. It is a bid, the code meaning of which is: "Tell me how many aces and kings you have, partner."

When should you bid four no-trump? Not unless you have discovered 12 tricks in your pair, know what will be trumps, and have in your own hand two aces and a king, or better.

Visit with this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A K J 7 5
♥A K J 7 5
♣J 5
NORTH
♠Q 6 4 2
♥Q 6 4 2
♦A J
♣A 4 2

South and north exchange bids. South soon learns there are at least 12 tricks in the pair of hands. He also finds out that the trump suit can be spades. And he has two aces and a king, or better.

So, he bids four no-trump; the convention signal for asking his partner to announce the number of aces and kings he has. And his partner in the north is forced to respond. He must answer.

Partner's answer must say whether he has no aces, or one ace and no king, or one ace and one king, or one ace and two kings, or one ace and three kings.

If partner has two aces, he must say so. At the same time he must also say whether he has with them no kings, or one king, or two kings, or three kings.

For each of these, there is a specific bid that acts as a signal. The answer is in code. But the words are bids. And the list of answers is in the form of a table known as The Kibitzer's convention.

Tomorrow I will show you that list. It is worth keeping.

"Crash Dive"

(In Technicolor)

You'll find thrills above, below and across the Atlantic in "Crash Dive," the thrilling new technicolor hit that opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

Out of a sea aflame with danger and thrills, this film bursts forth, hailed as the great action picture of the year . . . and the war! Starring Tyrone Power, this is the first picture of Uncle Sam's fighting submarines, and their story is one of intense action all the way.

Recent Hollywood productions have paid well-earned tribute to other branches of our armed forces. The Army Air Force, the Marines and the Navy itself have been eulogized in films—but now "Crash Dive" singles out for deserving glory that inconspicuous and heroic group of men who man Uncle Sam's "pig boats."

Awe-inspiring

From the time the picture opens with its awe-inspiring panorama of the turbulent, sub-infested Atlantic in all the magnificence of technicolor, right down to the last tender romantic scene between Tyrone Power and Anne Baxter, the film is a series of uninterrupted thrills, touching romance, drama, suspense—all photographed in the best colored photography yet.

Your reviewer will go out on a limb for this one—don't miss it!

"Swing Your Partner"

As gay and spritely a bit of sense and nonsense as has been seen locally in some time is incorporated in "Swing Your Partner," brand new musical from the Republic lot, now at the Capitol Theatre. Produced by Armand Schaefer and directed under the able guidance of Frank McDonald, the film emerges as one of the best of its kind in the current season.

Lulu Belle and Scotty head the cast, bringing with them all the picturesque quaintness and good-humor zest which made them favorites on the WLS National Barn Dance Program. That this pair has what it takes to dispell gloom and create high spirited cheer is amply proven by the reception accorded them at yesterday's opening.

A gay and youthful romance is portrayed by Dale Evans, a popular favorite of the Chase and Sanborn radio show and young Roger Clark.

Pappy Cheshire scores as the gentle, kindly and philosophical plant personnel director who has a magical faculty for solving the problems of his friends and associates.

The Canadian Universal News complete the big holiday bill.

AT THE BELLE

"No Time For Love"

"Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray head a cast of funmakers in Paramount's funny feature comedy "No Time for Love," now having its Premiere showing in Canada at the Belle Theatre tonight only.

Technicolor Featurettes

Three outstanding junior features are exhibited on the same program in the technicolor musical revue, "Caribbean Romance" with a cast of vaudeville and screen favorites, Canadian Movietone News and a funny technicolor Popeye cartoon "Her Honor the Mare".

Tuneful Dancing Romance

Ten days and nights of dancing romance comprise the theme of "The Sky's the Limit," glittering new musical vehicle for Fred Astaire and Joan Leslie coming next to the Belle Theatre.

The sparkling plot is woven around the adventures of a fighter pilot on a brief leave of absence. He decides to take his fun in Manhattan in civilian clothes instead of in uniform, bringing about a hilarious series of misunderstandings when he falls for an energetic young girl photographer who considers him a useless slacker.

The hectic affair between the two is complicated by the airmen's feeling that a wartime flier hasn't any business asking a girl to wait for him, and by the rivalry of the heroine's millionaire employer, who yearns to marry her but doesn't quite know how to go about it. And as the two principals dance their way around Manhattan's high spots things get more and more complicated and tuneful and funny, until the stirring climax settles everything in a satisfactory fashion.

The stars are supported by a brilliant cast headed by Robert Benchley, Robert Ryan, Elizabeth Patterson, Marjorie Gateson and Freddie Slack and his orchestra. Three new hit tunes by Johnny Mercer and Harold Arlen are featured in the picture.

Fred and Joan have two sensational dance routines, with Fred giving two solo dances in addition, making the film one of the season's most entertaining offerings.

Varied Featurette Treats

A sport hit, "Barnyard Golf," a funny Walt Disney color cartoon "Pelican and the Sniper," and "Broadway Dimont", an effective and thoroughly entertaining multiple-reel screen miniature precede the feature attraction.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Dec. 28. (CP)— First Canadian wireless operator-air gunner to reach the rank of squadron leader, 27-year-old Bob Miller, supervises an air crew school that has trained more crews for operational duties and flown more hours than any similiar unit in Britain.

As chief ground instructor, the kid from Marshall, Sask., presides over the oldest and largest heavy conversion unit in the Canadian group where crews fresh from O.T.U. learn to handle Britain's biggest four-engined bombers.

Enlisting in 1940, Bob came overseas to join the first Canadian bomber squadron formed in Britain. Following a tour of operations in Whitleys, he became a sergeant-instructor at the Halifax conversion unit he now commands. Commissioning followed and a year ago he jumped to the rank of flight lieutenant.

In peacetime, Bob was a telephone and telegraph construction engineer in Saskatchewan.

Sqdn. Ldr. D. H. Kenney, 28-year-old veteran from Fredericton, N.B., has taken over command of a flight with a heavy bomber squadron of the Canadian group.

Just completed one tour of operations and starting on a second, Kenney told newsmen his two toughest trips were to Berlin. That was before Bomber Command set out on this winter's offensive to "Hamburg" the Nazi capital.

Born and raised at Milverton, Ont., Kenney was an instructor at Sky Harbor Airport, Goderich, Ont., before the war. After joining the air force, he flew a bomber across the Atlantic in April of 1942 and was posted to the Moose Squadron where he flew with his present commanding officer, Wing Cmdr. J. D. Pattison, D.F.C., Toronto.

Much has been said of the famed Pathfinders, those daring crews who fly ahead to ring target areas with flares for the guidance of the main bomber force. Little mention has been made of the Pathfinders' ground crews on whom the limelight of glory seldom falls.

It's a distinction to be a member of a Pathfinder squadron and one, led by Group Capt. Johnny Fauquier, D.S.O., D.F.C., Ottawa, not only boasts the cream of air crews but some ground men who joined the unit shortly after it was formed as a straight bomber squadron.

One of them is Flt. Sgt. Tom Cranston of Midland, Ont., who came to the unit three years ago and was the first Canadian ground man to serve with a bomber squadron in Britain. Cranston, 22, left McMaster University at Hamilton, to join the R.C.A.F.

Following him were Cpls. Sam and Glen Merrifield of Wolseley, Sask., while other "old originals" are Sgt. Norman Lawson of (1067 Downing St.) Winnipeg, and Sgt. Roy Hurst, of (2 Thornton Ave.) London, Ont.

OCEAN TRANSPORT

Up to the end of June, 1943, the British merchant navy had convoyed 12,000 ships carrying 77,000,000 tons of cargo from Canadian shores.

CAN'T BLOW OWN HORN

Sweden has a "silent traffic" law which prohibits the blowing of automobile horns in cities except in emergencies.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Held Up by Three, Druggist is Robbed

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP) — Louis Feld reported to police that three men, one of whom carried a revolver, held him up in his Brunswick Avenue drug store last night and escaped with $50 and some silver. He was alone in the store at the time.

"One of the men shoved a revolver the size of a baby cannon in my face," said Mr. Feld. "I started to shout for help . . . and one of the thugs got nervous and shouted to the man with the gun: 'Shoot him, shoot him.' One of the men then rifled the money from the till in the cash register and fled.

$35.70 COLLECTED THROUGH FUND

Chairman of Public Works, Alderman Harold Armstrong, and the city engineer's department expressed their appreciation today to Belleville residents for contributions to the garbagemen's Christmas Fund sponsored by Dolan's Drug Store. A total of $35.70 was contributed to the fund through the collection box in Dolan's it was stated.

"The men engaged in collecting the garbage really appreciated the Christmas present", stated Mr. Charles Mott today. "The amount was divided up among the nine men engaged in garbage collection operations."

DENSE FOG PRECEDES COLDER WEATHER

"A winter's fog will freeze a dog" —is an old and accepted weather prophecy.

If such a proverb is true this district may experience some subzero weather in the not too distant future. On Monday morning one of the densest fogs ever experienced in the Belleville area settled down over Belleville and district.

"So bad was the density of the fog that it was practically impossible to see the headlights of motor vehicles but a few feet away," reported eye witnesses, who rose early Monday morning.

FEW RESTAURANTS OPEN CHRISTMAS DAY IN CITY

Christmas Dinners, turkey, chicken and goose, have been eaten and the bones placed in the garbage for collection on Tuesday morning, but not everyone in the city ate Christmas dinner. Some people, those strangers in the city who depend upon the restaurants for all their meals, spent considerable time Christmas Day trying to find one that was open. A search of the city's eating places disclosed that only two were open during the day, and one opened late in the evening. All were closed before twelve midnight.

The staff of one of the two restaurants, which remained open worked steadily from six in the morning until eleven-thirty at night. They were exhausted at the end of the day. Nevertheless, the same restaurant opened its doors early on unday morning and remained open throughout the day. It was the only one in the city open at that time. The highest praise must be paid to the staff of the one restaurant which tried to accommodate the public and gave up their own Christmas Day for them.

Kinsmen Club Plays Santa Claus To C.A.S. Children

Keeping faith with those who still have faith, the Kinsmen Club of Belleville brought Christmas in reality to forty-three children ranging in ages from three months to fourteen years. Individual gifts were wrapped beforehand and taken to the children, some in homes in the city and at Cannifton, others in the Receiving Home at Shannonville and in the Receiving Home conducted by Mrs. Albert Moorman on the Marshall Road, Belleville.

A slight delay was experienced at the start, when the Kinsmen met in the lobby of the Hotel Quinte but soon cars were despatched to the single home addresses in the city with presents and candy for the children living there. The larger deputation, consisting of His Worship Mayor Harry Rollins and seven other Kinsmen, accompanied by "Danny Boy" Smith, made the trip to the Marshall Road home. They gathered outside the door, His Worship bedecked in the garments of Santa Claus, complete with white whiskers and knee-length boots, and to the tune of "Jingle Bells" the group entered the house where the children were waiting for their first sight of Santa Claus.

After he had greeted each one and asked if they had been good all year, Mayor Rollins gathered the youngsters around him on the floor in front of their sparsely decorated tree and brought the story of Christmas to the wide eyed boys and girls, who could not take their eyes from him. After a few minutes entertainment with everyone joining in on a enchore of "Jingle Bells", the children were given presents, each one's name being called as His Worship lifted the packages and gaily wrapped presents from the large box, which served as his gift bag. The children were gay and not a tear was shed, except by one Kinsmen who had to leave the house until his display of emotion had subsided.

Moved Back to Quinte

Leaving the Marshall Road Home after the Mayor had extracted promises from everyone that the next Christmas would find them still good boys and girls, the caravan of private cars moved back to the Hotel Quinte, where the gifts for the children at Shannonville were picked up. While at the hotel, Mayor Rollins had a chance to play Santa Claus, which was entirely unexpected. A party had been arranged for one of the guests, who has been crippled for years and a number of friends and relations were holding their Christmas party in this person's room. When asked if he would make the presentations, Mayor Rollins fell into the spirit of the thing without delay and performed his duties, while the others prepared the gifts for the call at Shannonville.

Gifts Distributed

At Shannonville it was found, that the children in the home conducted by Mrs. Frederick Leavens had gone to bed. The Kinsmen remained outside until she was able to awaken them and again they entered the house to the tune of "Jingle Bells". Wide-eyed and unbelieving, the children gathered around Mayor Rollins, vieing with each other for the privilege of being held in Santa Claus' arms. The gifts were distributed and immediately opened, Kinsmen seated on the floor assisting in the untying of strings and ribbons, or breaking them here necessary, when the knots became entangled. It was at this home, where the youngest of the children lived, a small baby of three months, Joan E. Wannamaker, who could not take her eyes away from the favorite of all children. When the gifts had all been unwrapped and examined, the Kinsmen retired with small voices ringing in their ears as the happy children called their goodbyes to Santa Claus.

This is the first time the Kinsmen have attempted a Christmas party for underpriveleged children in this manner. Heretofore, a party has been held at an hotel and the children brought into town. Plans are already being laid for a bigger and better party for next Christmas based on the experience gained this year. Each one of the participants from the Club stated that his Christmas would be much better for the experiences that night.

Licences for Sale About January 10

Toronto, Dec. 28 —(CP)— The Ontario Highways Department announced today that automobile licences for 1944 will go on sale "about the 10th of January." Old licence plates will be retained by automobile owners, with a windshield sticker signifying possession of the new licence.

No date has been set for when the 1943 licences will become invalid, but a Highways Department spokesman said a statement from Highways Minister Dunbar will be made when final plans are completed.

Twp. Elections Likely in Thurlow And Tyendinaga

Municipal elections in two of the southern three townships in Hastings county appeared certain today as the result of nominations held in fourteen of the county municipalities on Monday afternoon. All of last year's council was returned by acclamation in Sidney township, while in Thurlow and Tyendinaga, it is expected there will be elections.

It was rather a brief nomination meeting in Sidney the entire proceeding being completed by four o'clock with only last year's council being nominated. Fred J. Wilson was returned as reeve with Sam Nicholson as deputy reeve. Councillors are Sam Danford; Ben Bleecker and Fred Campbell.

Resignation of Roscoe Robson as reeve of Thurlow township resulted in this year's deputy reeve, Mr. George MacDonald of Point Anne, stepping up to reeve by acclamation, he being the only one nominated for the office. It appeared, however, that there would be an election for the office of deputy reeve with Seldon Homan and Harry Harrison of this year's council being named. Nominated for council were Fred Mitchell, Cameron Bunnett, Cecil Ketcheson and Arthur Clazie.

Tyendinaga also appeared as certain of having an election with three being named for reeve, following the decision of Reeve Wm. H. White to retire from public life. Named for the reeve's office were this year's Deputy Reeve, Mr. J. Forestell, Stewart Dies, and J. V. Welsh. Nominated for deputy reeve were two of this year's council, Kenneth Vivian and Bartley Welch, while named for council were Dan Gaffney, Dan Doyle, Percy Moore, Kenneth Vivian and B. Welch.

Nominees in all cases have until nine o'clock, Tuesday evening, to qualify, it was stated.

Despite a previous announcement that he would retire from municipal life this year, Reeve William C. West of Stirling again was nominated for the reeveship and was elected by acclamation. It is reported however, that there will be an election for school trustees, commission and council.

The entire council body in Rawdon township was returned by acclamation with W. J. Tanner as Reeve and J. W. Morrison as deputy reeve.

Other municipalities in which nominations were held on Monday included Frankford, Hungerford, Madoc township, Dungannon, Mayo, Carlow, Herschel and Monteagle and McClure, Wicklow and Bangor.

233,861 Pounds Cheese Produced By Sidney Factory

An average price of $50.46 per standard was paid by the Sidney Town Hall Cheese and Butter Company to its patrons during the past season it was indicated by the year's financial report of the factory at the annual meeting. Total milk for the year was 2,914,421 pounds, there being 235,861 pounds of cheese manufactured. Average yield for the factory was one pound cheese for 12.16 pounds of milk.

Total receipts for the factory were $57,263, with $49,000 being paid to patrons. Provincial bonus amounted to $4,717 while the federal bonus amounted to $2,783.

Lawrence J. Ketcheson was reappointed president of the factory for another year, while Clem H. Ketcheson was returned as secretary. Directors named were Frank Woods, Howard Frost and Douglas Thompson. Wilfred Johnston was rehired as cheesemaker.

Dozens of Homes Opened to Armed Services Christmas

The general hospitality of Belleville left nothing to be desired as dozens of homes were opened to servicemen and servicewomen for Christmas Day. Many hundreds of boys and girls were accommodated in homes which had been arranged by the Y. M. C. A. The "Y", expressing their thanks for the wonderful response to their appeal for homes, where servicemen and girls might enjoy a Christmas dinner amid the surroundings of home, wish to tell their many friends and those who opened their homes to the boys and girls for the first time this year, that a better Christmas spirit could not be found anywhere than was demonstrated here. The response was so great that many people had to be turned down because there were not enough servicemen and girls to go around. Many of the boys, after thanking their hosts and hostesses, returned to the Y.M.C.A. and expressed their thanks to Mr. Ron Hupfield, supervisor of War Services, for his good judgment in selecting the homes they went to. Mr. Hupfield's reply was consistently: "You fellows were the ones that made it a good choice, and the fact that you had a good time proves that not only did you do your part, but your host and hostess were the right ones for you." Mr. Hupfield denied all credit. He spent so much time on arranging for everyone else that he almost missed out on his own Christmas dinner.

A total of eighty-three servicemen and girls were treated in the city and district through the arrangements made by the "Y", making this, in many cases, the first Christmas away from their own homes, as gay and pleasant as it was, and the people of Belleville will hold a warm spot in the hearts of many an English, Australian, New Zealand and boys from our own Western and Eastern sections of Canada for years to come.

George Coe Given 6 to 9 Months In Reformatory

George Coe, Madoc farmhand, was sentenced to serve from six to nine months in the Ontario Reformatory, when he appeared for sentence before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today. Coe had last week at his trial pleaded guilty to theft of $43.00 from a fellow-worker. He was arraigned by Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson of Madoc.

"I am told this man stole $43.00 from an aged farmhand who only has one eye. I cannot recommend any degree of clemency," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. who had been absent from court for the past two weeks owing to illness. Crown Attorney Donnan was welcomed back by Court Clerk Deputy Chief Harman today.

Charles F. Davidson, Belleville, was sentenced to serve from four to six months in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted of stealing tools from his employers. On a second count of carrying a revolver Davidson was given a three months' sentence to run concurrent with the first term.

After examining the gun which Davidson was toting Mr. Donnan remarked: "I defy any person to discharge this weapon although it would frighten a person."

"The gun doesn't belong to Davidson and is not registered. The owner will be charged next week," revealed Deputy Chief Harman, who informed the court he did not believe the accused man intended to make trouble with the weapon.

George Asselstine, Belleville, was given a month when in default of the payment of a $50.00 fine imposed after he had pleaded guilty to a second charge of intoxication, while Chester Baker, also of Belleville, paid $25.00 and costs upon being convicted of leaving the scene of an accident.

In Belleville's post-Christmas police court only three appeared charged with imbibing too freely of "cheer" and all paid fines prior to the opening of the court. One was an interdicted person.

Crerar Commands Canadian Corps in Italy

Algiers, Dec. 28 (CP) — Allied headquarters formally announced today that Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar is in command of the Canadian Corps in Italy and that the 1st. Division fighting in the Ortona region is part of his corps.

Dispatches from the front said that the Germans had put a new division the reconstituted 334th. into the line and that this division had used flame throwers extensively against the Canadians. The 334th. division was smashed in Tunisia.

Announcement that Gen. Crerar is in command in Italy was made Sunday night by Ottawa. At the same time press dispatches said there was speculation that he might be shifted from Italy to Britain to take the place of Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton who has retired from command of the Canadian Army Overseas due to ill health.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP) — Minor index gains were chalked up for all four groupings in the early trading on Toronto exchange today and volume was small at 102,000 shares for the first three hours.

Mild weakness was shown in the gold group by Buffalo-Ankerite, Pamour, Malartic Gold Fields, Cochenour Willians, Hollinger and Sladen against small gains for Macassa, Cariboo, O'Brien, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Leitch. Smelters, Steep Rock and Sherritt were slightly weaker base metals.

Steady prices ruled for the senior oils, foods and building stocks. Humberstone Shoe firmed a point to 15 and Moore Corporation ¼ to 46½.

Western oils boarded no changes apart from losses of small fractions for British-Dominion and East Crest.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Dec. 28. (AP)—Financial markets today generally failed to celebrate the United States government's seizure of the rail roads or halting of the steel strike but most received these developments with notable serenity. Although both steels and rails exhibited selective resistance, minor declines prodiminated near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues were quiet, with Lake Shore and Hiram Walker off fractions, Dome Mines up a fraction and Distillers Seagrams unchanged.

The two classes of American Distilling, plain and stamped, dropped several points on a few transactions. Occasional losers included U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Goodrich, Eastman Kodak, Douglas Aircraft and Chesapeake & Ohio. head at intervals were Sante Fe, Bethlehem, Dow Chemical, International Harvester and United Aircraft.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Dec. 28 (CP) — All classes were steady today on the livestock markets. Fresh receipts: Cattle 50; sheep and lambs 125; hogs 550; calves 80.

There were not enough sales of cattle to establish a market but indications were that prices would be about the same as Monday's close.

Lambs were generally 10.50 ungraded with a few graded lots at 11.50 for good ewes and wethers. Veal calves 15-15.50 for good, other grades down to 12. Grass calves 6-9.

Hogs 17.15 for B-1 dressed. There was a heavy holdover of sows and there was no demand for them.

Liquor Ration Cut to 26 Oz.

The festivities will have to be curtailed this week, according to an Ontario Liquor Control Board order keeping liquor stores throughout the provinces closed until Thursday at 10 am. Coupled with this announcement was a second blow to liquor drinkers: government announcement that the monthly quota will be reduced to 26 ounces next month

Stock Shortage

Hon. St. Clair Gordon, chairman of the liquor control board, said liquor stores would have to remain closed until Thursday due to the stocks available under the Dominion Government restrictive order, which have proven insufficient to meet the substantial public demand which has shown this month.

Stores selling native wines will remain closed today and tomorrow and on January 1 and January 3. Brewers retail stores and retail depots in breweries were closed today and will be closed on New Year's Day.

The new liquor quotas will become effective January 4—the liquor stores will be closed January 1 and 3. The new quota represents a reduction of 14 ounces per person per month, from this month's quota of 40 ounces.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 28—(CP)— Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Barrie, London, Stratford $17 delivered, Hamilton $17.10 delivered, Hull $16.95 delivered.

Chatham later reported dressedweight up 10 cents at $16.50 plus transportation.

NORTH TO DANGER by TOM GILL

CHAPTER 6

Very quietly Dove came toward them. His mild gray eyes lingered fleetingly on Selkirk's face, then moved to Colin's and a smile touched the little man's lips. "Nice to be back, isn't it?" he murmured. "May I sit down?"

The voice was hesitant, as if he felt himself to be an unexpected guest, hopeful of welcome, but not quite confident.

Struck silent with amazement, Colin did not answer. He scarcely heard. The blood singing in his ears, the quickened pounding of his heart, all testified to his refusal to accept the stark impossibility of Dove's presence there. Dove simply couldn't be in Learmonth; Dove was in Winnipeg. No planes were to be chartered. Yet here before him, faintly amused, Dove himself was standing. Colin's imagined security had been short-lived—once more the two antagonists were face to face.

Fighting against that growing sense of unreality, Colin had to accept the unwelcome fact that from now on his every move would be more dangerous, or—worse still—the next move might come from Dove himself. And yet—again Colin looked at Dove—no slightest sign of threat lay there. Only a kind of unhurried watchfulness, as of one who could afford to wait.

Selkirk held out his hand, "Take off your coat, Dove. Sit down." The voice was quietly courteous, but as Dove moved forward, Colin dropped his own mackinaw over the picture he had shown Selkirk a moment before. He tried to make the gesture casual, but he saw Dove glance toward the table, and could not be sure whether the little man's eyes flickered as he took the offered chair.

Comfortably Dove crossed his legs. "I'm glad you're both here. I've been hoping for this chance to talk with you members of the Bay Co. as soon as I reached Learmonth." He buried his hands deep in his pockets and leaned back. "You won't mind if I speak candidly, will you? In a country where a few white people are always being thrown together, it makes living more simple to know where we all stand. Don't you think so, Mr. Rae?"

Colin picked up his pipe. "I can tell better when I know what's on your mind."

"The thing on my mind, Mr. Rae, is yourself."

"I'm beginning to suspect it."

"Why shouldn't you? And I'll tell you very frankly why. One month ago the Bay Company sent you to Wolverine for no discernible reason except to hamper my work at the school. After Van Downe's death you tried to hurt my reputation by making damaging implications at the inquest."

"I said no more than you yourself admitted."

"There are ways of saying things. It is unpleasant to be called a murderer even by indirection. But that is past, and you are now in Learmonth. What I want to know is this: has the company sent you here to interfere with my school again? In other words, Mr. Rae, is it to be a finish fight?"

Colin's first impulse was to reply that the company had nothing to do with his coming to Learmonth. But that might be precisely what Dove wanted to know, and, instead of answering, he asked, "Why should I want to interfere with you?"

"Because I threaten the virtual monopoly of your company in the fur trade here. You don't relish the prospect that this winter most of the trappers will bring their pelts to me. The profits that would go into your directors' pockets will go back to the trappers themselves. But you—"

Dove's eyes had shifted to the opening door, and, following his gaze, Colin saw Irina step from the inner room.

"It's so quiet—" she began, then, catching sight of Dove, she stopped short and Colin read the question in her eyes: how had he reached Learmonth?

Selkirk introduced them and Dove bowed over the girl's hand.

"You are very lovely," he said simply. "Here in this bleak north country, we should be grateful for beauty." Smiling, he looked up at Selkirk. "I was on the verge of quarreling with you when this lady saved me. I keep forgetting that nothing is ever solved by argument. Here is a better suggestion: bring Miss Meredith and Mr. Rae over to the school for dinner." Dove paused. "Let's say Wednesday when the last boat comes in. Then I can show you what I am trying to do. You may not agree that my work is good, but we can at least be enemies on a basis of understanding."

Dove looked toward the girl. "You persuade them," he urged.

With growing wonder, Colin watched the little man struggle into his overcoat. He was beyond prediction. The very thing Rae wanted most was to get inside the school, and now Dove himself was offering that opportunity—but not until Wednesday. Too much might happen before Wednesday, and Rae had just decided to find some reason for an earlier visit when he heard Dove call his name.

"Could I speak with you outside, Mr. Rae?" Dove was asking.

Like the shock of an electric spark something within Colin signaled danger. Dove's face had become more masklike and the eyes not quite the friendly eyes of a moment past. Silently Rae followed him out into the sunshine.

Dove let him a few feet down the path; then suddenly he whirled. "Do you still believe I killed Van Downe?"

The question came with the jolting force of a physical blow; but when he answered Colin's voice was quiet as Dove's and even more cold.

"If I were sure you killed Van Downe you would be dead now. Van Downe was my friend."

"That means you haven't decided."

"It means that if I had been on the jury I would have done exactly what they did—exonerate you."

"I'm glad." Dove's voice seemed a shade less tight. "Then that brings us back to our original question. Why are you here?"

"This is my home. I was born here."

Again that searching scrutiny, while Dove buttoned his coat, and now, as if he had dismissed the subject, he said: "Come over to the school Wednesday. Whether the work I am doing is important or not, only the future can say. But I know this: it is the work I intend to carry on in spite of any opposition. So, if the company sent you here to fight me, I can promise you a fight to the last ditch."

Dove took a few steps down the path, then glanced back, and Colin saw that he was smiling. "You're wondering how I got to Learmonth so soon, aren't you?"

"Yes. How did you?"

The smile broadened. "Ever thought of taking a night train to The Pas and chartering a plane there? It's a pleasant flight."

Prey to a dozen unanswered questions, Colin watched Dove walk down the path. What had Dove learned? For himself, Colin felt he had learned nothing. Rousing himself, he turned back toward the bungalow, where, eyes wide with wonder, Irina ran up to him. "How did he ever get here?" She was breathless with excitement.

"Said he chartered a plane from The Pas." Then, to Selkirk, "Can we check on that?"

"I think so."

"Let's do," Colin closed the door. "Well how did Mr. Jonathan Dove strike you?"

Selkirk's sensitive face reflected his indecision. "I still can't believe that man is a murderer. And he certainly didn't seem unfriendly to you. It doesn't make sense, Colin. Yesterday he tries to do you in; today he invites you to dinner at the school."

"I think it makes perfect sense," Colin answered. "Don't forget it's easier to do away with people in a city than it is here. And besides, Dove is puzzled. He's been working on the conviction that I was bringing information to Winnipeg. Nothing less than that could have stampeded him into following me down from Wolverine. But now he finds I only wanted to come here. So he's uncertain about me, and he realizes he has nothing to lose, and maybe a lot to gain, by being friendly until he finds out what I am up to. Meanwhile, I don't intend to go the way Van Downe went."

Selkirk laid a hand on Colin's sleeve. "You're not letting your imagination do things to you?"

"Maybe. In a game like this the man with the best imagination stays alive longest." Rae glanced at his watch. "If Miss Meredith is going to the inn, I'll take her down. I may stay there myself for a few days."

"We'll all go together." Selkirk picked up Irina's bag. "You're about to meet Ma Corrigale," he told her. "She runs the inn, and she's one of the grandest women in the North."

"Only," Colin cautioned, "don't mind what she says."

A twenty-minute walk took them to a long rambling building that fronted the river; opening the door, Selkirk led Irina into a large combination living and dining room where a blazing fire crackled. There was comfort and cheerful welcome in that warm, well-lighted room, and at sight of the fireplace Irina gave a cry of delight. Running forward, she held out both hands.

"It's like the big fireplace at home," she called back to Selkirk. "Remember?"

Footsteps sounded from the kitchen; a hearty voice boomed, "It's time you were back, Colin, you tramp!" and, wiping her hands on her apron, Ma Corrigale entered the room.

A vigorous, middle-aged woman with graying hair, Ma Corrigale was undoubtedly the most respected woman in Learmonth, and perhaps the most feared. She knew everyone — breeds, Indians and whites. She entertained few illusions, either, about herself or others, and this, combined with her outspoken frankness, had earned her more than one enemy.

Wife of a Hendrik's Bay trader, she had opened the inn after her husband's death and in fifteen years made it famous throughout northern Canada. Later, with her savings, she began to branch out as a "free trader," buying furs from the Cree Indians, traveling along with her dog team in winter weather that often fell to fifty below. She knew the value of furs, and more important still she knew the personalities of the men she traded with; the result was she often drove a sharper bargain than many of the Bay men.

The years had won no major victories over Ma Corrigale—she was too busy to grow old. Her eyes were still alive with interest; the quick, firm step had lost none of its resilience.

And now, taking Colin by the arm, she marched him to the nearest window and very deliberately looked him over. At length, as if satisfied, she nodded. "You'll do," she decided. "You had me worried when I heard you were down in Winnipeg, working for a magazine. What kind of tripe is that for a man your size to be playing with?"

Colin laughed. "It only lasted a year."

"Well, I can't see that it's hurt you. You've always been going off at half cock on some outlandish business. When do you settle down?"

"Never, I hope."

Ma Corrigale snorted, but Selkirk interrupted. "Ma, this is Irina Meredith, the woman I'm going to marry."

Slowly Irina turned from the fireplace and slowly she approached, saying no word, as if awaiting judgment, and to Colin it seemed that either by instinct or design Irina had chosen the one best way to win the older woman's friendship.

Then he saw Ma Corrigale smile and knew that judgment had been passed.

In a gesture of spontaneous welcome, Ma held out both hands. "My dear," she said. There was no mistaking the soft friendliness of her voice, but as if regretting that suspicion of sentiment, she turned on Selkirk. "So this is the girl you kept in a picture on your desk? You should have brought the original up here twenty years ago."

Selkirk colored. "Twenty years ago Irina was reading fairy tales."

"And now she's listening to yours." Ma's tone was heavily ironic, but Colin thought he saw a look of relief on Selkirk's face—relief and perhaps gratitude that Ma was treating his engagement as nothing more than commonplace behavior.

And in that moment Colin seemed to see Selkirk more clearly, without the blurred acceptance of a lifelong friendship. Standing beside that vivid girl, Selkirk's white hair, his finely chiseled features and close-cropped gray moustache became bleached and colorless. Only his dark eyes—keenly sensitive and observant—saved his face from coldness. And suddenly Colin realized that those dark eyes betrayed a man hungry for love yet afraid to seek it. That explained Selkirk's diffidence—the remoteness that kept most men at a distance but aroused Ma's maternal protectiveness. It explained, too, the half-fearful adoration that suffused Selkirk's face as he smiled at the girl beside him.

But Ma was looking at Colin. "Is Your Lordship staying with me, too?"

"If you've room—"

"I've nothing but room. This time of year we don't need traffic lights in Learmonth. Your old room's waiting for you."

"Then I'll be back tonight." Colin moved toward the door. "I promised to help Blair fix a broken pontoon."

From the hall he looked back. Irina was gazing into the fire again, absent and dreaming; then just for an instant she raised her head and their eyes met. Flickering firelight touched to soft copper the translucence of her skin and burnished the vari-colored hair, while she smiled at him very slowly. Something — either the smile or the eyes, or both—spoke to him, intimately, briefly, then she turned back to the fire. Like a man awakening from reverie Colin opened the door.

In something less than two hours, Colin covered the seven miles of trail between the inn and his cabin to find that, with Alec's help, Blair had already dismantled the broken pontoon. By mid-afternoon they bolted a new one into place and filled the tanks with gas; then tired and grimy went up to the cabin.

"What now?" Colin asked. "Do you fly back to Learmonth?"

Blair was washing the oil from her hands as she glanced guiltily up at him.

Colin laughed. "That look tells me you're cooking up something."

"I am. Want to do something to please me?"

"Anything in the world."

"Fly with me over to Nate's cabin."

Rae's smile vanished. He remembered his last meeting with Nate Tennant and the black anger in the hearts of both.

But Blair's eyes were pleading. "We can be there in ten minutes. I want you to be friends again."

"For my sake—or Nate's?"

She colored. "For both your sakes. Colin, don't be such an old rock. It's so much more comfortable to like people than to hate them. Besides, I have a special reason—"

"I know. The reason is you're in love with Nate." Almost as soon as he spoke he regretted the words.

Her cheeks flamed bright and angrily she flung back, "Leave me out of it. Isn't it enough that I don't want Nate to do anything foolish? He's still bitter against the company and against you, Colin, won't you—for me—patch up the old feud? You're both very important people in my life. Let's fly over and see him—please. He used to think you were just about the best of everything. You can afford to make the first step."

For a second he hesitated, then raised both his hands in token of surrender. "I'm putty," Colin said. "Just putty in your fingers!"

She pressed her cheek against his arm. "I love you for being putty once in a blue moon. And you'll be glad, too."

But Colin's eyes were still skeptical when they taxied out from shore.

The lake, under clear skies, seemed much wider than when they landed, and they took off without difficulty, zooming up over the spruce-fringed banks and bearing north.

For five minutes Blair followed an ice-fringed stream, then, banking steeply, glided down toward a narrow arm of water where Colin saw a newly built cabin, a small dock of freshly cut saplings, and a canoe. Along the path a tall figure was hurrying toward the dock, and curiously Colin watched him through the window. A huge man, taller even than Rae, with great powerful shoulders and a body that sloped like a wedge from the deep chest down to the moccasined feet.

It was strange to be looking again at one who had meant so much to him all his yesterdays. Through boyhood they had been inseparable. In school Tennant had developed into one of Canada's greatest athletes; a natural leader of men, aggressive and utterly without fear, he might have gone far in provincial politics or become one of the masters of the fur trade, but something happened—Colin never knew what. It might only have been Tennant's inability to work in harness or to take orders. . . . Later Nate had come back to Learmonth to trap and prospect for gold and, with growing success, employed a dozen trappers to run his trap lines.

And now, as Blair glided lower, old memories came crowding back to Colin. He remembered a December night three years ago when he and Tennant had headed across the lake in the year's worst blizzard to rescue the stranded passengers of a grounded plane. It had taken two days to reach them, and almost as long to get back, and without Nate Tennant's endurance they might never have succeeded.

That was the last year the two men had been friends. The flare-up came the following spring and for thee first time since then Colin found himself looking out at Nate as Blair taxied in toward the dock.

Yes, the same Nate Tennant. The strong, tanned face, full curving underlip, wide-set eyes and heavy black brows. The plaid mackinaw shirt, open at the neck, disclosed a mat of small black curling hairs, and across his wrists and the back of his hands fine hair gleamed darkly in the sun.

From where Tennant stood, he could see only Blair, and eagerly he waved to her with both hands, while his voice boomed a jubilant welcome across the water. He pulled the wing over the dock and opened the cabin door.

"Never so glad to see anybody in my life!" His smile reflected his delight. He reached up with two great arms to lift Blair down. Then, catching a movement inside the plane, Nate peered into the cabin and the eyes of the two men met.

Tennant's whole body stiffened, the smile twisted to a grimace of angry surprise. Blair was forgotten.

"Hello, Nate," Colin stepped to the dock.

The blood began whipping into Tennant's face; the tendons of his neck swelled. "What in blazes are you doing here?"

Still smiling, still without raising his voice, Colin answered, "Dropped in to see you."

"Oh, you did. Well, get—"

"Nate!" Sharply Blair broke in. "I asked Colin to come here."

Savagely he whirled on her. "What gave you the idea I ever wanted to see his face again?"

Blair's own eyes began snapping. "Maybe because I'm tired of seeing you both act like a pair of strange huskies. You can't go on this way; it's childish, it's dumb. Can't you let the past rest?"

"It's not the past I'm thinking of. If he—"

"Listen, Nate." Quietly Colin interrupted. "Blair's right. We're both being dumb. We're only hurting each other."

Tennant gave a jeering laugh. "Just sprouting olive branches, aren't you? Well, pull that act somewhere else!" He tapped a warning finger on Rae's chest. "I told you to keep out of my road, and I meant it. I haven't forgotten you had the company blacklist my trappers."

"The company never did."

"Sure they did."

"Look, Nate. You tried to play both ends against the middle. You didn't like Selkirk, so you had your trappers sell their best furs to the free traders and dump what was left on the company. I advised Selkirk to offer you a contract for all your winter's catch or none at all. And he did. That wasn't blacklisting you. Besides, that's all past history—Blair tells me you've been doing pretty well."

Looking at Blair, Nate smiled. "Pretty well," he agreed.

In Tennant's look, in his very tone, Rae could sense a fierce possessiveness for Blair, and with something like a pang he saw an answering warmth in the tall girl's eyes. Suddenly he felt no longer one of them; he was a third person now—a person apart. Two years of absence were taking their inevitable toll.

Again he heard Blair's softly persuasive voice, "Nate, can't we all afford to forget what happened years ago? Colin may be here only a little while. I don't want to spend those days worrying about you both." Expectantly she looked up at him, but Tennant stood sullenly silent, and this time her patience had worn thin.

"Is it always going to be this way when I ask you to do anything, Nate?" She turned toward the plane. "Well, if you'd rather hug your pet hates to your bosom, there's nothing I can do. Maybe it was asking too much to expect that you'd ever grow up. Come on, Colin."

With a single stride, Nate blocked their path, and for a moment he looked down into Blair's eyes, while visibly within him a struggle fought itself out to its ending.

"Don't go." His voice was muffled, as if he forced the words and hesitatingly he held out his hand to Colin. "War's over." He grinned a little sheepishly. "And don't ever say I can't take a licking."

Colin grasped the outstretched hand. "You're not licked. Blair's right about us."

"Blair's always right. But if anyone had told me I'd be doing this—" Tennant broke off and asked, "What are you up to in Learmonth anyhow? Writing another book about trapping?"

Blair saved Colin the need for evasion. "He came to help Rod get married."

"Married!"

"Nothing less. We flew the lady in yesterday. She's attractive, too. Wait until you see her."

Incredulously Nate looked at Colin, then suddenly he laughed. "I never thought that old fossil would have the spine—" He checked himself, "Sorry, Colin. I forgot that mealy-mouthed hypocrite is a friend of yours. But don't tell me he's thinking of matrimony!"

"It was as big a surprise to me," Colin answered. "She's years younger than Rod, and she's lovely. Unless you've changed your spots, you'll go off the deep end the minute you see her."

They both laughed together. It released something, that laugh. It washed away the dregs of their old animosity, and Colin felt again the welcome warmth of a companionship he had not known for years.

From just above the bank came the long howl and, looking up, Colin saw five timberwolves chained outside the cabin.

Nate laughed delightedly at Colin's surprise. "They're my beauties. Take a look at them."

Within Colin an old memory stirred. "You always said that some day you'd own a pure-bred wolf team."

"This is it. The fastest and toughest team in the north. Don't get too close," Nate cautioned. "They have a light-hearted way of taking strangers apart."

Heads lowered, the animals watched Colin come nearer—five gray forms and white fangs and glowing, malignant eyes. They were in superb condition; each must have weighed well over a hundred and twenty pounds, all muscle and bone.

Just beyond the reach of their chains, Colin stopped, when the nearest wolf lunged, the chain pulled taut, throwing the animal headlong. But instantly he was up, viciously jerking at his chain—tirelessly malevolent — while the other wolves looked on silently.

Again Nate laughed. "Well, now you know where you stand with them. Watch this." From his cabin he brought a can of meat and threw it to the nearest wolf. With a snarl the animal pounced, and quicker than a man could open it with any implement, the long white fangs tore the tin apart. At a single gulp the meat was devoured, and the wolf, licking his chops, looked up for more.

"How's that for a pair of jaws?" Nate turned triumphantly. "They have a memory, too. When they were just pups, they broke into Jonathan Dove's chicken yard. Dove laid them out with the thick end of a dog whip, and they've never forgotten it. To this day, when I drive them over to the school, I can tell if Dove's there by the way they stiffen up. Dove remembers too—he walks around them with plenty of room to spare."

"They're magnificent animals." Colin's own admiration was sincere. "How do they act in harness?"

CANADIANS ROLL ON TOWARD PORT OF PESCARA

Snow and Winds Hinder Progress Of 1st Division

Twenty Nazi Planes Blasted Out of Sky While Allies Lose Eleven

BOMBERS ACTIVE

By WES GALLAGHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Algiers, Dec. 29 —(AP)— Troops of the Canadian 1st Division, who captured Ortona in the most violent house-to-house battle of the Mediterranean campaign, smashed north along the coast in snow and sleet today toward Rome's Adriatic port of Pescara.

The Allied communique announced that the eight-day "bitter struggle for Ortona is over."

The drive toward the important Adriatic port of Pescara, 11 miles up the coast from Ortona, was being hindered by high winds and snow, the communique said.

In the Villa Grande area, southwest of Ortona, Indian troops made new gains, the communique added.

And further south, in the rugged mountain country of the central sector, French Moroccan troops succeeded after bitter fighting in seizing the peaks they had been assaulting for several days. On the Anglo-American 5th Army front, British troops beat off a sharp German attack near the mouth of the Garigliano river.

Freezing weather hardened runways, and bombers took to the air to smash at enemy communication lines.

Medium bombers bombed "airfields near home," the communique declared, pounding hangars, buildings and dispersal areas at Ciampino, south of Rome, and "accurately" blasting Centocelle, east of the Italian capital.

(A German broadcast recorded in London said Rome was bombed at noon yesterday, and the Nazi-controlled Paris radio asserted that "Allied bombs" fell near St. Peter's Basilica. There was no Allied confirmation that the capital, itself, was attacked.)

Large forces of heavy bombers hammered the railway yards at Rimini, north Adriatic port, and at Vicenza, 40 miles west of Venice.

Twenty German planes were smashed out of the skies against a loss of 11 Allied aircraft during the day's operations.

Other attacks included assaults on rail targets near Ferentino, on a railway bridge near Castello, the port of Civitavecchia, northwest of Rome, and Anzio and Nettuno, southwest of the capital.

Air force headquarters announced that the Adriatic has been virtually closed to German shipping as have the waters between France and northern Italy as the result of Allied air patrols. The announcement added on the other hand that since Nov. 8, 1942, 22,526,485 tons of Allied shipping had been escorted in the Mediterranean with a loss of only 1½ per cent.

(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Italy, Dec. 29 (C.P. Cable) — The battle for battered and ruined Ortona raged without a break Monday with the Germans fighting with unabated fierceness but slowly being pressed back into a small group of buildings at the northern end of the town.

(Fall of Ortona to troops of the Canadian 1st. Division was formally announced today by Allied headquarters, Algiers, which said the British 8th. Army, of which the 1st. Division forms the right wing, was forging up the coast toward Pescara.)

Monday was the same as any other day in this bitter battle—a cacaphony of machine-guns and snipers' bullets, bursts of grenades and the explosions of tank and anti-tank guns and shells.

The Germans kept shelling and mortaring the southern bulge of the town in which the Canadians were strongly established.

To the southwest of the town another Canadian force engaged parachute troops defending Ortona's flank and the ground overlooking the road leading to Pescara. Canadians there spent Monday clearing the sector across which the Germans had sent waves of troops against positions occupied by Canadian Highlanders (the Seaforth Highlanders) who made a successful Christmas Eve march toward Villa Nicola and Villasan Tommaso. Both these villages are approximately 1½ miles southwest of Ortona.

Canadians Underestimated

The Germans underestimated the strength of the Canadians who had advanced with tanks supporting them over the soft muddy ground. There was violent fighting at close quarters in which the Scots wielded their bayonets with good effect.

One platoon of Germans fought right up to a Canadian company headquarters where the last of the enemy group was killed by an officer who had to use his pistol to bring the German down almost at his feet.

Another German platoon was cut to pieces when it moved directly in front of a group of Canadians waiting for them in slit trenches. Artillery fire brought down the survivors as they withdrew.

At least 100 enemy soldiers were left dead there and another thirty were taken prisoner.

The fight the Canadians put up from their positions less than two miles from Ortona—along the Pescara Road to which they had sent patrols caused the enemy to bring in at least one fresh battalion of parachutists to reinforce what remained of his line beyond the Moro Valley.

The Canadians also sent a force to sweep the paratroopers from the ground they held immediately southwest of Ortona and from which they had been laying down a harassing fire on the lateral road into the town.

Canadian tanks gave the infantry invaluable support in these actions. Employing tactics similar to those used in Ortona's street fighting they blasted out the enemy machine-gun nests and upset and scattered the houses shielding them.

Flamethrowers were no deterrent to the tanks. However, the tanks had to proceed warily because of mines and German versions of Molotov Cocktails which were hurled against the tank hulls by enemy soldiers crouching in doorways.

McNaughton, Montgomery at Odds On Canadians' Role Writer States

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 29 — (CP) — In a dispatch from Ottawa, John Marshall parliamentary writer for the Windsor Stars says that one of the reasons why Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton left the command of the Canadian Army overseas is that General Sir Bernard Montgomery is not an easy man to get along with. His dispatch says in part:

"Retirement of Lieut.-General A. G. L. McNaughton from the position of Commander of the Canadian Army overseas, though necessitated by ill-health,, solves an awkward problem. It ends the clash of temperament between General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and himself which has existed for the past few years and which previously had been interrupted by Gen. Montgomery being placed in command of the 8th Army. Nothing has been said of this here officially and not a great deal unofficially yet it has been in the nature of an open secret around the capital since last summer. Enough reports have come back in reliable form to piece reason for Gen. McNaughton's resignation. He actually is in ill-health. ....

"With Gen. Montgomery returning under Gen. Eisenhower to lead the onslaught on the continent, it would have been almost inevitable the differences between Montgomery and McNaughton would have cropped up again. ...

"The incipient stages of the differences between Montgomery and McNaughton were when Montgomery was in charge of England's southeastern command in the difficult days when invasion threatened. The Canadian divisions then in Britain were under his command, though immediately led by McNaughton."

McNaughton wanted to make them the best trained and the best equipped troops – in the world. "Montgomery, however, has his own ideas of training and these did not always coincide with those of McNaughton.

"When Montgomery went to the Middle East to take over the 8th Army. ... there was a hiatus in

OUTER DEFENCES OF ZHITOMIR AND KOROSTEN HIT

In First Week of New Winter Offensive Reds Recapture Half Of Territory Lost

DRIVE ON KOROVOGRAD

London, Dec. 29—(CP)—Six days after his troops regained the offensive, Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's forces today were storming the outer defences of Zhitomir and Korosten, strategic junction points on the Leningrad-Odessa railway, 80 miles west of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

Front dispatches placed one spearhead of Vatutin's 1st Ukraine Army within 10 miles of Zhitomir after sweeping through Korostishev and Smolovka. Heavy Soviet field guns, planted less than 20 miles away, were softening the city's defence works.

Other advance units smashed weakening enemy lines and captured Zlobichi, five miles southeast of Korosten, and Bekhi, an equal distance to the northeast.

Thus, in the first week of his new winter offensive, Vatutin has recaptured approximately half the territory which Marshall Fritz von Mannstein took during his abortive five-week tank drive in the Kiev bulge. Important towns retaken include Radomyal and Brusilov.

Reoccupation of Zhitomir and Korosten, apparently just a matter of days, would nullify almost all the enemy's gains achieved during his costly counter-offensive.

The Red Army scored on two other important sectors of the long front, according to the Moscow war communique. In northern White Russia Gen. Ivan Bagramian's Siberian shock troops dissipated 16 German counter-attacks on the approaches to Vitebsk and liberated several villages. Dispatches said Bagramian's vanguards were within five miles of that heavily-fortified enemy stronghold.

South of the Kiev bulge in the Dnieper bend, the Germans were also falling back. In the drive on Korovograd the Russians shattered a fierce tank and infantry counter-attack with a deadly artillery barrage. The Germans were forced back to their original positions in this area, Moscow said.

Greatest gains were recorded in the Kiev bulge fighting, however.

Plan to Scrap Idea Ever Signing Peace Treaty With Germany

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—A plan to scrap the idea of ever signing a peace treaty with Germany has been laid before all the United Nations, it was disclosed today. A simple declaration of peace would be issued instead.

The sweeping departure from International practice was advanced in a document which also suggested a United Nations court to try Hitler, Mussolini and other Axis leaders.

The ideas were put forward by General Marcel De Baer, Belgian member of the London Allied Commission to investigate war crimes, and chairman of the War Criminal Commission of the London International Assembly, an unofficial Allied research group.

De Baer suggests that when Germany surrenders unconditionally, the Allies proclaim that the state of war with her has ended. They then would have unlimited rights in the occupied territory and could proceed to reorganize Germany under the sign of peace.

When Germany finally has developed into a country acceptable to the family of "peace-loving states," described in the Moscow declaration, De Baer went on, a general treaty setting forth the world organization to maintain peace could be signed.

POLES REJECT NAZI BID

London, Dec. 29 — (CP) — The Polish underground movement rejected a Christmas Day bid from the Germans to join in fighting the Russians, the Polish Telegraph Agency said today. The Polish underground station SWIT said the offer was made by Hans Frank, Nazi Governor-General of Poland, who used the theme that the "danger of Bolshevik success threatened the Polish nation."

Invasion Plans Approved By Cairo Conference

Cairo, Dec. 29 —(AP)— A final plan for the Allies' invasion of Europe from the west was laid before the Churchill-Roosevelt conference here by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, a British source said today.

The plan was approved within a few days and the amassing of vast armies and mountains of equipment for the zero hour was started immediately.

Eisenhower and Tedder made a secret flight to Cairo from North Africa and produced their plan whereby the air, land and sea experience of the Allies in North Africa could be dovetailed into one grand assault.

So important were the discussions and so pressing the need to finish the war in Europe as possible that when Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt left for Teheran to meet Premier Stalin, Eisenhower and Tedder stayed behind to work out the details of the invasion.

MARINE INVADERS PUSHING TOWARD IMPORTANT DROME

Stiffening Jap Resistance and Tropical Rainstorm Fail to Halt Troops

BEAT OFF ATTACKS

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 29 —(AP)— Stiffening Japanese ground resistance and a heavy tropical rainstorm failed to halt the United States marines' advance from their invasion beachheads at Cape Gloucester, New Britain, towards the enemy's airdrome.

The marines, with tank support and aided by planes which pounded enemy defences with 150 tons of bombs, pushed their way two miles from the shore where they landed Sunday to within one mile and a half of the airdrome.

The Allied Headquarters' communique today also reported that United States air fighters and ground and torpedo boat guns beat off persistent air attacks at Arawe, the army's invasion base 60 miles southeast of Cape Gloucester, downing 37 enemy planes.

Four enemy counter-attacks against the marine line running inland from Borgen Bay, east of the Cape, were repulsed, and four out of 36 Japanese planes which attacked vessels off the beachheads were downed by the ships' guns.

Marines in the invaded sector west of the cape have consolidated their positions and put patrols into enemy territory, the communique said.

Patrols Sent Out.

At Arawe the United States 6th Army sent patrols back into the jungle-land above the base of the Arawe peninsula, resuming operation in an area from which the Americans were driven Sunday by a Japanese counter-attack which was halted at Umtingalu village.

The destruction of 37 Jap planes Sunday night and Monday, by Arawe air fighters and ground and ships' guns, brought to 84 the number of enemy aircraft downed there since the Dec. 15 invasion. Allied losses and damage have been described as slight.

Mosquitos Attack Western Germany Without Loss

London, Dec. 29 — (CP)—R.A.F. speedy Mosquito bombers attacked objectives in Western Germany last night without loss, the Air Ministry announced today, on the heels of Typhoon bomber assaults on targets in Northern France in daylight.

Announcing yesterday's two operations in separate communiques today, the Air Ministry added that R.A.F., Canadian and Allied fighters were out over Northern France on offensive patrol, shooting down one enemy aircraft for the loss of one Allied fighter.

The Western Germany objectives of the light Mosquitos were not identified in the communique nor were the specific Northern France targets.

Booby Birds Finally Defeated By Chicken Wire

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—And now the hazards of war include booby birds.

On a tiny dot on an island in the South Atlantic, Ascension Island, the United States army built an airport and made it one of the most strategic points of the world through the funneling into Africa of 5,000 planes.

But in the course of building the field, the United States war department disclosed yesterday, birds of the tern and booby family insisted on nesting at the foot of the runway, making plane take-offs dangerous.

The army imported cats which promptly took care of the terns. But the boobies—which are so called because of their apparent stupidity—were smart enough to catch the cats and carry them off.

Finally the army imported a bird expert who advised stealing the eggs of the booby and covering the nesting places with chicken wire, which proved effective.

INVASION STAFF FOR EISENHOWER NEARLY COMPLETE

Admiral Ramsay Designated Naval Commander and Leigh-Mallory Air Chief

TO NAME ONE MORE

By E. D. BALL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—The overall Allied high command for the approaching western invasion of Europe was practically completed today with the appointment of two Britons to command the naval and air forces which will operate under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander.

Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, who planned the naval phase of the Allied North African and Mediterranean invasion operations, was named naval Commander-in-Chief, Air Chief Marshal Trafford L. Leigh-Mallory, head of the R.A.F.'s fighter command, was chosen to lead the aerial forces

3 Top Positions For Britain

These appointments, following the naming of Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder to be Deputy Commander-in-Chief, gave Britain three top positions in the Supreme Command.

Still to be appointed is a commander for American ground forces. There is a possibility that an overall commander for British and American ground forces also will be named, and other key positions may yet be filled. Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery has been designated commander of British ground forces.

The selection of Admiral Ramsay and Leigh-Mallory to head the naval and air arms, which of necessity will play two of the most vital parts in the Allied lunge across the channel, was announced at 10 Downing Street.

The announcement said the appointments were made following conversations between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

Japanese Facing Food Shortage

New York, Dec. 29 — (AP)—Premier Hideko Tojo has conferred with Japanese officials on methods of increasing food production, the Tokyo radio said in a broadcast recorded by U. S. government monitors.

The broadcast said Tojo received from the "Greater East Asia Construction Deliberative Council" plans for increasing food output in occupied areas and also a program for developing more fibrous raw materials.

At the same time a Chungking broadcast said the Japanese were facing "an acute food shortage" and were receiving only one-third of the daily rice ration of the Chinese.

Quoting the Berlin radio, the Chinese broadcast said the daily rice ration for the Japanese had been slashed one-half in an "offer rice to the state" movement.

ALLIED BOMBERS PEPPER AIRFIELDS CLOSE TO ROME

Planes Attack Hangars, Buildings, Disperal Areas at C'ampino And Centocello

POPE VIEWS BOMBING

By W. W. HERCHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 29 — (AP) — Allied medium bombers peppered airfields near Rome yesterday and Nazi propagandists sought today to picture the operation as an attack on the capital itself.

A communique from Allied headquarters at Algiers confirmed the bombings today. Earlier enemy radio stations were on the air with wild-eyed descriptions of how "heavy bombs" shattered the outskirts of Rome, causing damage and casualties in residential quarters.

The Paris radio broadcast that bombers fell on Garbatella about 1 1/4 miles east of Vatican City and close enough for the Pope to see the raid.

The official report from Allied headquarters, however, said the bombers had attacked the hangars, buildings and dispersal areas of the airfield at Ciampino south of Rome, and accurately blasted the Centocello airdrome east of the city.

The raid on the airfields outside Rome was the ninth reported in the area of the Italian capital although Rome itself has not been bombed by the Allies since August.

Pope Watched Bombing

The Paris broadcast said Pope Pius XII watched the bombing from a window and asked to be informed of any damage.

A German propaganda broadcast in November claimed that an Allied plane dropped bombs on Vatican City Nov. 5. The Vatican radio said later that an unidentified plane, flying low over Vatican City, had dropped four bombs which caused damage but no casualties. Allied headquarters in Algiers announced Nov. 7 that a thorough investigation showed that Vatican City was not bombed by the Allies.

(In a statement broadcast Monday by the Vatican radio and recorded by U. S. government monitors, Pope Pius indicated that the nationality of the plane was known, declaring that the Nov. 5 attack was "deliberately planned and dishonorably and unsuccessfully screened behind the anonymity of the pilot." The statement did not identify the attacker.)

Six Hits Registered

The German broadcast today said Allied planes dropped heavy bombs on outlying quarters of Rome in yesterday's reported attack, and that six hits on a residential quarter near the Basilica of San Paolo destroyed several houses, left numerous dead and injured many.

A bomb that exploded near Centocelle, east of the city, hit several persons, the broadcast declared, and added that about 50 were wounded by machine-gun fire. It also asserted that several persons were killed or wounded in collapsing houses in Pietrallata, northeast of the capital.

An all-American force of heavy and medium bombers in the war's first bombing of Rome, dropped hundreds of tons of bombs on rail and airfield installations at Rome July 19. The crews were specially trained to carry out a precision attack and carefully instructed to avoid historical and religious points

Another assault was carried out against military targets in the Eternal City Aug. 13.

Blockade Runner Sunk by Coastal Command Planes

Full Details of the Action Yet To Be Told and Probably It Is Continuing

TIME NOT GIVEN

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 29 — (AP)—A brilliant new victory in the British Navy's campaign to destroy the last effective strength of the German fleet — the sinking of three destroyers in the Bay of Biscay and crippling of others—was announced today.

A joint Admiralty and Air Ministry communique telling of these blows in southern waters off the coast of France followed by only a few hours publication of the full story of the sinking of the German battleship Scharnhorst in the cold Arctic.

Full details of the Biscay action are yet to be told but it plainly was a large scale enterprise and one which perhaps is still continuing. "Other details are awaited," the communique said.

In the same area an Axis blockade runner was sent to the bottom by coastal command planes.

Nothing was said of any British loss.

This new spurt of British naval fire — fire which already has dealt a crippling if not a mortal wound to German capital ship power — brought to at least 42 the number of German destroyers and torpedo boats known sunk since the start of the war. This total is exclusive of ships known to have been hit and probably lost.

The first announcement did not say when the action had taken place. It was assumed from the wording of the communique that the German naval vessels may have been escorting an enemy convoy through the Bay of Biscay, which lies west of France and due north of Spain.

Ceased to Exist

The authoritative Soviet publication Red Fleet, in an article made available through the Soviet monitor, summed up the naval actions in this manner:—

"With the sinking of the Scharnhorst, the German battle fleet has virtually ceased to exist . . . the Scharnhorst did not risk putting to sea (originally). Other German surface craft also remained idle in their base in the north of Norway, but the hour came when Hitler had to play his last card. That was when the Scharnhorst was trumped."

Red Star added that it was Hitler's great fear resulting from the decisions of the Teheran conference with its promise of assaults from the east, west and south "inevitably drawing nearer" that led him to send out his last effective capital ship power in a desperate gambler's last throw to support the U-boat offensives that have totally failed.

This generally-accepted view that the decision to risk the Scharnhorst resulted from the desperate German situation at sea and came

Says Mussolini Died In German Hospital Ten Days Ago

Union Heads Call Off Rail Strike

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP) — War Secretary Henry Stimson announced today that heads of the three remaining railway operating unions had agreed to call off a strike which had been set for tomorrow.

The three union chiefs issued a joint statement with Lt.-Gen. Somervell after a conference in the latter's office. They were David B. Robertson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; H. W. Fraser of the order of Railway Conductors, and T. C. Cashen of the Switchmen's Union of North America.

The three unions represent approximately 230,000 railway employees whose decision to strike at 6 a.m. tomorrow caused President Roosevelt to order the railroads of the United States taken over by the army Monday night.

The brief announcement, read by Maj.-Gen. Alexander Surles, head of the War Department Public Relations Bureau, follows:

The Secretary of War announced that there will be no railroad strike. Representatives of the Order of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, and the Switchmen's Union of North America today assured General Somervell that they and the organizations they represent will take no action which might imperil the successful prosecution of the war, and that they will immediately cancel the strike order."

Both Stimson and Somervell said that as far as they were concerned there would be no arbitration of wages while the roads are under their control. It remained in their discretion whether capitulation of the three Brotherhoods would be on a co-operative or forced basis.

Even a complete capitulation by the firemen, conductors and switchmen would no dispose of the wage controversy. The 15 non-operating unions of more than 1,000,000 workers accepted the President's offer to arbitrate, but the President announced that he can not proceed to do that until the unions and the carriers agree on what is to be arbitrated. Thus the controversy is back where it started, except that the 15 unions withdrew their strike authorization They accepted the graduated increases of four to 10 cents and want the President to decide their right to overtime after 40 hours, but the carriers want both questions arbitrated as one.

Every Street in Ortona Piled High With Debris and Dead Not Removed

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadian forces in Italy, Dec. 29—(CP Cable)—The town of Ortona resembles a tomb and for many soldiers and civilians it has been just that.

The dead, lying in the streets and doorways, have not yet been removed by the burial parties.

Every street in the Adriatic port of 9,000, captured Tuesday morning by Canadian troops of the 1st division after a week of some of the bloodiest fighting in the Mediterranean campaign, is piled high with debris most of which was extensively mined by the retreating Nazis.

The roar of battle has lifted from the ruins and for a few hours yesterday afternoon not even a shell landed in the street.

There were no cheering civilians to greet the Canadians in this victory for those who had remained in the town were too stunned to realize fully that the enemy was gone Even the Canadians can't believe the battle is over.

The capture of Ortona has ended what has become known as the battle of Moro valley. It was the bitterest, bloodiest, most prolonged fight the Canadian soldiers have had since they entered Sicily more than five months ago.

Only the next few days will tell where the Germans make their next stand. The steep Arielli river valley, about seven miles north of the Moro, offers a natural defence line, but the Germans may try to hold the Tesoro river 1½ miles closer to Ortona.

The last German troops to leave Ortona were paratroopers, beaten back by Western Canadian infantrymen and Eastern Canadian tanks. Other western troops who had been guarding Ortona's southwest flank pushed through the town in hot pursuit.

THIRTY BANDSMEN JOIN ARMED FORCES SINCE OUTBREAK

Indicative of the handicap which the Belleville Municipal Band has been operating under since the start of the war through thinning of their ranks because of enlistments in the armed forces, Band Manager Harry Moorman announces that 30 of the band personnel have left the ranks. These men for the most part have been replaced by young bandsmen members of the city school bands and are doing a splendid job in upholding the traditions of the senior city musical organization. In tribute to the 30 band members who have enlisted in the armed forces the band manager has had an honor roll inscribed and it is expected this will be dedicated in a local church in the near future.

ASHES AND DEBRIS DUMPED ON STREET

Complaints that persons are dumping ashes on West Bridge St. hill causing an unsightly sight were reported to police by City Engineer Charles Mott today.

Continued reports of the stealing of automobile accessories from parked motor cars on the used car lot operated on Front St. by the West End Motors have again reached police. SAVAGE FISH KILLED

Halifax, Dec. 29 — (CP) — A 4-foot long fish, shaped like a snowshoe, possessing teeth and described by one fish company official as a "Monkfish," attacked a rowboat ferry in Halifax harbor's Northwest Arm here yesterday. Boutilier swung an oar at it and finally killed the fish —to the relief of two ferry passengers.

Cpl. Doug Ruttan Killed in Action In Italy Dec. 17

Trained as Commando and Carried Out Dangerous Mission and Cited for Bravery

BORN IN BELLEVILLE

Official word was received on Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. Canniff Ruttan, 83 Great St. James Street, that their son, Cpl. Douglas Ruttan had been killed in action in the Italian campaign. Cpl. Ruttan was killed on Dec. 17th, during an engagement which his regiment, the Hastings and Prince Edward, had with the retreating enemy probably at Ortona. He was 29 years old.

Cpl. Douglas Ruttan was with Sam Way when he was killed and was also with Bobby Emerson of Everett Street, when he was wounded. He has seen action in every engagement his regiment has had in the campaign and was cited for bravery in the field, the story of which appeared in yesterday's edition of The Ontario Intelligencer. Cpl. Ruttan and another member of the regiment crawled through the German lines to obtain information and returned safely.

In the interview with the reporter from The Ontario Intelligencer, Mrs. Ruttan remarked, that she had received a letter from her son dated December 1st, which arrived in the Christmas mail from overseas. At that time he said he was well. Cpl. Ruttan had written to each one of the family about the same time.

Attended Q. V. School

Cpl. Ruttan attended Queen Victoria School and the Belleville Collegiate and worked for the Corbin Lock Company and the Belleville Foundries before enlisting with the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment. He was married to Ruby Fares and leaves besides his wife a son 5 years of age. Cpl. Ruttan has been overseas with his regiment since January, 1940, and was trained as a Commando.

When he first arrived in England, he wrote home to say he met a friend of his and they went to visit a few of the places of interest in Scotland. One of these places was a church. While they were there an air raid alert sounded and Cpl. Ruttan left the church. A short while after going out of the church it was hit by a bomb and his friend was killed. He also broadcast from England in 1941 and was photographed. His greeting over the air was, "Hello, home."

Well Known in City

Cpl. Douglas Ruttan was well known in the city among those with whom he worked and the members of Tabernacle United Church, of which he was a member. The only other son is serving with the Royal Canadian Navy, stationed at Kingston, and the family were informed by telephone on the same day that word was received about their son Douglas, that Robert was to undergo an immediate operation for appendicitis. Seaman Robert Ruttan had been home for Christmas with his father and mother and had just returned to his station at Kingston.

Lemon Extract Again Being Used To Get "Glow"

Memories of the "roarin' 20's" and the days of prohibitions were brought back at the police station here Tuesday when a portion of a bottle of lemon extract was found on the person of an inebriate, who was apprehended on Front St. in a state of intoxication.

"Gosh, it's a long time since we have seen lemon extract around the police station. Why in the old days of prohibition it was nothing to find part bottles of lemon extract, rubbing alcohol and even shoe polish in the pockets of drunks in the early days of the 20's," remarked one police official this morning, as he revealed the boys those days used to steam the alcohol from out of the shoe polish and drink it.

"Yes, and they boasted that it was the 'real McCoy', but the only drawback was the fact they claimed they couldn't get enough alcohol from one can of polish," added the officer.

In the meantime the consumer of the lemon extract fluid was arraigned before a Justice of the Peace and remanded in custody until Friday when a charge of intoxciation will be heard.

4 Bald Eagles Are Wintering On Timber Island

Large Brush Wolf, One of Pack in Athol, Shot—Fourth Shot in P. E. Co. in 20 Years

Point Traverse, Dec. 29 — Uninhabited Timber Island, one mile off this peninsula, is a sanctuary for four large bald eagles and according to hunters who visited the island this last fall the eagles are wintering there this year. There are numerous notes of spring and autumn observations of bald eagles in Prince Edward County but very few in winter.

Timber Island has long been a haven for these rare and unusual birds. A huge nest which is big enough to support a man, is located in a lofty elm on the westerly end of the island. Some of the sticks found in the nest were four feet long and an inch in diameter. An early record of the Timber Island site was made by Macoun in 1909. The late Mr. E. Beaupre of Kingston, Ont., who visited the island in June, 1917, states that, "according to available information the eagles are believed to have occupied this lonely and uninhabited island for more than a century." Timber Island is reported to be the last stand of the bald eagle on Canadian Lake Ontario. Local ornithologists are of the opinion that the species is increasing its numbers of late.

Although the bald eagle is the national bird of the United States, most persons envisage the fierce golden eagle when they think of the country's emblem. The two eagles are about equal in size, but the golden eagle feeds on large, swift prey that taxes its strength and courage, whereas the bald eagle is chiefly a fish eater, and its nest is usually found near the water.

The bald eagle is not a very impressive bird when young, for it is not until it is more than three years old does it assume the white head and tail feathers that make it one of the handsomest of birds. The golden eagle is a rare and irregular visitor to this county. The eaglets are mostly black, but on the backs of their heads grow the characteristic hackles of golden-brown tinge.

Point Petre Hunters Bag Wolf.

A large brush wolf, one of a pack of wolves roaming in Athol Township, was shot by two Point Petre hunters, Alton Hineman and Nelson Moore, over the weekend.

The wolf, which is the fourth to be shot in Prince Edward County in twenty years, was much larger than the one previously killed by Mr. Hineman in South Marysburgh Township on December 5th.

Mr. Hineman and Mr. Moore will receive a county bounty of $25, a township bounty of $25, and a provincial bounty of $25, which will bring the hunters $75.

All efforts are being made by local hunters to wipe out the wolves which are roaming about in this area of Prince Edward County. The township of South Marysburgh has paid out over $1,000 to farmers in sheep claims.

Forced Down.

Engine trouble was responsible for a forced landing of a Lysander plane near Milford over the weekend. The machine was operating out of the Picton Bombing and Gunnery School at the time of the accident. The plane was undamaged and the pilot escaped injuries.

Deadline Nears For Income Tax

Taxpayers who pay on the instalment plan and who have not yet paid their 1942 income tax in full were reminded today by Mr. Sidney Gilmore, Inspector of Income Tax for the Belleville District, that the balance of their estimated tax must be paid by December 31st. Under regulation which puts the Dominion Income Tax on a pay-as-you-go system, these taxpayers were given an extension of six months from June 30th, when returns were filed, to pay the two-thirds of the 1942 balance due.

Speaking with the Ontario Intelligencer today Mr. Gilmore stated that the final payments on the 1942 income tax were coming in very well, there being a decided upswing in returns during the past few days. At the same time he reminded that Friday was the last day for payments to be paid without penalty.

Those who make quarterly instalments, principally business and professional men, and those in receipt of substantial investment income, are also required to pay their fourth quarterly instalment for 1943 by December 31st. These payments have also been coming in steadily for the past month, it was stated.

The 1943 income tax forms are now being prepared and are expected to be available early in the new year, according to Mr. Gilmore. A few sample forms have been received at the Belleville office, but there have not been sufficient numbers received for general distribution.

Three Members Of Band Given Life Memberships

Life memberships in the Belleville Municipal Band, given in appreciation of many years faithful service with that organization, were presented to three well-known local musicians at the annual meeting and social get-together of the band members held Tuesday evening at the band rehearsal rooms on Front Street

Band members or former band members to be presented with life memberships were 84-year-old Robert Blaind, St. Paul Street, who has been a member of the Belleville Municipal Band or its many variously named forerunners, since he was twelve years old. During his active years with the Belleville Band, Mr. Blaind played every brass instrument but the trombone, it was stated. Present band members to be given life memberships were David Brown, Foster Avenue, and William Hart, Burton Street. Both have been members of the Belleville Band for many years, Mr. Brown since 1906.

Presentation of the life membership to Mr. Blaind was made in absentia by Bill Grant, Mr. Blaind because of ill health being unable to attend the meeting. Bill Lockyer made the presentation to Mr. Brown who because of advancing years has tendered his official resignation as an active member. The presentation to Mr. Hart was made by Ab Wonnacott.

"Although banding is distinctly a hobby on the part of the member, it is nevertheless a service to the community," stated Mr Lockyer as he presented the life membership to Mr. Brown. "These men who tonight are receiving life memberships have, indeed, served their city well. Their service should be taken as a pattern by the younger members."

Chairman of the meeting was Band Manager Harry Moorman who expressed his appreciation for the harmony and co-operation shown by the band members during the past year. Indicating that he had endeavored to bring about good fellowship and harmony, Mr. Moorman stated he had had splendid support, both from the members and from the bandmaster, Mr. Fred Jobson. He also expressed his thanks to the members for the holiday remembrances and for the gift of a lamp.

Mr. Moorman welcomed into the band some of its new members and paid tribute to its present members who had assisted in pioneering banding in Belleville Bandmaster Fred Jobson recalling incidences leading up to his becoming a member of the Belleville Municipal Band, paid tribute to the members receiving life memberships for the assistance they had given in promoting harmony and for the co-operation shown. Financial report of the band was given by the secretary Mr. Everett Smith.

There was no election of officers at the meeting it being the decision of the management to continue with the present board of directors. Officer personnel of the band is, Manager, Harry Moorman; Bandmaster, Fred Jobson; Board of Directors, Garn Dobbs, Howard Aselstine, Steve Sword, Reg. Hinchey, Morley Duff, George Carver and Harry McFarland, Picton.

Speaker Requests Canada to Open Doors to Refugee Peoples of Europe

"The Knocking Refugee" was the title of an address to the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their regular weekly luncheon in the Hotel Quinte on Tuesday noon by Rev. J. G. Hornsby, Pastor of St Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Mr. Hornsby was born in Yorkshire, England, where he received his early training. He attended Edinburgh University, where he took his Arts and his Divinity at Yorkshire College. His first church in Canada was at Port Hope, and for nine years he was pastor of his second call in Burlington. After spending four years at Owen Sound, Mr. Hornsby accepted a call to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, where he has been pastor for about a year.

Mr. Hornsby was intending to address the Kiwanis on the subject of "Canadian Born Japanese" but altered his topic to speak on a more urgent one regarding the necessity of aiding the refugee peoples of Europe. "Sixteen years ago this coming April," Dr. Hornsby said, "I stood on a Liverpool wharf with my wife and two small children, waiting for a tender or tug to take us, along with forty more people to the liner anchored in the Mersey, and setting sail within two hours for Canada. I had resigned my parish, sold most of our household effects and said goodbye to our friends, most of whom thought we were crazy. We were not refugees," Mr. Hornsby remarked, "but we were emigrants. It is never easy for a man in middle life to make the break we made. The best emigrant is the young one, but when a country calls you because of its vastness and variety, its character and its climate, its wonder and its work, if your mind is alive and your blood really red, then you go.

Becomes a Canadian

"As the years have come and gone I have gradually and definitely become a Canadian," said Mr. Hornsby, also stating that his wife and two children have definitely adopted Canada as their country. "We were as one who came knocking, and we were welcomed in. And, as I speak to you," he said, looking around the room at his audience, "the remembrance of what I once was, as I looked towards Canada so hopeful, reminds me of the many who stand now on the same threshold knocking and hoping. They, too, want to enter, and a great majority of them have every bit as much to bring and give as had others, who have given as well as taken from this great land. It is true, that they are neither Scotch nor English, nor are they Irish nor Welsh, but they are none the less human, cultured and adaptable. Their present situation merits pity, and the fullest consideration, because they are refugees, made so by the ruthlessness of a nation, whose highest ideals flavor of hell itself.

Many Knock at Door

"Among those who knock at our door are to be found Poles, Czechs, Dutch, Austrians, Germans, Lithuanians, Yugoslavians, Danes, Belgians, French and Norwegians. Many from these different countries have been given temporary asylum in Spain, Switzerland, Sweden, Turkey and Portugal, but they will have to be taken out in order to make room for others seeking temporary refuge. More than 2,000,000 have been done to death, and the slaughter of others is going on while we are gathered here. What can be done for them? What has been done to help them so far?" Dr Hornsby asked. "In Britain, 150,000 are being cared for. Since 1933 Palestine has absorbed 280,000 immigrants. In the U.S.A., 260,000 refugees have been admitted since Hitler's advent. But, what of Canada? The sum total of refugees admitted over the past ten years is an estimated 15,000. Australia, with only half our population, has admitted that number.

A Recent Plea

"In a recent plea on behalf of these unfortunate people, Sir Robert Falconer says: 'We should do our share, which would be to receive a few thousands at most. Their number will not be so great as to affect materially the racial and social complexion of our people. They who have survived the terrible sufferings through which they have gone must have great natural strength of body and character. They come from the best stock of the races to which they belong.' If you will permit your memory a survey of the past you will recall, that refugees before and since the war have earned the unstinted praise of their neighbors and officialdom for their real contribution in our economic system. New processes, new patents, new machinery, new industry, have been brought to Canada by refugees. Paint remover, seed cleaning and drying paprika are some of the new processes I have in mind. Artists and medical experts, manufacturers and university professors are all among these refugees."

Refers to Benefits

Dr. Hornsby referred to past emigrations of refugees and the benefits they brought to their new countries with them. He said, that these movements had often been the beginning of new developments in the countries, that opened their doors to them. The Spanish Jews movement to Holland, which laid the foundations for the Dutch Colonial Empire; the Pilgrim Fathers, whose cultural influence is still felt strongly in America and to a great extent in Canada; the United Empire Loyalists, many of whom settled in the Belleville district, helped to lay new foundations for the whole Dominion. "Gentlemen," said Mr. Hornsby, "what has happened before may well happen again. Those whom Europe is rejecting have it in them to help us build a new and more prosperous Canada."

Mr. Hornsby brought his address to a close by making a plea that a petition be prepared and sent to the Refugee Committee Headquarters in Toronto urging, that more refugees be admitted to Canada.

Club Receives Invitation

The business meeting of the club included an invitation from the newly formed club of Cobourg to attend their Charter Night banquet, January 5th, and it was reported by Kiwanian O. W. Duff, that train connections could be made, which would permit the Belleville Club to attend in force. The appreciation of the club for his splendid address was given by Kiwanian Herb Reid and President Bruce Lattimer informed Dr. Hornsby, that a petition was already in the hands of the secretary to be discussed at the next Board of Directors' meeting along the lines he so urgently solicited.

something of the picture together.

"This, of course, is not the real the connection between him and the Canadian commander. The unhappy situation was resumed, and reportedly in bitter form, when Montgomery came back to Britain after North Africa had been cleaned up.

"Details are necessarily unavailable here for publication, though they are known to some. Generally, the situation was that Montgomery wanted the 1st Division for Sicily to join his 8th Army. He was familiar with the Canadians and had a high regard for them. ...

"It has always been McNaughton's ambition to lead the Canadian troops into the field and as a unit. One remembers his "dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin" statement. When Montgomery asked for the 1st Division for Sicily, it seems that nasty words were uttered. Montgomery is reported to have used unkind phrases and McNaughton presumably made reply. ...

"A couple of months ago, General McNaughton visited headquarters in Algiers. He did not go to see his men in Italy. People can judge for themselves the reason, but reliable persons have said it was due to Montgomery's attitude to Gen. McNaughton. ..."

Germans Thrown Back in Disorder In Bosnia Sector

London, Dec. 29—(CP)—Hard-hitting German units have been thrown back in disorder for the second time in two days in the embattled Livno-Duvno area of Western Bosnia, the Yugoslav army of liberation headquarters announced today.

The Nazis, battling to take the strategic strongpoint of Glamoc, 15 miles north of Livno, attacked partisan defensive positions in waves, but all attempts to break through were repulsed, the Yugoslav bulletin, broadcast by the free Yugoslav radio, asserted.

Fifty miles to the south in Herzegovina, partisans ambushed a German supply train on the main Sarajevo-Mostar railway line, capturing large stores of war gear, destroying 20 freight cars and tying up enemy military traffic on the line.

In Eastern Bosnia reinforced German columns attacked units of the 5th Yugoslav division near Srevernica. The partisans held, then counter-attacked and annihilated a battalion of the 99th Regiment of the first German Alpine Division and captured large stocks of military equipment.

from the top of the German command was repeated by the Stockholm newspaper Social-Demokraten.

The newspaper declared that Hitler personally ordered the Scharnhorst to put to sea.

Decline Comment

Ottawa, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Naval Service Headquarters declined comment today as to whether the Royal Canadian Navy had any part in the sinking of three German destroyers and crippling of others in the Bay of Biscay, but Canadian ships were serving in those waters previously and may still be there.

The joint British Admiralty and British Air Ministry communiques, did not indicate whether Canadian ships had any part in the action.

It was understood here that there is a possibility Canadian ships might have been involved but the R.C.N. had nothing to say immediately.

MARINE INVADERS

The Australians in New Guinea captured Walingai, the enemy's barge and supply base on the coast of Huon peninsula, taking equipment which included artillery and supplies.

Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific headquarters reported that Solomon Islands air forces made 175 sorties Sunday, especially hammering Kieta, the principal enemy base on the east coast of Bougainville Island.

Heavy bombers dropped more than 50 tons of bombs on Wotje Islet in the Marshall Islands Sunday, in one of the heaviest raids yet made on Japanese bases in the archipelago.

INVASION STAFF

Ramsay, formerly second in command in the Mediterranean under Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, is 60, has been in the Royal Navy since 1898 and had been on naval missions around the world. He commanded H.M.S. Broke in the Dover patrol during the last war.

Trafford L. Leigh-Mallory has been head of fighter command of the R.A.F. He commanded the Air Force which covered the Dieppe raid in the summer of 1942. He is 56 years old.

Brilliant Tactician

Leigh-Mallory, 51, a brilliant aerial tactician, will direct the Allied Air Forces' tactical operation in support of ground forces. He is a specialist in air-land co-operation and has been head of Britain's school of army co-operation.

A heavy-set, full-faced man with a black moustache, who looks like a typical London "city" man, Leigh-Mallory is a veteran of the First Great War and has been in the R. A. F. ever since.

Admiral Ramsay is known in the Royal Navy as "dynamo" and was in charge of the landing operations in North Africa.

At the time of the Dunkirk operation he commanded British Naval forces at Dover and was knighted for his achievement in bringing the Tommies home. Former chief of staff of the British Home Fleet, he was placed on the retired list in 1938 after 40 years service and was recalled to active duty at the outbreak of the war.

HUGE DAMAGE BY RATS

Washington, Dec. 29 —(AP)— Rats caused $200,000,000 damage to city and farm property in the United States in 1943, the Fish and Wild Life Service discloses.

The Service said the excessive loss, far above the 1942 estimates, was due to high values of the farm and food products which were destroyed.

Unconfirmed Nazi Claim 2 Commando Raids Made on Sark Island

London, Dec. 29—(CP)—The Germans said today that two British commando assaults had been carried out within three days on Sark in the English Channel islands which lie athwart the possible path of the forthcoming invasion of the continent from the west.

The German account, broadcast by the News Agency D. N. B., followed a report by the German High Command Sunday of a combined British commando raid Christmas Eve in an apparent pre-invasion probing of defences on the Nazi-held French coast.

None of the reports was confirmed by any Allied source.

The broadcast said the Sark assaults "failed like all similar attempts of this kind." The Germans claimed Sunday to have wiped out the commando force raiding the channel coast.

"As the enemy approached the beaches several heavy detonations could be heard and the glow of fire observed, presumably due to the explosion of mines," D.N.B. declared.

"It could be assumed from this that the mines had done their work. A later checkup confirmed this. One British soldier was found dead. On the German side there was no need for the defences to go into action."

Canadians in Italy Learn With Regret Gen. McNaughton Ill

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Italy, Dec. 29 (CP Cable)—Troops of the Canadian 1st Division in Italy learned with surprise and regret that ill health had forced Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, who brought them to Britain just four years ago, to relinquish his command of the Canadian army overseas.

The men hold a deep affection and respect for the general under whom they served during the trying 3 1-2 years of waiting in Britain

Gen. McNaughton visited the troops in the Mediterranean area twice since they left Britain and on the second trip toured the area over which they fought so well in Sicily. He saw nearly every formation and spoke to thousands of men.

There was no surprise, however, at the announcement that Lt.-Gen H. D. G. Crerar commands the Canadian corps in the Mediterranean. Establishment of the corps under his command was common knowledge to most troops for several weeks but they kept the news strictly to themselves.

Gen. Crerar visited the Canadians a little more than a month ago with Col. J. L. Ralston when the Canadian Defence Minister toured the theatre. For security reasons, however, correspondents were not allowed to say that Crerar was a member of the minister's party.

Strike Settlement Growing Dimmer

Montreal, Dec. 29—(CP)—Hopes for a settlement of the nine-day strike of about 2,000 municipal white-collar employees grew dimmer today following the formal rejection last night by a majority of the strikers of a mediation proposal made to them Monday night by the Quebec Municipal Commission which controls the city's finances.

By a vote of 762 to 527 the white-collar employees striking for higher wages decided to remain on strike until their demands are fully met by the commission. It was their second vote in less than 24 hours. The second ballot was called for by the syndicate of municipal employees whose officials said they were not satisfied that the vote of the night before reflected the wish of the majority of those on strike.

In Monday night's vote, less than half of those on strike cast ballots and the results showed a 411-268 rejection of the mediation proposal.

Ballots cast in last night's vote was said to represent 67 per cent of the number of striking employees.

MAY TRANSFER COSTS

Toronto, Dec. 29 —(CP)— Provincial Treasurer Frost—acting education minister while Premier Drew is in Britain—last night told the Secondary School Teachers' Federation that half the cost of maintaining schools must be transferred from real estate to the provincial treasury. He said teachers should be more fairly treated, building and teaching facilities improved and larger school units established.

78TH DIVISION BRITISH ARMY'S DIVISION OF YEAR

Has No Equals in Feats of Arms During the Last 12 Months

SERVED IN TUNISIA

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Dec. 28 (CP Cable)—The 78th Infantry Division, principally from London and the home counties surrounding the Metropolitan area, is the British army's division of the year.

This formation has made a reputation during the last 12 months or more which has no equal in feats or arms achieved by any other British division in that time.

It fought doggedly through the Tunisian campaign and among its members were the heroes of Long Stop Hill. Several hundred Canadian officers and non-commissioned officers served with the division in that campaign on attachment from the Canadian army in England.

Joined Canadians in Sicily

The 78th joined in the Sicilian fighting with the Canadians at Centuripe and Aderno near Mount Etna. It established and held the Termoli bridgehead at the mouth of the Biferno river in Italy and later won the bridgehead over the Sangro river, through which the 8th Army punched north along the Adriatic coast.

In the last war the 51st Highland Division was the crack British formation—even rated so by the Germans with the Canadian corps given second place. In the German list today, the 78th is probably on top, considering the performance it has given.

When Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery said a few weeks ago that "British soldiers have risen to great heights," he was referring to the 78th and its Sangro river exploits. In addition to London and Home County troops, this division includes men from the Highlands, Lancashire and the Irish Regiments.

Crossed Sangro River

The Sangro battle probably was the most heroic in its comparatively short fighting history. Under appalling weather conditions, the 78th crossed the flooded Sangro near its mouth. The Germans made fierce attempts to drive them back. Gen. Montgomery signalled to them to "stand fast at all cost." The Tommies stood fast.

For three days, with little food reaching them and ammunition dwendling, these troops fought back from mud-filled trenches. On the west and bloody banks of the Sangro they added to the legend of the 78th which began in Tunisia and can only reach the right conclusion in Germany itself.

This was not the first river bridgehead rained by the division. It was the 78th which held off German counter-attacks by the 16th Panzer division around Termoli in October where they held firm until the Three Rivers tank regiment from a Canadian armored brigade, supported by the Irish brigade, came up to rout the enemy.

Shows Fighting Qualities

The Canadian 1st. Division got to know the magnificent 78th. in the closing stages of the Canadians' share in the Sicilian campaign. The Canadians were attacking from Agira towards Mount Etna to break the German line there and to guarantee rapid success Gen. Montgomery secretly brought the 78th. from North Africa and edged them in between the Canadians and the 51st. Highland Division, for a week the Canadians and the 78th. operated together. The fortress hill town Centuripe, called "Cherry Ripe" by the troops, was stormed and captured by the 78th. which later went through to Aderno and on to Bronte while the Canadians hit the Germans at the same time in the Simeto River valley.

That was one of the big victories in Sicily and it didn't cost many lives because of the skilful deployment of the two divisions.

The 78th. showed its fighting qualities first in Tunisia. One of its brigades was first into Tunisia in the Autumn of 1942 in the race to Tunis. That failed by the slimmest margin and a Winter-long campaign was waged by what was called "The 1st. Army." In truth it was waged principally by the 78th. Division, supported by the 6th. Armored Division.

There isn't a person who was with the 78th. in those days who hasn't boundless admiration for the troops of that formation.

They remember them in the Mateur Valley and at Long Stop Hill near Medjez El Bab. They recall the vivid stories around Bou Arada and Jebel Mansour and the final attack on Tunis.

The 78th. Division is an outfit the Germans think twice about these days.

ENTIRELY OUT OF DANGER

London, Dec. 29 —(CP)— A statement from 10 Downing St said last night that Prime Minister Churchill, stricken with pneumonia in the Middle East recently, "continues to make very satisfactory progress." The statement added that "it is not expected that any further bulletins will be issued"—an indication that the Prime Minister was entirely out of danger.

Roosevelt Favors Scrapping Term The 'New Deal'

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Dec. 29 — (AP) — President Roosevelt, having brushed aside as "picayune" a direct question whether he would run for a fourth term, was on record today as favoring an expanded economy for the United States and as against economic and military isolationism after the war.

He told his news conference yesterday he favored scrapping the term "New Deal" because, he said, "old doctor, new deal" has cured the United States of internal ills.

The patient is all right internally now, he said, but old doctor new deal had to call on his partner, an orthopedic surgeon known as "doctor win-the-war," to heal the external wounds of a bad accident suffered at Pearl Harbor when the United States entered the war.

The New York Herald-Tribune's Washington bureau chief, Bert Andrews, thereupon asked:—

"Does that all add up to a fourth term declaration?"

Laughter swept the President's oval office and the President, reddening, replied:—

"Oh now — we are not talking about things like that now. You are getting picayune. That's a grand word to use — another word beginning with a p—picayune. (He had used puerile and political before.) I know you won't mind me saying that, but I have to say something like that."

He said it seems pretty clear that the United States now must plan for, and help to bring about, an expanded economy which will result in more security, employment, recreation, education, health and housing for all its citizens so that the conditions of 1932 and the start of 1933 won't come back again.

Canadians in Ortona

Canadians in the British 8th Army have given undeniable proof of their courage, resourcefulness and reliance in the extended battles in the streets of the seaport of Ortona, Italy, where the Germans fought from house to house. A German communique on Tuesday declared that the Germans had evacuated the town which was in "ruins." The fall of the town to Canadians has been announced at Algiers officially and the 8th Army is now moving forward to Pescara.

The battle raged for long over a week and was marked by steady progress street by street. Against the resourcefulness and persistance of courage of the Canadians the Germans could not maintain the position long and according to the Berlin communique the Germans "evacuated" the "ruins" of Ortona.

The Germans had set determinedly to work to hold on to this port as long as they possibly could for it has importance in the German plan to delay as long as they can the advance of the Allied forces. The enemy fought with stubborn determination but the Canadians have fought them back step by step from street to street and house to house until the Nazis have been driven out.

The battle of Italy has been a stubborn one because of the nature of the territory which has necessitated a return to the older type of warfare, which has not been seen so much in this war, the war of close combat, where the enemy could use the ground advantages to delay progress.

Canadians in the 8th Army have here added laurels to that army and to the Canadian army overseas of which the corps in Italy forms a part and they have added glory to their native land by their fearless determination and success in driving out the enemy. This they have done in a manner which adds new honors to Canada's record. They have proven their prowess over the best of Hitler's soldiery.

The Queen's Thanks

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth has sent out a personal message to about 2,600 Canadian families which they will treasure as long as time lasts because it was a message expressive of the appreciation of the Queen for the manifestation of interest these families took in the children of Britain who had been evacuated out of their homes because of the enemy raids early in the war. The royal message is a gracious gesture and expression of one who has had deep on her heart the care of the children of the British Isles in the time of war.

The message tells these benefactors who extended hospitality to the boys and girls of Britain, "you have earned the true and lasting gratitude of those to whom you have given this hospitality and I send you my warmest and most grateful thanks."

To many parts of Canada this message has come, to city, town, village, hamlet and countryside. It serves to show how Canadians opened their homes and took in young British boys and girls. These have amply repaid the service that they have received for all appreciate what has been done for them and many have returned to Britain dressed in uniform when the time came when they could enlist and then serve to defend Britain and the Empire.

The homes that have entertained these evacuated boys and girls have done a service of the highest rank. They have been blessed in the kindliness of their deeds and a grateful Motherland thanks them through Her Majesty, herself the very expression of gratitude and kindliness.

Worry for War Criminals

Events happening in the lands of the United Nations must have a disconcerting effect upon the Nazis, especially on the leaders in the iniquities which have been brought upon the world by the foul brood of the Hitlerites. One event must have been stamped on their minds, the story of the trial and execution of four war criminals in Kharkov, three of them Germans who admitted atrocities carried out against the Russians at the orders of higher-ups in Germany and one a Russian who betrayed his countrymen. At the time of the executions a Moscow paper drew attention to this, that the guilty Germans at the top were included among the war criminals.

Hitler may try to stave off defeat by terrifying the Germans but he knows that Adolf Hitler can rightly be tried and found guilty of atrocities and likewise the rest of the Nazi leaders.

Besides the unsettlement and anxiety over the course of the war which they must see they are steadily losing, there is the realization that atrocities have been performed by the Germans with the purpose of terrorism and also in a spirit of vandalism and sadism so as to make the German people afraid of the enemy and to make them stay in the fight while Hitler, Goering, Himmler and such like surely know who will head the lists gathered by the United Nations of those who have made innocent people suffer.

Such bestiality and brutality of the Germans the world has never seen equalled. It has been a systematically organized program of torture.

Russia gave out the story of the four men who were condemned and hanged and it pointed directly back at Hitler and his aides. Even the former German Gestapo official pleaded extenuation on the ground that the orders had come from the Nazi authority.

That Nazi authority may well tremble.

Picking the Winner

(London News Chronicle)

How many tons of bombs will be dropped on Germany on a given day? How often will the sirens sound in a particular period? When will the Russians capture a stated township? What will be the first and last letters in a newspaper article?

These are some of the things that factory workers are organizing sweepstakes and betting on in the greatest boom of its kind in the war.

The craze has swept nearly every big factory in the country and every factory seems to have produced its own crop of novel ideas.

The ideas for the sweepstakes are changed almost every week. Novelty is always the keynote.

The one based on first and last letters in a newspaper appears to be one of the latest.

In this connection a letter was recently received by the News Chronicle containing a request for the leading article in Saturday's issue to begin and end with the letter "s." If so, the writer "would be £10 better off." It doesn't.

The tickets for this sweepstake were priced at 6d.

The craze has broken out apparently because people have never had so much money to spend and so little to buy.

Ceilings O.K. for Other Fellow

(Hamilton Spectator)

Speaker Rayburn, of the United States Congress, scores a selfish attitude toward the threat of inflation and points out that too many persons are disposed to say: "Ceilings for the other fellow, but not for me; price fixation for the other fellow, but not for me; uncontrolled inflation on what I have to sell, but controlled prices on what I am obliged to buy." Taking that position is just about the surest way to destroy the price control and open the sluice gates for inflation.

I would have inscribed on the curtains of your bed, and the walls of your chamber, "If you do not rise early, you can never make progress in anything. If you do not set apart your hours of reading, if you suffer yourself or any one else to break in upon them, your days will slip through your hands unprofitably and frivolous and really unenjoyed by yourself.—Lord Chatham.

JUST FOLKS

THE SILENT HEROES

We'll never hear them bragging who for us have borne the most.
The boys who've been in battle and come home don't care to boast.
We have to drag it from them, bit by bit and word for word.
"Other fellows did the dying!" is the phrase that's oftenest heard.

Walk the sanitarium hallways where the wounded lie in bed
And notice just how little of their glorious deeds is said.
It is never: "Hear what I did?" That they'd keep forever hid.
All they seem to want to tell us is what the other fellows did.

We're the ones who do the boasting, we,
from peril miles away.
We, with little more to fret us than the taxes we must pay,
We go 'round ourselves extolling, when the blinded and the lamed
Say they merely did their duty—and they make us all ashamed.

Says Netherlands Is Prepared To Collaborate After War Only If No Large-Scale Disarmament

London, Dec. 29 — (CP) — E. N. Van Kleffens, Netherlands foreign minister, said Tuesday that his country is prepared to collaborate with Britain after the war only if Britain and the British Empire showed "no intention once mor of going the way towards large-scale disarmament."

"This implies in any case that we can not tie ourselves once and for all," he added.

Van Kleffens spoke on Radio Orange from London in reply to a recent speech by Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa, suggesting that Britain make plans for close association with Western European nations after the war so as not to be weak in comparison with the United States and the Soviet Union.

"Enemy propaganda," Van Kleffens continued, "is trying to make out we have been asked to merge the Netherlands into the British Empire. We have been asked nothing of the sort and if we were asked anything it certainly would not be to merge ourselves into the British Empire.

"But although any such subordination or absorption is unthinkable, collaboration is far from being excluded."

Van Kleffens looked forward to a system of co-operation in which there would be "a strong formation in the west, with America, Canada and the other British Dominions as an arsenal and a vast reservoir of power, with England as a base, especially for air power, and with the West European mainland...as a bridgehead."

He said such a system "would indeed compel us (the Netherlands) to rely on the Western powers, but conversely they would also need us."

The speech by Field Marshal Smuts to which he was replying was delivered to the Empire Parliamentary Association in London Nov. 25.

Dr. Van Kleffens declares that "this formidable Western bloc would find its eastern counterpart in Russia."

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

". . . we must fight on as fought the pioneers of the early days in Canada, the strong, stern men who kept in sight their goal of Canada's best interests against all difficulties and obstacles. Let our motto be the same as theirs—'Fortitude in Distress.' There are breakers ahead, but we shall reach the shore if we fight on."—Sir Wilfred Laurier, 1917.

Old Man Winter created many of the problems and obstacles encountered by the pioneers of a century ago. They found that when the ice began to break up in the spring, large streams like the St. Lawrence River became more difficult to cross. The more cautious of the colonists waited for the "all clear." But those who loved adventure would slide their canoe into the water and row to the nearest ice floe and on and on until the opposite bank was reached.

Ice-breaking ships were then unknown. Today, in the early spring, they ply up and down the rivers to make the navigation season open earlier. One of the most successful types of ice-breakers was put to work in 1899. Her secret was that she did not break the ice by main force. Under her bow was a screw that forced the water up and this lifted the ice and cracked it. The strong steel bow then cast it aside as drift ice was churned up a broad channel through which other vessels might safely pass.

"We'll have to stay over." The settlers used to say this grimly, with worried faces, when they entered a town after a long trek and saw that a big snowstorm was on the way. They knew that the road home would soon be impassable, that they would have to spend hard-earned sheckels on board and lodging and on feed for their ox-teams. Chances were the expenses would eat up all the cash on hand from selling precious loads. Sometimes, in fact men were forced to send home for money to pay their bills. Yet rates charged were far from extravagant. Supper and bed at a tavern cost only about 50c—this including hay for the traveller's team. But what accommodation it was! Usually there were three beds in each room and two men to a bed. On rising in the morning each traveller took his turn at the pump, sluicing himself clean in the icy water.

LONDON LETTER

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 29. (CP)—Nobody probably foresaw a production boom as a result of Britain's switch next April to pay-as-you-go taxation, but that is just what's happening with happy results for the country's war effort.

It works this way:

British wage-earners of less than £500 ($2,670) a year have just finished paying tax on income earned up to last April. Pay-as-you-go taxation will begin next April 5 and it's been decided, to simplify matters, not to tax income above the basic wage-earnings to next April.

It amounts to the small wage-earner being able to keep all the extra money he can make before April 5, and he (or she) isn't letting any time go to waste. An overtime boom has resulted, netting extra earnings of £150,000 a week in the country's 12 most important war factories.

These factories' workers now are averaging 61 1-2 hours a week against 52 a month ago and one plant manager described his plant as working at "Dunkirk pressure".

Besides dropping a lot of extra money into the pay envelopes of the workers, it means guns for the soldiers and more planes for the fliers when the Allies move into western Europe. It seems as if pay-as-you-go couldn't have been introduced at a better time for Britain.

If you folks at home had any trouble getting turkey for Christmas, think what it was like in Britain where, the Ministry of Food estimated, there were 1,600,000 birds available for the 45,000,000 or so people here. Somebody had to do without.

It was not the forces, for the government set itself to seeing that every member of the army and air force in Britain and members of the navy in home waters had turkey Christmas Day.

For a time is appeared that American Thanksgiving— Nov. 25 — would make things even more difficult than they promised to be for the turkey hunters. American soldiers began buying up what turkeys were available for their Thanksgiving Day dinners.

United States Army headquarters took note of the situation with an order telling the soldiers their quartermasters had been amply provided with turkey for Nov. 25 and adding: Remember every turkey you buy means that an English family will go without one for their Christmas dinner".

Off and on somebody starts a campaign to clean up the jokes being told in British variety shows and the latest to have a go at the job is the Theatre National Committee, composed of the majority of British Theatre managers.

The committee proposes to set up a licensing board and have every variety artist approved by the Board. The artist's licence would be suspended or withdrawn if offence were given.

Horace Collins, committee secretary, says the offensive material is being used because the performers "think it amuses the troops". They may get a few laughs, he adds, "but the taste of the army is very much higher than in the last war".

POLYGAMY IN UTAH

Recently a man in Utah was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for violating the Mann Act.

The essence of the case was that the man, with the consent of his wife who was also convicted to two years in a woman's reformatory, had been "married" to a fifteen-year-old girl in a special ceremony peculiar to the religious cult of which the family were members.

At the trial it developed that the family are members of a sect that calls itself "Fundamentalists."

This sect claims loyalty to the doctrines of the "original" Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and refuses to recognize certain fundamental changes in Mormonism, "including the abandonment of plural marriages."

It was on this issue that the Mormons originally split into two sects.

Joseph Smith founded the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1830 at Fayette, New York.

After the founder was killed in 1844 by a mob at Carthage, Illinois, many of his followers rejected the leadership of Brigham Young, and in 1852 they founded the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

In most points of doctrine the two Mormon sects agree, but the reorganized church repudiates the alleged revelation of plural marriages and believes "in marriage as instituted and ordained of God, whose law provides for but one companion of wedlock, for either man or woman, except in case of death, or when marriage contract is broken by transgression."

The reorganized Mormon church denied Brigham Young's contention that Smith while at Navuoo, Ill., in 1834 received and communicated to some of his followers a revelation proclaiming the doctrine of plural marriages.

The Utah Mormons were finally compelled to abandon the practice of polygamy after the U. S. Supreme Court in 1890 upheld the constitutionality of various anti-polygamy acts of Congress.

President Wilford Woodruff of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints then announced his intention of complying with the federal laws in respect to plural marriages and advised other members of the church to do likewise.

A short time later the church officially sustained this position and thus withdrew its sanction from any plural marriages solemnized after that date.

BURRS

Pupils of Burr And Bowerman Schools Celebrate

Burrs.—The L.O.L. Hall at Allisonville on December 20, attracted a large crowd of interested parents and friends when Miss Marion Mikel and pupils of the Bowerman and Burr schools presented an excellent Christmas Concert. Each number was so well given that it was difficult to choose which was best. The opening number was choral with the whole school taking part. Each pupil was dressed in a choir gown and cap with a senior boy in the garb of a clergyman standing in the centre of the group behind a candlelit altar and reading from the Bible the story of the First Christmas. Several Christmas carols were sung before and after the reading with Miss Mikel conducting the choir and her sister, Miss B. Mikel playing piano accompaniment. This was most impressive and the voices were well trained. "A Pig Pantomime" with sixteen pupils all in costume, two dialogues, "Advice to the Lovelorn", and "A Concert Party", a motion song with dainty costumes, "Alice Blue Gown", and a comedy portrayal of "Jingle Bells", displayed much talent on the part of the pupils and a great deal of preparation and careful training on the part of their teacher. The highlight of the evening to the children was the gift laden Christmas tree and the welcome appearance of Santa Claus who found candies, oranges and gifts for each child. With this picture of happy children's faces so concluded a splendid evening's entertainment. Mr. R. Ferguson acted as chairman and Mr. George Wood attended to the admission which proceeds were $28.25. Part of this will be used for buying books for the school with the remainder going to the local Red Cross unit.

Fire Destroys Home.

Fire destroyed the home on the farm of Mr. E. Williams of Big Island on the 4th Con. of Ameliasburg on Friday afternoon. The fire is believed to have started from the stovepipes upstairs or the chimney as the upper part of the house was so far ablaze before help could arrive that little could be saved. Nearly everything downstairs was taken out. Mr. Simeon Pringle and family were living in the house at the time of the fire and it seemed tragic that they should be burned out on Christmas eve. Mountain View Airport fire equipment came but were too late to save the house.

Christmas Service At St. Michael's

A large congregation which filled St. Michael's church to capacity was present at the Solemn High Mass at midnight on Christmas Eve. The usual procession of the children to the crib took place during which they sang Christmas carols. The celebrant was Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, assisted by Rev. T. J. Lally S. J., Deacon, Rev. A. L. O'Donnell sub-deacon. The sermon was preached by Rev. T. J. Lally S. J. of the Martyrs' Shrine, Midland, who delivered an eloquent discourse on the significance of the Nativity of Our Divine Lord.

"In the Gospel narrative of the Nativity, our Lord's birth in a stable is accounted for by the words 'Because there was no room for them in the inn," said Father Lally. "These words seem typical of the entire life of Christ—they emphasize this loneliness, this lack of friends. What friends did He have to provide assistance when carried to Egypt in order to escape the sword of Herod? What was the attitude of Christ's townsmen towards Him? It is summed up in the words "Is this not the carpenter's son?" On our Lord's only recorded visit to His home town of Nazareth, the people threatened to drive Him over a cliff. Throughout his life, Christ went about healing the halt and the blind. How many of those who received His favors were present on Calvary? Our Lord complained of only one thing in His life—this loneliness of which we speak. This plaint he voiced in the words addressed to the leper whom He cured: "Were not ten made clean? Where are the nine? It is true that during the Passion Simon of Cyrene assisted in carrying the Cross—but he was forced to do so.

The centurian on Calvary exclaimed, "Truly this was the Son of God"—but only after Christ's side was pierced by a lance. The only kind words spoken to Christ during His Passion were those of the Good Thief: "This man hath done no wrong."

Alexander the Great is not mentioned today; Simon of Cyrene remains in the background; but the Good Thief is often spoken of as a Child of the Church. Today no man would die for Napoleon. Christ is dead two thousand years, but people still love Him and would die for Him.

"The loneliness of Christ was not incompatible with peace," said the speaker. "So should it be with us. Though there may be sorrows and loneliness this Christmas, there can also be peace—the peace of Christ which the world cannot give. This peace is not found in worldly aggrandisement, in social position, it is the peace which the Shepherds found in those humble surroundings on Christmas night".

Music at Midnight Mass

Mass by Vitto Carnevelli was rendered by the choir. "O Holy Night" was sung by Ed. Brown. During the Offertory Mrs. Gerald Clapp sang the "O Salutaris". During the communion the following solos were given. Lester Shiels sang "Silent Night." "Babe of Bethlehem" was sung by Anna Lafferty and Harold Barrett sang "Night of Nights". Organ selections were rendered by Miss Dorothy Grant.

At the conclusion of the Mass, Monsignor Nicholson in expressing his good wishes spoke of the golden vision of the Holy Family, the source of inspiration and comfort to so many family circles during the stress of war. He also extended a welcome to Father Lally, a former native of the Parish.

On Christmas Day the Masses were at 7, 8:30 and 10:30 when the Children's choir sang the High Mass; the "GLORIA" and the "CREDO" were from the Missa De Angelis, the Kyrie, the Sanctus and the Agnus Dei from the Missa Cum Jubilo. The soloists were Robert Flurey, Robert Lucy and Carol Kiser.

Twenty-One Aspirants Out For First Junior Practice, Wealth of Material Is Noted

Two or Three Trying Out for Every Position on the Squad

HOLWAY IN CHARGE

Twenty-one keen and eager young Canadians took to the ice at the Hume Arena Tuesday evening seeking covetted positions on the 1944 edition of Belleville's junior O.H.A. squad.

Under the watchful eye of Coach "Toots" Holway, former N.H.L. hockey player of past years who has tutored youngsters in Belleville for the past five or six years, the youthful aspirants had a handful of railbirds nodding their heads in approval as the score of lads showed practically mid-season form. For a full hour, Coach Holway let his charges scrimmage, alternating in two opposing squads.

In the nets at opposite ends of the playing surface were Morris Rollins, who tended goal for the Belleville juniors last season and Dick Fitzpatrick, who booted the old rubber out for the group-champion Trenton kids in 1943. This pair alone gives the local contingent two experienced netminders, as Fitzpatrick is now residing in Belleville.

Right Defence Open

The only position for which there doesn't seem to be much competition as yet is that of right defence, where Allen Kelleher, 15-year-old graduate from St. Michael's Academy, was the only aspirant. However, another evening may see competition for this position for the elongated Kelleher, who skated strongly last night.

At left defence, however, five turned out to try for two positions. There was Colin LaVallee, who comes from Tweed, recommended by Bill Dickie, who tended goal for Les Canadiens in the N.H.L. and last year was with the Reliance seniors. Also at this position were Rance Bush, a strong 18-year-old lad, Mac "Red" Carson, the rushing rear-guardsman, Doug Green, son of Bill Green, who starred in Belleville hockey circles over twenty years ago and Rick Rosette from last year's Reliance juniors.

Hard to Pick Centreman

The biggest problem confronting Coach Holway will be for the centre ice slot with a galaxy of skating juniors showed up. There was Roddy Lyall, Billie Holway and Jerry Moher of last year's Belleville juniors as Johnny Semark and George Reeves from the 1943 Reliance kids, all of whom showed promise in play-making.

At left wing five more were battling it out in Don Barrett, Carl Goodyear, Doug Day, Al Meagher and Wally Sole, while along the right boards was seen Bernie Meagher, Jack Wardaugh, Carl "Hiker" Ostrom and Bill Greatrix.

"They are a keen bunch of kids and we feel Belleville will be proud of its junior O.H.A. team in 1944. There were only 21 out last night, but we expect some more new faces tonight when the competition will be keener and it's then we will be able to select the cream of the crop," stated Coach Holway today as he announced there would be junior hockey practice at the Hume Arena each evening this week from seven until eight o'clock.

All Positions Open

"All positions are open and no boy should feel hurt if he is not selected to start in our opening game next week, as we can only dress 12 players, including an extra goaltender. However, with so many of the boys 16 and 17 years of age there should be sufficient material left to organize one of the best juvenile teams we've had in years," pointed out Coach Holway as he revealed that a Belleville juvenile hockey team would also be organized next month.

COWLEY BUILDS HERB CAIN INTO SURE-FIRE SNIPER

Moves Into Second Place Tie for Scoring Honors Behind Cowley

BRUINS BEAT WINGS

By The Canadian Press

If Herb Cain captures the National Hockey League's scoring crown this season, he'll almost literally be biting the hand that feeds him.

Seldom a sensational scorer in his 10-year professional career, the former Newmarket, Ont., athlete is being built into a sure-fire sniper by past master Bill Cowley. And Cowley is the player Cain must beat for scoring honors.

Cain moved into a second-place tie in the scoring statistics last night, firing the decisive goal as Boston Bruins defeated Detroit Red Wings 5-2 for their first victory of the season over the club which trimmed them four straight times in the 1942-43 Stanley Cup play-offs.

Cain's counter consolidated his position as leading goal-producer with 21 scores for an average of one a game, but Cowley furnished the assist, as usual, and took a hand in two other Boston goals. The dividends he accumulated left him eight points in front of Cain and Bill Mosienko of Chicago Black Hawks.

As a sell-out crowd of 13,500 watched the home team remain undefeated in 10 home games, Bruins entered the final 20 minutes down 2-1, then pushed four pucks past Jimmy Franks for a triumph which lifted them into undisputed possession of second place, two points ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Carl Liscombe opened the scoring for Detroit unassisted at 18:21 of the first period. Buzz Boll scored Boston's 100th goal of the campaign early in the second period to tie it up, but Don Grosso made it 2-1 for Detroit before the second period ended. Norm Calladine, Cain, Cowley and Don Gallinger were Boston marksmen in the final.

Cleveland Owner Likes Many Cooks

Cleveland, Dec. 29—(CP)—President Al Sutphin of Cleveland's Barons doesn't believe too many Cooks can spoil a hockey team, so he added Fred (Bun) Cook to a club that already included brothers Bill as coach and—before his enlistment in the coast guard—Alex as a veteran centre.

Bun succeeded his older brother as the Barons' pilot and led them to first place in the western division while Bill became the new general manager, concentrating on scouting and farm operations. The reunion ended a six-season American hockey league rivalry during which Bun directed the Providence Reds and Bill guided the Barons. For four years, 1937 through 1941, they monopolized the league title, each winning twice.

Bun broke into big time hockey with Bill's team, the Soo Greyhounds, in the early 1920's. The Cooks went to the New York Rangers in 1926, and with Frank Boucher at centre, made up one of the greatest lines in history getting 1,105 points in 553 games.

"We scored a lot of goals," Bun recalls, "but for the first four months we had a big advantage. We had just come from western Canada, where we had played in a league which allowed forward passing. The National League approved it just when we came up, so until the other fellows got used to the thing we simply left them standing still."

The brothers played against each other only a few times—the year Bun transferred from the Rangers to Boston.

CAHA Offered Halifax Navy Arena for Allan Cup Playoffs

By The Canadian Press

An offer of the Navy League of Canada to place its arena building at Halifax at the disposal of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for Allan Cup playoffs next spring was transmitted to the C.A.H.A. midwinter meeting in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, last night. The league, in its wired offer to President J. Elliott Hudson of the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association at the Toronto meeting, stipulated all surplus receipts, after payment of chargeable expenses, would be turned over to the benevolent funds of the armed forces. There would be no charge for rink rental.

President Frank Sargent of the C.A.H.A. stated the offer had been received but had no immediate comment because the proposal would be dealt with at the Association sessions today. The rink at Halifax might be available for the Quebec-Maritimes playdowns for the Allan Cup. Last night, the C.A.H.A. officials were busy with schedule arrangements for the districts across Canada in both Allan and Memorial Cup series and playdown dates would be drawn up before the close of the meeting late today, the Association president stated.

Bobby Veach, 55, former outfielder of the Detroit Tigers in the Ty Cobb era, was making satisfactory progress yesterday in a Detroit hospital following an operation. Veach was credited with the discovery of Charlie Gehringer, noted major league second baseman.

Leading scorer of the American Hockey League, Wally Kilrea, 34, of the Hershey Bears, yesterday received notice to report for Army induction Jan. 6 at Harrisburg, Pa. Kilrea, who hails from Ottawa, Ont., is married and has a 10-year-old son.

Catcher Bob Swift, recently acquired by Detroit Tigers from Philadelphia Athletics, was yesterday classified 4-F by the Draft Board at Salina, Kans., because of a stomach ailment.

Two rugged performers, Jake Lamotta and Georgia Kochan, will meet in a 10-round middleweight feature at Madison Square Garden tonight. Kochan goes to the ring after having knocked out seven opponents during the year and has suffered only one defeat.

President W. G. Bramham of the National Association of Baseball Leagues announced yesterday at Durham, N.C., he had appointed a committee of the minor loops to deal with the post-war program for baseball, the chairman to be President George Trautman of the American Association.

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP)—Second best playmaker in the National Hockey League today, judging from the scoring statistics, is not a centre but a right-winger, Lorne Carr of Toronto Leafs. Boston Bill Cowley is in his customary position at the top of the assists department but Carr is in second place. Lorne has 23 assists so far with less than half the season gone and at that pace should better Cowley's record of 45 assists in one season. Barring accidents, of course, Cowley himself should pass the record.

Passing Review:

Last members of the old New York Ranger tribe, Bryan Hextall and Ott Heller are lonely for familiar faces. Rangers' playing personnel changes so rapidly these days that Hextall stood in the dressing room the other night and sighed:—"Every time I come in this room there is a new face looking up into mine. I do not know half the guys on the club by name or by sight on or off the ice."

Comment:

The R.C.A.F. order withdrawing air force teams from Allan Cup hockey because of alleged abuses of player policy drew this comment from Eddie Armstrong of the Winnipeg Free Press: "We are satisfied that the reasons which impelled or compelled the Air Minister to take a firm stand actually on the whole do not hold for this area. ... We know the personnel of all the teams and we know them intimately. Some have category reasons—others fall short in educational requirements in so far as air crew exams are concerned."

NORMIE SMITH, OWNED BY BRUINS, GIVEN TO WINGS

Jolly Jack Adams Forgets Deal He Made With Ross in 1938

HE WON'T COLLECT

By BILL KING
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Boston, Dec. 29—(AP) — Highly skilled goal-tenders in professional hockey are rated much higher than 20-game pitchers in baseball but jolly Jack Adams, manager of Detroit's Stanley Cup championship Red Wings, has been presented with such an artist as a New Year's gift by the Boston Bruins management.

He is Normie Smith, the veteran goalie now performing for Adams in his team's home games after being out of action for five seasons. When asked to put a price on Smith, Adams said, "$10,000." But that was before the Bruins' guileful Art Ross stunned him by claiming ownership of Smith.

"How much do you think Smith is worth?" asked Ross as he cast his snare. "I'd give, rather I'd ask $10,000 for him," the unsuspecting Adams replied.

"You were right the first time, for you'd have to 'give.' We happen to own Smith," chuckled Ross as he pulled his trap.

Adams pondered over that, apparently suspecting that Ross was attempting another of his famed practical jokes. Then, as Ruddy Jack appeared on the verge of apoplexy, he gasped, "You're right. You do."

Then Adams recalled that Smith was promised to the Boston Club back in 1938 when he paid Ross $10,000 for Tiny Thompson, then hockey's outstanding goalie. Smith was due to go to the Providence American Hockey League Club as a replacement for fabulous Frankie Brimsek but he refused to report.

"I had forgotten all about that deal when I engaged Smith this season, for I hadn't seen him on any club's reserve list," Adams confessed.

"Well stop worrying, Jack," Ross advised. "The Boston Bruins take great pleasure in presenting Smith to your club as a New Year's gift. I realize he never would play for any other club."

COAST LEAGUE MAY RENOUNCE ALL ASPIRATIONS

Will Not Play in Allan Cup Playdowns to Keep R.C.A.F. Team In

TO HOLD MEETING

Victoria, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Leo Attwell, manager of the Victoria Machinery Depot hockey club, said today he was agreeable to a proposal of Jack Ryan, president of the six-team Pacific Coast Senior Hockey League, that in order to keep Sea Island R.C.A.F. Seahawks in the league all clubs should renounce any Allan Cup playoff aspirations.

Mr. Attwell said he understood a conference would be held in Ottawa Jan. 4 between Air Force authorities and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association heads in connection with the recent Ottawa order withdrawing all Air Force teams in Canada from leagues competing for the Allan Cup.

Ryan said last night at Vancouver teams in the coast circuit are being asked whether they will agree to renounce any Allan Cup aspirations.

He said Nanaimo Army Commanders and Vancouver St. Regis have notified the league executive they would be willing to forego any chance of entering competition for the Canadian senior championship. Three clubs have not replied.

Asked whether the move was taken so that Seahawks, who would be barred after Jan. 6 from any league which would send its winner into the cup play-offs under an R.C.A.F. headquarters ruling, could continue playing, Ryan said "Naturally the R.C.A.F. would be in favor" of the proposed set-up.

CANADA'S 1943 SPORTS PROGRAM MUCH CURTAILED

Some Major Spectator Sports, Especially Senior Hockey, Affected by War

RACING THRIVES

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Effect of the war on Canadian sport was in itself the Dominion's biggest sport story of the year. Major sports were curtailed considerably but crowds flocked to remaining events and, with the armed services leading the way, more Canadians participated in sport than ever before.

Greatest curtailment occurred in senior hockey with all R. C. A. F. and many army teams withdrawn from national competition. But other important events cancelled during the year were the Macdonald's Brier championship, the Canadian Open golf tournament and the national senior figure skating competition.

All professional baseball leagues except the International withdrew from Canada. The Western International, Northern, Pony and Canadian-American circuits either folded or withdrew their Canadian teams.

The International league thrived. Toronto Maple Leafs won the pennant for the first time since 1926 but lost to Syracuse Chiefs in the Governor's Cup play-offs. Total league attendance was about average but Montreal's fourth-place Royals drew the top crowds, totalling 206,507, while Toronto was second with 185,456.

An interesting baseball development was the announcement that the Canadian sandlot tournament, begun in Ontario in 1942, would be expanded next season to make it a truly national championship event with representatives to be invited from all Canadian districts. London, Ont., Army team won the 1943 sandlot title in a tournament at which Quebec and the Maritimes were represented.

Increase in Betting

Horse racing enjoyed a big year and pari-mutuel betting increased over last year in every province where it is permitted. Total betting in the 283 days of racing was $33,146,013, heaviest since 1931. Twenty-two associations held 32 race meetings and prize money totalled $1,278,550, an increase of $117,260 over 1942.

Feature of the racing year was the Ontario Jockey Club's decision, starting in 1944, to accept horses bred anywhere in Canada for the King's Plate, run each spring in Toronto. Previously only Ontario-breds were eligible for the 84-year-old classic captured this year by Charlie Hampstead's Paolita, a 38-1 shot and first filly to win since Sally Fuller took the Plate for Seagram Stables in 1935.

Horse of the year, however, was Shepperton, four-year-old chestnut owned by Fred Schelke of Gormley, Ont. Shepperton carried terrific weights on good and bad tracks over varied distances to clean up the eastern tracks and run his total winnings for two years of racing to nearly $25,000. In the two years, Shepperton was first in 15 of 30 starts and wound up by taking the $3,000 added Canadian championship handicap at Toronto.

Men's and women's Canadian basketball titles went to British Columbia in series played at Vancouver. Victoria R. C. A. F. beat Windsor, Ont., Patricks three straight games in the men's final as LAC. Norm Baker fired 72 of Victoria's 152 points. Vancouver Hedlunds retained the women's title in three straight games with Winnipeg Altomahs. There were no eastern women's challengers.

Mann Cup to Coast

New Westminster Salmonbellies, playing on their home floor, dethroned Mimico-Brampton Combines as Mann Cup lacrosse champions.

Hamilton Wildcats, coached by the veteran Brian Timmis, won the Canadian football title by defeating Winnipeg's previously unbeaten R. C. A. F. Bombers 23-14 before 17,000 fans at Toronto Varsity Stadium.

Boxing drew considerable interest during the year. Jackie Callura, 26, of Hamilton, Ont., won the National Boxing Association's version of the world featherweight title by beating Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson at Providence, R. I., in January, but lost the crown to Phil Terranova, New York, at New Orleans in August.

Pte. Johnny Greco, Montreal, established himself as a contender for the world lightweight title by trimming Cleo Shans in two New York fights, then beating Terry Young of New York in a bout staged by the Canadian Army at Montreal. Greco was matched to fight Champion Bob Montgomery in New York June 25 but the army answered newspaper criticism by refusing Greco permission for further fights on grounds his army training would suffer.

Canadian swimming championships were held in Winnipeg in September but there was no change in the previous year's decisions which cancelled for the duration national competitions in soccer, tennis, badminton, rifle shooting and amateur golf.

LAMB PRICES SET

Ottawa, Dec. 29 (CP)—The Prices Board last night announced that a new basis for control of retail prices for lamb was established in an order effective Jan. 3. The order fixes maximum retail prices for 16 cuts of lamb in three classifications—winter-fed, spring and frozen—effective from Jan. 9 to June 30. A year-round ceiling will be established under an order to be issued next July 1, the Board also announced.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

(Still Individuals)

A friend of ours in the Defence-Housing Registry at Washington is pretty busy these days trying to find rooms for the hundreds of new Government employees arriving daily.

Recently this inspector, looking over a proposed property, asked the landlady, "How many share the bath?"

"Well," admitted the prospective recipient of Government bounty, "things are a mite crowded—but we still take our baths separately."

(21 try out.)

Although there was little if any pre-practice notice announced, 21 keen and eager kids turned out to the initial practice of the Belleville juniors last night following which Coach Holway announced there would be junior practice every night this week at seven o'clock. "After all we play our first game next week against Trenton and Les Farrell's kids have been working out for a full week," explained "Toots."

The management of the juniors was quite pleased with the response, but expect still more ambitious kids out tonight. One name in particular will bring back memories, that of Doug Green, son of Bill Green who starred in local hockey circles over 20 years ago. Although Bill started as a forward and then reverted to the defence, young Dougie is starting where his dad left off, on the defence. Bill Dickey, former Reliance and Les Canadien goalie, recommended Colin LaVallee, former Tweed defenceman now attending B.C.I. war emergency classes. Another local junior to show improvement this year was Wally Soule. However, the kids actually were not in condition, but a few more practices will remedy this situation.

(Cast their shadows.)

A hockey situation has arisen in Peterborough that is most deplorable. Actually it shouldn't happen to any red-blooded Canadian boy. The situation there will be no hockey of any sort for the teen aged kids of the Liftlock City in 1944.

There is even a note of warning for places like Belleville in the article penned by Scribe Fred Craig regarding Peterborough's situation, that reads as follows: "Everywhere the writer of this column has been recently he has been besieged by youngsters anxious to play organized hockey who wanted to know what the chances were for action this winter. Unfortunately there was nothing in the way of hope that we could hold out. Apparently no one but the boys themselves is interested in the question of whether or not there is to be any hockey. So far as we know there has been nothing done to organize minor loops and the result will probably be that outside of the C.G.E. Shop League there will be little in the way of league hockey this winter. Calls for teams to enter a senior City League have failed to produce more than three clubs and so far as the minors are concerned there is no activity. The tragedy is that these youngsters who are clamoring for a chance to play organized hockey will be in the armed services in a year or two. In the failure of their home community to supply the opportunity these lads are being deprived of their birth right. They will pass on into the service of their country without ever having their fling as sport-loving Canadians. It is a deplorable situation."

(Maybe they're right.)

According to James P. Fitzgerald, sports editor of the Telegram a meeting has been called of all Toronto sport bodies for tonight to discuss the Physical Fitness Act and its program. Says the veteran sports commentator: "Perhaps it may be new to most of the sports world that there is what is known as "The Physical Fitness Act." This is a federal law passed at Ottawa last fall, presumably prompted by the fact that something like fifty per cent of our young citizens can't pass the doctor for anything much. Whatever the reason there is such an Act and through it the government undertakes to aid the general provinces toward the promotion of physical fitness. This aid is to be financial and the sum total of the fund is $225,000. It may also be gathered that there will be a whole lot of advice and instructions and interference tossed in with any grants or gifts. Anyway, the plan seems to be that each province set up some sort of office or commission to direct things, especially the dispersal of the money and indicate in what direction and to what amounts this is to be done. The Act suggests that existing sports organizations be made use of for this upbuilding of the youth of the nation and incidentally to be the recipients of at least some money with which to do it. The first step for any province to take to show its willingness to co-operate is to have its government tell the powers-that-be at Ottawa so. Three western provinces already have done so, but then when it comes to matters of being financed the west never was too bashful or backward."

(No joy here.)

The joys of Christmas were ruined for three Kingston families, two of whom resided in Belleville in years past, reports Scribe Bill Walsh.

First Hal Buck, well known Kingston ball and cage player, is fighting for his life in hospital against a serious attack of pneumonia. Hal Buck played baseball in Belleville a decade ago and was known from one end of the province to the other for his aggressiveness. Local fans will be pulling for the likeable Hal during his illness.

Then there is Lorne Cook, who headed city hockey leagues both here and more lately in Kingston. His brother, Ford, died in St. Catharines Christmas Eve. Local sympathy is extended.

The third was the report of Art Cook being seriously injured in a Kingston motor crash while returning from midnight mass on Saturday morning. He is a relative of Bill and Bun Cook.

JUNIOR LEADERS HOLD POSITIONS

St. Kitts, Galt, and Port Colborne Register Victories

By The Canadian Press

Each of the first three clubs in group two of the Junior Ontario Hockey Association moved up two points last night as the result of victories over lowly teams, hence there was no relative change in the standing.

St. Catharines Falcons retained leadership with a 4-2 win over Toronto Marlboros at St. Catharines, to take their ninth game of the season, while at Galt the Kists registered their eighth win by humbling the cellar-dwellers, Toronto Young Rangers 5-1. At Brantford Port Colborne disposed of the Lions 5-3 to stay in third place with six wins.

Kaiser, the former Preston hockeyist, set the scoring pace for Port Colborne by beating goalie Crome three times, Pitts and Piper getting the other Port Colborne goals. For Brantford, the scorers were Jeffreys, McGuire and Davis.

In the fixture at Galt, winger Podolski of Kists got the only counter of the first two periods and two more in the third. Sullivan and Forbes had one apiece and Walsh was the lone goal-getter for Toronto.

Five St. Catharines snipers hit the net for one each against Marlboros, these being P. Long, Thorpe, Peterson, Phillips and Nicowski while the Dukes' scorers were Gaborie and Harding.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press.)

New York—Allie Stolz, 133 1-4, Newark, outpointed Bobby McIntyre 135 3-4, Detroit (8).

Jersey City—Sgt. Tommy Roman, 149, Bayonne, N.J., outpointed Mickey Makar, 152, Bayonne (8).

New Bedford, Mass.—Whitey Shaw, 143 1-2, Taunton, Mass., knocked out Jimmy Edwards, 138, Newark (2).

What's Doing in Sport

Port of Spain, Trinidad — (CP Cable)—For the first time in the history of the Governor's Cup a West Indies bred horse captured the 1½-mile event when Rastaffare scored a two-length victory over the favorite, Sugar Lady, winner in 1941.

New York — (AP) — Southpaw Howie Pollet of the pennant-winning Cardinals led the National League last season with a low 1.75 figure in earned-run average, according to official statistics issued here last night. Two other Cards were second and third, Max Lanier with 1.90 and Mort Cooper with a 2.30 average.

Oakland, Calif. — (AP) — Dolph Camilli, formerly of the New York Giants, Brooklyn, Phillies and Cubs, has been signed as manager of the Oakland team in the Pacific Coast League for two years, it was officially announced last night.

Brooklyn—(AP)—Bobby McIntyre of Detroit lost a one-sided eight-round decision last night to Allie Stolz, Newark, N. J. lightweight who came out of a year's retirement during which he served in the U. S. Coastguard.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 260

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Progressive party bridge gets its name from the fact that the players progress. That is, one pair from each table moves to the next table after each series of hands is played.

At some parties, the winning pair at each table progresses. At others, the losing pairs move. Some progress toward the lower-numbered tables. Others, toward the higher-numbered tables.

Another method is to have the ladies progress in one direction and the gentlemen in the other. Maybe so the husbands can get out of sight and hearing of their wives.

Where players do not change partners after each move, there is the Mitchell movement, as in tournaments. There, the north-south pairs remain rooted while the east-west pairs move from table to table.

In such cases, it makes no difference which pair has made the most points. The east-west pairs move to the next table after each group of deals.

At palooka parties, the scoring of only gross points prevails. That is, a pair scores only the points they win. They do not deduct the points they lose.

Correct custom is to keep a plus and minus score. In the plus column, score what you win; in the minus, what you lose. Deduct one side from the other to get your net plus or minus.

During a husband and wife partnership affair, a wife was in the lead with this hand:

♠ 9 6 3
♥ J 4 2
♦ K 8 6
♣ Q J 10 9

She led the nine of clubs. Before he was able to learn what she held in that suit, they lost a chance to defeat the contract. Her lead had misinformed him.

From a rotation of cards in sequence headed by queen or jack or ten, the correct lead is the top card. That denies having the card immediately above it and admits having the card immediately below it.

When the hand was over, she asked him "how did we do on this deal?" He looked at her kindly and said: "You did the best you could with what you had."

She beamed, thinking he meant what she had in her hand. He grinned, knowing he meant what she had in her head.

"FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK"

Errol Flynn is back to bring more thrills and adventure to movie fans, but this time he swaps his bow and arrow for top hat and tails. He is starred in the role of a writer of mystery stories and amateur sleuth combined in the Warner Bros. comedy-mystery "Footsteps in the Dark" which opens Thursday at the McCarthy Theatre.

Co-starred with Flynn is lovely Brenda Marshall whose performance in the "Sea Hawk" brought raves from critics and public alike. Flynn, who attempts to lead a double life because he wants to keep his mystery writing exploits a secret, gets himself into a fine mess with the police accusing him of murder on one hand and his wife, Brenda's role, accusing him of being unfaithful on the other. Errol finally straightens things out but only after a series of harrowing and laugh provoking experiences that makes one of the cinema season's best entertainments.

The supporting cast includes such Hollywood luminaries as Ralph Bellamy, Lee Patrick, Alan Hale, Allen Jenkins, Grant Mitchell and Roscoe Karns.

The second feature attraction presents Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant in "Bringing Up Baby" with a supporting cast which includes Charlie Ruggles and Barry Fitzgerald.

"THE HEATS ON"

The McCarthy Theatre will turn off its furnace Friday midnight and substitute Columbia's sizzling motion picture "The Heats On" starring Mae West, Victor Moore and William Gaxton. The picture will be previewed on New Year's Eve at the McCarthy Theatre.

Besides the spectacular heat wave of laughs and rhythms furnished by the stars, there is a stellar cast of feature players to keep the entertainment at the boiling point. There are Xavier Cugat and his Rhumba orchestra; Hazel Scott and her palpitating piano; Leonard Sues and his blazing trumpet; David Lichine, director and originator of the torrid dances; Lester Allen, Alan Dinehart, Mary Roche, Jack Owens, Lina Roway, Sam Ash, Lloyd Bridges and Almira Sessions.

AT THE CAPITOL — Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour are co-starred in "Dixie," which comes next to the Capitol Theatre in gorgeous technicolor. There are six new tunes and six oldies; Marjorie Reynolds is in it, along with Billy de Wolfe, Lynne Overman, Eddie Foy, Jr. The added western "Six Gun Gospel" stars Johnny Mack Brown.

AT THE BELLE

"The Sky's the Limit"

King of screen dancers, Fred Astaire again proves his right to the title with his brilliant work in RKO Radio's joyous new offering "The Sky's the Limit," in which Fred co-stars with a new and charming partner, Joan Leslie.

The picture, which is now on the Belle theatre screen, deals with the hectic romance between a flying Tiger pilot and a girl photographer while the former is on a short furlough in New York City. Keeping his identity secret and dressed in civilian clothes the flyer puts on an unusual campaign to capture the girl's attention which gets him involved with her millionaire employer as well.

Plenty of gay situations and surprises follow as the plot unfolds while the two stars turn in a number of unsurpassed dance routines that will delight any audience. Two of them a romantic duet on a penthouse roof and a novelty solo by Fred on a bar-top are spectacular in the extreme and easily rank among the finest things that the camera has ever registered.

Three highly whistleable new tunes by Johnny Mercer and Harold Arlen, "My Shining Hour," "I've Got a Lot in Common With You," and "One For My Baby and One For the Road" are also features in the picture with Freddie Slack and his orchestra providing most of the music.

Robert Benchley heads the features cast of the David Hemstead production and Robert Ryan, Marjorie Gateson, Richard Davies, and Elizabeth Patterson have important roles which they handle deftly. The telling direction of E. H. Griffith adds much to the entertainment qualities of the film, which the writer considers one of the best vehicles the amiable Astaire has had in many years.

Don't miss "The Sky's the Limit," whatever else you may do.

Three pleasing featurettes precede the feature attraction including a short hit, "Barnyard Golf," a hilarious Walt Disney color cartoon "The Pelican and the Snipe," and an effective and entertaining multiple reel featurette "Broadway Dimout."

The engagement ends on Friday.

New Year's Eve Frolic

Harry James and His Music Makers, Lucille Ball, and a cast of funmakers are featured in the Metro Goldwyn Mayer technicolor film-musical, "Best Foot Forward." announced as the feature attraction at the Belle theatre New Year's Eve Frolic. A great surrounding show is announced for presentation. Tickets are now on sale.

AT THE CAPITOL

"DIXIE"

(In Technicolor)

One of Paramount's busiest, brightest musicals is headed this way, with Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour doing the starring honors, supported by Marjorie Reynolds, Billy de Wolfe, Lynne Overman, Raymond Walburn and Eddie Foy, Jr. The picture is "Dixie," and it's due to arrive next at the Capitol Theatre, complete with twelve songs —six new ones and six old favorites —and beautiful Technicolor.

This is the first time Hollywood has undertaken to reproduce the kind of entertainment that thrilled America in the 1850's — those great minstrel shows of song and comedy. "Dixie" tells the romantic story of how the Virginia Minstrels came to be, formed by Dan Emmett, the man who wrote the song, "Dixie". Bing Crosby plays Emmett, and according to reports, does the best singing and acting of his career.

The movie grapevine tells us that this is one of the best movie bets of this, or any other season, so make a note to see "Dixie" when it hits town.

"SIX GUN GOSPEL"

Johnny Mack Brown rides onto the screen again in an exciting western drama, "Six Gun Gospel", at the Capitol Theatre next.

One of the most popular of the western stars, Brown appears this time in a story that draws more heavily on his athletic prowess than any previous story. Noted as an athlete in his school days, this is the first time, he states, that he has been called upon in picture work to equal the outright physical strain that he faced in football competition. Skill, yes, but plain punishment physically, no.

More than the usual number of fights, all assigned to the star, accounts for this.

A Popeye Cartoon and the thrilling new serial "Secret Service in South Africa" complete another grand holiday bill.

Boston Cowley Increases Lead In Scoring Race

Montreal, Dec. 29 — (CP)—Boston's Bill Cowley has increased his lead in the official National Hockey League scoring to five points, greatest margin yet held by any player this season.

The official figures, released today and not including last night's Detroit-Boston game, show Cowley with 42 points made up of 15 goals and 27 assists. His closest competitor is Bill Mosienko of Chicago with 37 points, one more than Cowley's team-mate Herbie Cain.

Doug Bentley of Chicago and L. Carr of Toronto Leafs are tied for fourth spot with 34 points, one more than Clint Smith of Hawks, and five more than Buddy O'Connor of Canadiens.

Cain leads the goal column with an even 20, three up on Mosienko and Mud Bruneteau of Detroit and four up on Gerry Heffernan of Canadiens. Cowley's 27 assists put him nicely ahead in that department, with four more than Carr and five more than O'Connor and Smith.

Two Canadiens lead the penalty parade, with Murph Chamberlain pulling up even with Mike McMahon during the last week. Both have served 40 minutes in minors and majors.

AT THE BELLE — Joan Leslie pouts, but Fred Astaire is smiling, the two are co-starred in RKO Radio's sprightly filmusical "The Sky's the Limit," for which Arlen and Mercer supplied the songs, and Freddie Stack and his orchestra provide the music. Joan gives a great performance as Fred's new leading partner, sings and plays a dramatic role as well.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 29—(AP)—There's an old saying that an oarsman needs a strong back and a weak mind but it took a former Washington crew man, Chuck McGuinness, to figure out a way around the United States Office of Defence Transportation ruling against the use of school buses to transport athletic teams ... Chuck coached the Dalles, Ore., high school last fall and his boys travelled all over the state via bus — and with official blessings, too ... Here's how it was done: the Dalles played Friday night games, so Chuck lined up Saturday and Sunday farm jobs for his squad ... "We used just 200 gallons of gasoline. We harvested 1,800 sacks of spuds, 1,200 sacks of onions and five tons of walnuts," McGuinness explained. "The farmers were grateful. We got to play football — and the O. D. T. approved."

Double Check

Joe Donohue, who has charge of the track room at the local race tracks, cashed some $9,000,000 worth of cheques for patrons of the mutuel machines last season without suffering a loss ... evidently Joe's past-performance charts on the customers are more accurate than the ones the bettors keep on the horses.

Observation Car

A Vallejo, Calif., duck hunter recently was fined for hunting without a licence, taking ducks without a duck stamp, shooting from a motor vehicle, shooting from a main highway and shooting migratory birds without a rifle ... and Wilbur Adams of the Sacramento Bee wonders why he wasn't also pinched for parking on the highway to make it an end of a perfect day.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was thinking on my back on the living room floor, saying to pop, I dont know whether to decide to make any New Year resolutions this year or not. If I made one I might only break it, I said.

Nothing ventured nothing gained, pop said. It's better to make an honest resolution, even if you break it, than to refrain from making one because you're afraid you might not have the will power to keep it. The very effort of exerting your will power to even a slight extent is a step tord other steps in the right direction, he said, and I said, Then okay, pop, you and ma always claim I swallow too soon when I eat, so I'll resolve to chew every bite 500 times, so then if I even chew each bite 10 times on the way to 500 I'll still be eating as slow as most people, but if I just resolved to chew each bite 10 times I'd probably get discouraged much sooner and stop at 2 or three where I generally stop anyways.

Your logic is not unconvincing, but just the same it's not wise to try to stretch too far beyond your own reach, in resolutions or otherwise, pop said. In fact it's better to underestimate your own will power a little, at least when it comes to giving a New Year resolution a fair chance of succeeding, he said, and I said, Then okay, pop, I ought to get up sooner after you call me every morning, but if I actually resolve to do it I might be overestimating my own will power, so I'll resolve at least not to sleep any later than what I have been, because even if I tried to you and ma probably wouldn't leave me, so that's one resolution that's got a almost perfect chance of succeeding.

Why dont you resolve to breethe regularly through both nostrils unless you happen to have a cold? pop said.

Being sourcastic and the end of the subject.

Burning Planes Fall Out of Sky Like Sparks From a Pinwheel

By ASAHEL BUSH
Associated Press War Correspondent

At an advanced Allied fighter base, New Guinea, Dec. 29—(AP)—American fighter planes covering the marine landing at Cape Gloucester Sunday downed 61 enemy aircraft in conflict which came close to matching the most furious aerial scramble of the war in the southwest Pacific.

Several types of fighters shared the day's achievements. They patrolled the landing area in relays with the actual combat concentrated in two brief sessions of 20 to 30 minutes each.

Enemy aircraft were first sighted at 2:35 p.m. heading toward Gloucester from the northeast. Within a few minutes they were sweeping in from all directions, fighters, dive-bombers and torpedo bombers—perhaps 100 planes in all.

Then, in the words of one American officer, began "one of the damndest dogfights I ever saw."

"For 30 minutes every fighter in the air was whirling in circles from 8,000 to 14,000 feet high and burning nips were falling out of that squirrel cage like sparks from a pinwheel," he said.

The mid-afternoon show was followed by a second Japanese foray at 5 o'clock which, after another 30-minute melee over Rooke island west of Gloucester, likewise ended disastrously for the enemy.

CHAPTER 7

"They mind their own business, and the people of Learmonth have learned to give them the road." Then, as Colin approached still nearer, Tennant warned, "Look out."

But quietly, careful to make no sudden move, Colin took another step forward. He saw the nearest wolf's ears, flatten and the white teeth bared, while behind him he heard Blair's gasp of fright. Watching him, the wolf waited; only its shoulder muscles quivered, and very slowly Colin sank upon one knee.

In a low, persuasive voice he spoke. "Let's look at you, old fellow."

A growl rumbled in answer.

"Come on, boy. Let's look at you." Edging nearer, he held out his open hand. The wolf's body tensed. Head averted, eyes smoldering, the animal was gathering for one of those lightning lunges that can rip a man's flesh to the bone; but Colin's quiet monotone went on, and gently his hand touched the wolf's head. A growl began to rise in the beast's throat, then died away to silence. And now a curious thing happened.

The eyes that had never left Rae's face slowly relaxed, the bristling fur flattened, and a moment later the great head reached forward until very lightly it rested on Colin's knee.

Behind him, Colin heard Tennant draw a deep breath and the almost whispered words, "Well, I'll be—!"

Hand still on the wolf's head, Colin looked up. "Haven't broken their spirits, have you, Nate?" he asked, smiling.

"You know confounded well I haven't. You've always had a way with wild things."

Rising, Colin looked at the unfinished toboggan lying by the cabin door. "So you're trapping again this winter?"

Nate nodded. "This year more than ever. There's a war on with the Indian school and I'm out after pelts in a big way. Dove got the notion he can tell my trappers where to head in; gave me notice that this was a Cree country, and he intends to see that the Crees get the furs. Practically dared me to hire any more white trappers." Nate laughed. "Well, I'm taking that dare in a big way; I'm bringing in thirty more trappers on the next boat."

Colin's eyes were grave. "And when you clean out this country between you?" he asked.

"Why look that far ahead? Maybe I'll move somewhere else; maybe I'll start a fur farm. In the meantime, I'm going to get mine while the getting is good. Blame me?"

"Why should I blame you? I blame the shortsighted system that allows it. Just because you and Dove want to step up the fur game, four thousand Cree Indians may find themselves on the relief rolls, and Learmonth will be a ghost town."

Nate shrugged his heavy shoulders. "If it isn't me, it would be someone else."

"I know."

So for half an hour longer they talked; then walking back to the dock, Nate lifted Blair into the plane.

"When do I see the bride-to-be?" Nate asked.

"Come over to the school Wednesday," Blair answered. "Dove is having a dinner for Selkirk and Miss Meredith after the last boat gets in."

Nate grimaced. "I don't know whether I can stand Rod Selkirk's Olympian wisdom for a whole meal but, if the lady's easy to look at, I'll try." In a gesture of spontaneous friendliness, he clapped Colin on the shoulder. "It's good to see you again, old son." He closed the door on them, and Blair started the motor.

Busy with the controls, Blair said nothing during the short hop back to Trappers Lake; but, as she taxied toward Colin's cabin, she asked, "Aren't you glad?"

"Of what?"

"That you're friends again."

"I hope it lasts. But don't forget he only did that because of you. Ever since we were kids, Nate and I have been oil and water—maybe because of you. He's very much in love with you, Blair."

"That surprises you?"

"Don't be foolish. Haven't I always been in love with you myself?"

She laughed. "And haven't you always been careful to hide behind that 'little sister' act?"

Colin's eyes were on her face. "I wonder what would happen if anyone crossed Nate in love?"

Blair looked up. "He frightens me sometimes, and I'm not easily frightened. He's so terribly possessive and I don't want to be possessed—not by anybody. I don't like to think of love as possession; I like to think of it as a sharing."

"Are you going to marry him, Blair?"

Her eyes refused to meet his. "Don't ever ask that when Father's around. It sends his blood pressure soaring."

"He still doesn't like Nate?"

"Not as a possible son-in-law."

For a moment Colin sat in silence, then he said, "Shut off the motor, Blair. There are some things you and I ought to talk about."

She touched a switch and the soft whir of the propeller ceased.

"It's about us and about Jonathan Dove," Colin began. "Dove is a dangerous animal—I learned that in Wolverine. Whatever else he is, I don't know, but I came here to find out, and you can help me more than anyone else. And we've got to trust each other absolutely."

"Don't you think we can?"

Instead of answering directly, Colin said, "It might ruin everything if Nate finds out why I'm here."

"Why should he find out?"

He touched her hand. "I'm wondering if a woman can be loyal to two men at the same time. Suppose those two men should happen to be enemies again?"

Unhesitatingly she replied, "Colin, I'm not married to Nate. I haven't ever told him I would be. Look at me." Laying both hands on his cheeks, she turned his face toward hers. "Remember this: no matter what happens, you can trust me, always."

Her eyes, so often smiling, were very earnest now, and for an instant his own eyes probed her very depths; then lightly he kissed her lips and said, "I'd trust you with my life."

Colin held her, watching while the blood flowed upward to her cheeks and he felt the sudden warmth of her hands. Only then did he move slowly back, but his voice was vibrant when he asked, "Blair, just what's going on between Dove and your father?"

"I don't know. Father won't even talk about it, but it's as if Dove has some hold on him. He—almost every night Father leaves the cabin and goes over to the school and stays there until midnight."

"Maybe he goes to the hospital."

"That's what I thought at first. But one night when Father hadn't come back I went over to the school, and he wasn't there—or at the hospital either. I began hunting for him," Blair stopped.

"Yes?" he urged.

"I found him down by the dock, signaling with a flashlight to someone out on the lake. After a while he came back to the cabin, and when he saw that I was still up, he was angry and terribly nervous. Colin, you remember how he used to be? He was so alive; he wasn't ever down. That's all changed now. He's afraid. That's why I wrote you."

"You haven't talked to Nate about this?"

She shook her head. "Father and Nate never liked each other, and Nate's too"—she searched for the word—"too headstrong. He'd go to Dove and threaten him, and that might mean Father's dismissal from the school."

Colin stepped from the plane. "How soon can I see your father?"

"Tomorrow?"

"I'll come over to the school tomorrow." He climbed down from the plane and looked up at the girl. "Blair, tonight is Dove's first night back in Learmonth. There's a fair chance something may happen tonight. Be on the watch; be everlastingly careful."

He spoke with such grave earnestness that for the first time Blair felt the touch of fear. "You think,—"

"I don't think—I know we're dealing with a killer."

Quietly she said, "I'll be on watch."

He waved as she took the air, and watched her plane grow smaller in the eastern sky. Even after she had disappeared he stood there, looking out over the lake, listening. A great calm held the world—that of a northern sunset—but within himself Colin felt neither calm nor peace. For he was on that grimmest of errands—the man hunt.

Man hunt. The words brought him back to the yellowing photograph hidden in the cabin. There must be no leak in getting that into the right hands. The safest way would be for Blair to fly it down to Winnipeg, even though it meant waiting until freeze-up.

With brooding eyes Colin watched the light fading, while he felt a growing uneasiness at the thought of Blair. He had warned her to be careful and yet—this would be Dove's first night back.

Darkness fell. For over an hour he waited for Alec, then cooked himself a solitary meal. With growing restlessness he moved about the cabin until, on a sudden impulse, he wrote a note for Alec and, picking up a paddle, walked down to the canoe.

Just before he pushed out from shore, he heard the drone of an airplane moving out of the north, and flying so high that only in faintly recurrent throbs could he hear the faint song of a motor. Colin wondered if it could be Blair returning to Nate's cabin.

He paddled more swiftly now, bending his head to the wind. It was eight miles by water from his cabin to the trading post—Dove's school must be two miles closer.

A little ice formed on the paddle, and once he stopped in the lee of an island to smoke. About him, unseen and only faintly heard, surged the teeming, mysterious life of lake and forest. Fish were jumping out beyond the canoe, and back on shore a sharp small cry of agony and the crackle of dry grass told him that another tragedy of the wilderness had been played out. The nightly hunt was on, the unremitting search for food before snow and the bitter cold of winter forced all living things to their dens to wait and watch and then to hunt again.

Dimly at the water's edge, Colin made out a muskrat tunnel, leading back into the willows, and here the gleam of a peeled stake bore witness that man was hunting too—with traps of double-jawed steel.

The lonely cry of a loon rose from among the reeds, and across the lake he could see a twinkle of light from the direction of Dove's school. Eyes on the far-off bank, he began knocking the ashes from his pipe; then suddenly he realized the light had gone. He looked at the radiant dial of his watch—not yet ten. They kept early hours at the school.

Picking up his paddle, he raised his head to see the light gleaming again, brighter than before. Breathless with interest, Colin leaned forward—once more the light flashed on and off. Then blackness closed.

A signal? The signal Blair had spoken of? His eyes traversed the lake, but there was no answering gleam from out the night; and, turning the bow of his canoe, Colin headed directly toward the school.

A half hour later a huge, shadowy object loomed up like a great sea bird resting — Blair's plane, moored for the night. It could not have been her motor, then, that he had heard. In a moment more the canoe grated on the shore, and stepping out, he hid it in a clump of willows and climbed the bank.

Vaguely Colin made out the main group of buildings clustered across the clearing. Beyond them, almost at the clearing's edge, stood the barn, and farther to the left, three cabins. One of them would be Dr. Benedict's.

But his interest was focused on the solitary structure he had first seen that morning from across the lake. Built of rough-hewn logs, with a roof of stained native shingles, it was taller than the rest, and at the farther end a wing of frame boards extended shoreward. Nothing in the building itself could explain the feeling of foreboding it gave him . . .

Keeping well back in the shadows, Colin circled the clearing. Near the cabins a burst of frantic barking brought him to instant immobility and he stood there scarcely breathing until he heard Blair's voice calling to the dog. He could take comfort at least in knowing that all was well with Blair.

So he turned toward the shore; then suddenly stiffened. From out of the darkness footsteps were coming down the path, and soon a muffled figure hurried by, disappearing toward the lake.

Not Dove. Much too big for Dove. Patiently Colin waited through long minutes, then once again this time two figures emerged, each carrying two ten-gallon gasoline cans, empty, it seemed, from the ease with which they bore them.

Colin saw that the man ahead was Jonathan Dove. Within ten paces they passed and, going directly to the isolated building, disappeared inside. But the door remained open and Colin crouched back among the spruce, waiting.

A light began glowing on the upper floor, then faded. Soon the two figures reappeared, hurried down to the shore, and came back, walking slowly under heavier burdens than before, burdens that Colin could not distinguish. This time the door of the building closed and, although he waited a half hour more, they did not return. But he saw the flare of a flashlight move back and forth on the upper floor, causing the window to light up fitfully. Then that, too, disappeared.

Rising from his cramped hiding place, Colin felt his way down to the dock. Drawn up on the bank was a canoe with two paddles lying beneath the seat, and an outboard motor clamped to the stern. He touched the cylinder head—still warm—and with that touch Colin felt the thrill of new certainty. Wherever Dove had been, he wanted secrecy. Somewhere out of earshot he had shut motor off and paddled in to avoid detection.

Colin pulled his own canoe from the willow clump and, pushing out from the bank, paddled steadily against the slow current of the Nelson. Within him was a sense of growing conviction that back there inside the shadowy walls of that solitary building, lay the answer to the riddle of Jonathan Dove. Tomorrow, he told himself, tomorrow he would pay his first visit to the school.

It was almost midnight when he reached the inn; a small lamp was burning feebly in the hall, and on the hearth of the living room low flames still flickered from a dying fire.

Blowing out the lamp, Colin turned toward the stairs; then sharply he raised his head. Close beside the hearth a figure was crouching, and even before the firelight touched her hair he knew it was Irina. Crossing the room, he bent over her.

"Asleep?" he began, then stopped at the sound of a sob.

She did not look at him but sat with face averted and he could see that she was fighting for self-mastery.

"Can I do anything?" he asked.

Irina raised a small hand toward him. The fingers, icy cold, closed about his wrist. Her face was wet. He found it hard to believe that this was the same girl who had met him with perfect composure in a hotel room at Winnipeg and braved the swirling storm in Blair's plane. She drew her coat about her. "I'm so cold."

"I'll build the fire up."

"No—not physically cold. Cold inside."

"You're frightened. Once I thought you couldn't ever be afraid."

"It's not fear for myself."

"For Rodney?"

"Perhaps. I was with him all day today, Colin. He left me an hour ago and, since then, I've sat here feeling how utterly hopeless everything is. I couldn't ever be all he thinks I am—no woman could. A dozen times I remembered what you said about not hurting him. But how can a man like that not be hurt? He's the gentlest soul I ever knew, but he's so defenceless."

"Isn't that what love is—a dropping of all defences?"

"Oh, love—but this is different; this is adoration for someone who doesn't exist and never could exist."

Irina shook her head so violently the firelight glittered in a thousand coppery sparks through her hair. "People can't live on pedestals, Colin—not for long."

"I know." With all his heart he wanted to voice the sympathy that welled up in him, but there seemed so little he could say.

"Don't you think you may be taking it too seriously?" he asked gently. "There are worse things than being adored. Just remember that everyone here is your friend. Why—" he smiled—"you conquered Ma Corrigale the first minute she set eyes on you."

He saw the shadow of an answering smile as she said, "You're the only one Ma really cares about. She talks of you by the hour." Wearily Irina held out both hands to the fire. "I'm so tired of myself—let's talk about you."

"What about me?"

"Things Ma Corrigale told me. All these long, solitary trips you make back in the forest, living there for months at a time. Are you running away from something?" Colin or are you wasting yourself?"

He moved closer to the dying flames. "If it has to be one or the other, let's call it wasting myself."

"But why? You seem so capable of doing whatever you want with your life."

"That's what I am doing. I just don't happen to be very interested in money or having my name in bright lights."

"I can understand that. Rodney says if you could be persuaded to write down what you know about the fur animals of northern Canada, you could be the world's greatest authority."

"I wrote one book about them. I wanted to learn all I could about the life that goes on back in the forest and along the streams. That is why I've spent so much of my life out in the back country."

Toronto, Dec. 29 —(CP)— A shareholders' meeting of the defunct Toronto Belt Line Railway Co. was called yesterday and no one showed up. THE WAR TODAY

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press War Analyst

The command structure for the European invasion so far is like a jig-saw puzzle with half the pieces missing, but enough has been disclosed to make it evident that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is taking with him to Britain a lot of the first-string men of his winning Mediterranean team. It is also evident that air power is getting even more emphasis than before.

The disclosures to date leave a lot of blanks to be filled—including the command of United States ground forces in the invasion.

It is by no means clear as yet just what relation the seemingly overlapping air commands bear to each other, either. Eisenhower's authority does not reach to the Mediterranean, but that of his American strategic bombing commander, Lt.-Gen. Carl Spaatz, apparently does—extending to all long-range, behind-the-lines bombing of Germany, whether by the 8th Air Force in Britain, or by any of the three U. S. Air Forces in the Mediterranean.

Air War in Mediterranean

The air war in the Mediterranean would seem, purely on the basis of announced changes, to be the one aspect of combat operations in that area destined to increase in importance in the immediate future. Nothing else offers a satisfactory explanation of the transfer of Lt.-Gen. Ira C. Eaker to command all Allied air forces in that zone.

Eaker is largely responsible for the growth and development of the 8th Air Force in Britain to its present formidable strength.

Obviously, such a man is not being "kicked upstairs." It seems much more likely that, while the 8th's striking power is more important than ever, its relative importance as an independent command has shrunk in the vastly increased scope of all operations against Germany.

So Maj.-Gen. James H. Doolittle, whose northwest African strategic air force obliterated the supply sources of the Axis African armies, moved to command of the 8th, while Eaker takes over command of three U. S. Air Forces, the 9th, 12th and 15th, plus R. A. F. units in the Mediterranean. Another portent of increasing Mediterranean air operations is the assignment of Maj.-Gen. Nathan F. Twining, veteran chief of the 13th Air Force's operations in the Solomons, to succeed Doolittle in command of the 15th.

'Operation Ration' Replaces Aussies' Bully Beef, Biscuits

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 29—(CP)—No longer will bully beef and hard biscuits be the staple diet of Australian forces in the fighting-line. They are being replaced by a compact "operation ration" described as more like a Christmas hamper than an army ration.

The new rations, result of long research and experiment by dieticians, contains meat and vegetable stew, biscuits, a stick of caramel, sugar and tea, milk powder, peanut butter and salt. Other items such as cheese and candy are included in the second and third meals for the day. It will be issued men in forward areas when operations prevent normal hot meals from being sent.

Heavy Allied Shipping Movements Reported At Port of Gibraltar

London, Dec. 29—(CP)—The heaviest shipping movements at Gibraltar since the Italian invasion were reported by Axis radios today along with fresh boasts about the "impregnability" of German defences on the French invasion coast.

The Vichy radio reported a British cruiser and nine torpedo boats had left Gibraltar and that 58 merchant vessels were in the harbor at present.

The Berlin radio quoted a Madrid report that a convoy of 77 ships, mostly 10,000-ton vessels, had arrived at Gibraltar from an Atlantic crossing.

The Swiss radio said considerable German troop movements took place in France over Christmas while the Nazi-controlled Paris radio declared the German coastal defence system in France would make an invasion "very costly."

2 RUSSIANS ESCAPE IN ITALY

With the 5th Army in Italy, Dec. 29—(AP)—Two Russians, captured on the Russian front in 1941 and brought to Italy as members of a German anti-aircraft crew, have escaped to American lines here. The first thing they wanted to know was how to get back to the Russian army.

Both were held prisoners of war in Latvia and East Prussia until last December, they said, when they were assigned to an anti-aircraft battery as laborers and sent to Italy.

ASSURANCE BEING SENT JAPAN

San Francisco, Dec. 29 —(AP)— The Examiner said today Spanish government assurance that Japanese interned in the United States are being given civilized treatment are en route to the Japanese government.

The report to Japan, the paper said, is being cleared through the Spanish embassy in Washington, and is based on an investigation of Japanese relocation centres in this country.

War Against Russia Is Dismal Failure From Economic Point

London, Dec. 29 —(CP)— Germany's war against Russia has been a dismal failure from the economics point of view, aside from the military disasters suffered, an official of the Ministry of Economic Warfare said today.

He gave a press conference this picture:

Although the Germans drove deep into Russia they had not been able to stay there long enough to exploit their gains and were frustrated by the Russians' earth-scorching tactics.

They squeezed some food out of the territory they conquered, but got only a trickle of the oil and metals they need so badly. The fury with which the Germans are defending the Nikopol Bulge indicates how desperately they need its manganese.

The Germans have lost 135,000 square miles of Russian territory in the past six months.

The precision bombing of the United States Air Force and the area bombing of the R.A.F. has been a severe blow to Germany's production in the past year.

The end of 1943 finds Germany's supply problem eased somewhat, but this is the result of reduced commitments rather than to any increase in raw materials available. For instance, she no longer has to supply the African front.

VICTIM OF GAS ASPHYXIATION

Montreal, Dec. 29 (CP) — Georges Vandelac, 82, former Montreal alderman, today died of gas asphyxiation and his wife and daughter-in-law were taken to a hospital where the former's condition was reported as "serious."

The Vandelac family was awakened this morning by gas fumes which had spread throughout their three-storey dwelling. Police revived Mrs. Georges Vandelac but her husband had died before they arrived. Origin of the fumes was still being sought this afternoon.

230 Jap Planes Downed During Past Two Weeks

(By HAROLD STREETER)
(A. P. Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP) — The Japanese air force has paid the price of more than 230 planes shot down over New Britain during the first two weeks of that island's invasion. Announced Allied losses were 30. But even more important than these comparative totals, other developments seem to indicate something decidedly amiss from the enemy standpoint.

Is Japan growing short of planes? Of battle-experienced pilots? Or, on the other hand, is enemy air might being held back for the battle to come?

Again, has Allied offensive pressure from the Marshalls southward over a Pacific outpost line of more than 2,000 miles so thinned out Nipponese air strength that it cannot be concentrated swiftly to repel new blows?

These questions are raised logically by what has happened since the invasion of New Britain opened December 15 at Arawe on the southwest coast. New Britain is by all odds the most important Japanese Pacific position invaded by the Allies, chiefly because of the superb harbor and network of airfields at Rabaul.

Few Jap Planes Out

Ships of the American invasion forces had to sail some 200 miles from New Guinea to put the men ashore at Arawe. Yet it was not until after the landings and the warships were on their way back that the first enemy air attack occurred.

Again, on Sunday morning, the biggest force of ships and men ever assembled in the southwest Pacific appeared off Cape Gloucester. Not until mid-afternoon did the Japanese air force show up.

In the midst of the invasion campaign, the Allied air force has pounced on Japanese shipping at Kavieng, New Ireland, a vital enemy station on the Nipponese sea lifeline from Truk to Rabaul. And they have not encountered a single Japanese plane. War correspondents have written that presumably Japan was keeping planes at Rabaul for the New Britain battle.

But Kavieng is a part of the New Britain battle. Kavieng is only 160 miles from Rabaul.

Kavieng, Rabaul, Cape Gloucester and Arawe suggest all is not well with Japan's air arm.

Full Night's Sleep On New Year's Eve Urged on U. S. Workers

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—The United States government wants to keep the Mahoney boys out of the war plants on New Year's day. The Mahoney boys, it is written, are little elves who make their homes in the flowing bowls and toasting cups.

Paul V. McNutt, manpower commissioner, issued such a plea yesterday, urging that workers put in an appearance on New Year's day, and also forego the traditional celebration of the night before, he said: "I suggest that the workers of America get a full night's sleep on New Year's Eve."

NEGROES CALLED TO SERVICE FOR PAST 3½ YEARS.

London, Ont., Dec. 29 (CP) — Negroes are being called in the district for compulsory service today and have been without interruption for the past three and a half years, and "nothing has been put in their way" National Selective Service and M.D. 1 officials said today.

The officials, Divisional Registrar J. A. Martin and Brigadier D. J. MacDonald, officer commanding M.D. 1 were commenting on a report from Winnipeg which said Negroes are not being called to serve in the home defence forces in Manitoba.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Dec. 29 (AP) —Trends were mixed from the start on the stock market today with a number of the pivotal groups in fractionally lower ground until a midday rally brought a somewhat better balance. This followed news of the calling off of the railroad strike by the three dissident operating unions. Fractional gains and losses were about evenly distributed near the fourth hour.

Despite the latest turn in the carrier situation market followers remained a bit wary over the general labor picture, now focussing particular interest in wage demands of steel workers.

Canadian issues were weak, with Hiram Walker off a point and Distillers Seagrams and Dome Mines down fractions. Lake Shore was unchanged and Canadian Pacific up a fraction.

Among stocks given better support after noon were Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Baltimore and Ohio, Chrysler, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Philip Morris, Allied Chemical and American Telephone. Bethlehem, Republic, Goodrich, U.S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Woolworth were backward. American Distilling shares dropped 1 to 3 points.

Three Divisions Available For Salerno Landings

Whole Italian Operation Was Gamble, Success of Which Hung by Thread

DETAILED REVIEW

By WES GALLAGHER
(AP War Correspondent)

Algiers, Dec. 28 —(AP)— Allied Headquarters revealed Tuesday that the 5th Army at the time of the original Salerno landings was composed of just two British and one American divisions and that the whole Italian operation was a gamble the success of which hung by a thread for a while.

A detailed review of the Italian campaign and the lessons it had provided was given at a press conference by a British colonel from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's personal operations staff and an American captain. They gave this account:—

Because the campaign in Sicily did not end until Aug. 17 and weeks are required to prepare a division for an amphibious operation, only three divisions were available to Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark for his 5th Army at its initial landing.

Previously the 8th Army with little more than a corps of British and Canadian troops had landed on the toe of Italy Sept. 3 and by Sept. 8 had advanced 55 miles. The Canadian 1st Division was part of this army.

Not all the personnel of the three divisions could be landed at once.

Two days after the initial landings the 5th Army still had less than three full divisions although Clark built up his forces as rapidly as possible and was pushing ahead.

In the meantime the Germans brought up reinforcements and launched a full-scale armored attack down the north side of the Sele river.

Conclusions Drawn.

Conclusions drawn from the campaign by special British and United States observers at the front were:—

1. Soundness of basic training as given British and American soldiers has been proved.

2. Infantry still is the "queen of the battle," but men must be in top physical condition and display initiative.

3. Air bursts by American artillery have been particularly effective.

4. American tanks and tank destroyers have been more effective than German models.

5. Use of small "Cub" airplanes for artillery observation has proved a big aid.

6. Service units must display great initiative not found in handbooks when operating on foreign soil or terrain like Italy.

7. Complete co-ordination must be maintained among land, sea and air elements for a successful military campaign; none can operate separately.

Jap Papers Insist Rabaul be Held At All Costs

New York, Dec. 28 — (AP)—The Berlin radio said today Japanese newspapers are insisting that Rabaul must be held at all costs.

The broadcast asserted that all Japanese papers are stressing the critical situation on New Britain and voicing apprehension that the Japanese lack sufficient aircraft to defend the island.

The newspaper Mainichi warned against considering Rabaul too remote from the Japanese home country to be of real importance and said its conquest by the Allied would be bound to have great influence on the fighting at all fronts, the broadcast said.

ALARMED BY SHORTAGE

Building Which Housed Bank Given 'Honorable Burial'

Chicago, Dec. 28—(AP)— John M. (100 per cent) Nichols, former, Chicago bank president who gained prominence when he fought United States government controls over banking, is giving the building which housed his bank an "honorable burial."

Nichols, who closed the first National Bank of Englewood Oct. 14, 1941, after returning approximately $7,000,000 to depositors, said he declined offers to sell the building. He decreed it be torn down and its site covered with black soil.

Nichols won his nickname when for many years the bank kept liquid assets to at least 100 per cent of deposits. He joined the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation after lengthy controversy with government officials, valued the federal reserve bank stock on the books at $1, and finally refused to continue as a banker.

In announcing the bank's closing, Nichols urged withdrawals "to enable us to close our books on 52 years of successful banking, at least for the duration of the Roosevelt concocted emergency."

Trenton and District

Icy Streets Cause Minor Accidents

Trenton, Dec. 28 (Special)—Icy streets was the cause of several minor accidents over the weekend. Sunday night Donald Sharpe, 262 Sidney Street, driving West on Dundas Street and attempting to make a left turn to Queen Street struck a car owned by F. A. Kennedy, 87 MacLellan Ave., which was parked on Queen at the time near the Weaver-Whitley apartments. The Sharpe car slid on the ice and into the other car, doing slight damage to both cars but fortunately not injuring the driver.

Early Monday William MacDonald of the Marine section of R.C.A.F. driving east on Dundas Street struck a tree on the left side of the Highway near the Gooderich gas station at the east end of the town, when his car skidded and made for the left side of the highway. The right fender and rear of the car were badly damaged but fortunately MacDonald was uninjured.

On Monday Irwin Kiliger, of 235 Vaughan Road, Toronto, driving a 1940 Dodge Sedan west on Highway No. 2 skidded as he applied his brakes when nearing another car at the corner of Film and Dundas. Kiliger car slued to the north side of the highway striking a hydro pole breaking it and doing considerable damage to the radiator and bumper of the car, as well as knocking down several hydro wires.

Churchill 'Busy For More Than Week'

London, Dec. 28—(CP)—The Daily Mail said today that Prime Minister Churchill, who presumably is still in the Middle East recovering from pneumonia, will make a speech soon giving his views on the newly-established Allied invasion setup under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The newspaper said the Prime Minister "has been a busy man for more than a week" and that he took a hand in all arrangements for the organization of the invasion command.

Although it is understood no plans have been made for Mr. Churchill to speak in the immediate future, an appearance before the House of Commons or a broadcast following his complete recovery and return home would be in the normal course of events.

UNIVERSITY ADVISORY BOARD ON MANPOWER

Ottawa, Dec. 28 — (CP)—Labor Minister Mitchell today announced appointment of a University Advisory Board to consider and report on manpower problems affecting universities in wartime.

"The Board will concern itself with both problems involved in the military call-up and the shaping of university policies to better serve wartime needs in regard to university graduates," said the minister.

Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, will be Board chairman.

Luftwaffe Morale Weak in Italy

Just returned from a tour of the Mediterranean war theatre with other Empire newsmen, Allan Nickleson in the following story tells the reasons for the German Air Force decline in that area. He sums up the opinions as expressed to the correspondents by the ranking airmen in that district. Nickleson, 30 years old, has been in London since February, 1942, as a member of The Canadian Press Bureau staff.

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Dec. 28. (CP)—The German air position in the Mediterranean has deteriorated to a hopeless state that is aggravated by a shattering of morale that makes for relatively light opposition.

That is the general opinion of both operational airmen and ranking air force and army officers with whom I have talked during a tour of the Mediterranean war theatre with Empire correspondents. We saw plenty of proof to support this.

Although the leaders agreed as to the vast air superiority of the Allies in men, equipment and morale, they warned against overoptimism as to when the war in Europe would end. The general feeling was that it would take at least another year.

By air and road the correspondents travelled through parts of Italy and North Africa as well as to Malta and Gibraltar on the invitation of the Air Ministry to see battle scenes at first hand and to meet such outstanding warriors as Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder; Air Vice-Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham; Air Vice-Marshal Keith Parks; Air Vice-Marshal Harry Broadhurst, Air Officer Commanding, Desert Air Force; Sir Hugh Lloyd, Air Officer Commanding, Northwest African Costal Air Force, and Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, leader of the 8th Army and recently named head for British forces in the coming European invasion.

Near 8th Army Front.

The most astonishing personal realization of how decadent the air power of the enemy had become came when we drove toward the 8th Army front by day and night to interview Gen. Montgomery. The roads were jam-packed with military traffic moving both ways. A German fighter-bomber couldn't have missed such a target.

But there was no attack. There had been none for a long time. Much of the Allied transport used open headlights at night. All carried lights of some kind.

Allied airmen said it was far different behind the German lines. Transport there, they said, travelled under cover of darkness and were subject to incessant strafing and bombing atacks. When Allied aircraft were heard in the vicinity German transport stopped at the side of the roads.

The movement of enemy vehicles by day was restricted to a trickle because the slightest sign of enemy movement along the roads under constant Allied patrol brought planes pouncing upon them, their only opposition a little flak.

Allied fighters and bombers were met occasionally by Nazi fighters, but the challenge was never sufficient to disrupt any operation, either day or night. On the 8th Army front Allied bombers fly without fighter escort.

One air commander who termed the German air force "morally licked" advanced the theory the German High Command wrecked the Luftwaffe at the end of 1941 when they took hundreds of instructors from advanced training schools and sent them on operations because of shortage of trained air crews.

"Hitler pulled out his key men," the commander said. "It was like taking production managers and key officials out of a factory and expecting it to function."

Another high officer warned that although "the whole spirit of the Luftwaffe has withered in the Mediterranean area, morale remained good" in the squadrons in Germany.

Here are other points from these interviews, all tending to show the reason for the collapse in the air:

1. Since November, 1942, enemy losses in the Mediterranean on the ground and in the air have totalled approximately 7,500 planes. Hundreds of them are strewn around captured airfields.

Entirely on Defensive.

2. The Nazi air force is stretched too much and is entirely on the defensive. Signs of cracking—namely lack of morale and unwillingness to fight—have been noticed more at present than they were 18 months ago.

3. The German air force in Italy was never large, and for the first time the Germans must contend with a superior weight of arms. The bombing from the west has tied up hundreds of Nazi fighters that otherwise might be in the Mediterranean zone.

This Empire newsmen, however, were eyewitneses to the blazing fact that the Luftwaffe still has a kick. A few planes raided the Allied shipping port of Bari during the few hours we were there. Hits on ammunition ships accounted for a total of 17 merchantmen that were destroyed.

Plan Helicopter Passenger, Express Service in Quebec

Montreal, Dec. 28 — (CP)—Steps have been taken to organize an air passenger and express service using helicopters in the province of Quebec, it was announced today.

The specially formed company—Inter-City Airlines Limited—plans to link all main intermediary points between Cornwall, Ont., Lake Tremblant, Grandmere, Quebec, Thetford Mines and Sherbrooke, Que., officials said.

A central terminal at a yet undetermined location would be set up in Montreal, the announcement added.

The company, formed last summer, has asked the necessary permission from the Dominion Government and some of the interested municipalities have already approved the proposed air service.

(The Toronto Transportation Commission and the Gray Coach Lines announced yesterday in Toronto they had applied to the Dominion Government for permission to use helicopters and other aircraft for an air service after the war.

Camp Commander Commutes Term

Camp Kilmer, N. J., Dec. 28—(AP)—Two soldiers, both under court martial sentence to several weeks of confinement, were picking up paper under the eyes of a military policeman who followed with loaded rifle. Suddenly the guard fainted.

The prisoners picked up their guard and his rifle, carried him to the nearest dispensary, then obtained permission to telephone the Provost Marshal.

"Please sir," said one, "will you send us another guard? This one can no longer do his job."

The new guard came, but camp headquarters, in disclosing the incident today, said Col. Cecil L. Rutledge, camp commander, commuted the sentences and returned the men valid, but a Highkays Department to their outfits.

15,000 Tons Coal Out of 45,000 Tons Salvaged From Fire

Toronto, Dec. 28 —(CP)— Officials of the Consumers Gas Company today said company employees and firemen have salvaged 15,000 tons of soft coal from the blazing pile of 45,000 tons on Cherry Street along Toronto's waterfront.

The fire started by spontaneous combustion, has been raging since Dec. 1. Special squads of firemen have been assigned to battle the blaze and have been on the job day and night since it started.

Last night the entire top of the pile was ablaze and a bright reflection was cast across the sky and was visible for several miles. The coal, owned by the gas company, was to be used to manufacture gas.

Thomasburg — On Thursday evening, Dec. 23rd, members of the Thomasburg Community and friends gathered at the Oddfellows Hall to pay honor to Donald R. McTaggart, another of the boys who recently joined the R.C.A.F. and is in training at Kingston. The chairman called upon Mr. Donald Richardson who read an address signed on behalf of the communities of Fuller and Thomasburg by Harold Coulson, Gerald Morton, Arthur Morgan, Murney Blakely, Donald Richardson and Claude Thompson.

Claude Thompson made the presentation of a wrist watch for which Donald expressed his sincere thanks and appreciation. Mr. N. R. Flower, pastor of the United Church, was chairman for the occasion and a very enjoyable, splendidly arranged program of choruses, dialogues, recitations, songs and short plays was enjoyed. Rev. F. C. Beazer gave an interesting short speech followed by the singing of the National Anthem, Santa Claus came delighting the youngsters once again and distributed gifts to all.

Much credit for the success of the evening program is due to the school teachers and also to Mr. Fred Porter who presided at the piano for all musical numbers.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1943

BERLIN PROBABLY FINISHED AS CAPITAL BY RAID

2,000 Tons Bombs Shake and Burn Shuddering City

Large Formations of Daylight Bombers Streak Toward the 'Rocket-Gun' Coast

20 BOMBERS LOST

By W. W. HERCHER
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 30 —(AP) — Wednesday night's smashing assault on Berlin by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. in which more than 2,000 tons of bombs were dropped was followed up in daylight today by a heavy raid by American bombers on targets in Southwest Germany.

Escorted as usual by R.A.F. and American fighter planes, the American bombers attacked the area in which lie such key German cities as Stuttgart, Mannheim, Frankfurt and Karlsruhe. Specific targets were not announced. It was the eighth major operation of the month for the Americans.

The night's heavy assault may have finished Berlin as the working capital of Germany.

The engines of the mighty R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. night armada that dealt the eighth heavy knock at the German capital since the campaign of destruction was begun were hardly cold before large formations of heavy daylight bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters streaked at all heights toward the continent in the direction of the bristling 'rocket-gun coasts" of France, last pounded by a 1,300-plane American fleet on Christmas eve.

The extraordinarily strong force of British and Canadian Lancasters and Halifaxes went over desolated Berlin in the early evening and through a heavy cover of clouds dumped one of the largest loads of explosives and fire bombs ever poured on one target in an attack in this war.

In the raiding formations was the largest force of heavy bombers ever sent out by the Royal Canadian Air Force.

In announcing the operation the Air Ministry described the attack as "very heavy" and concentrated and said that smoke spiralled upward to 16,000 feet from the large fires set by 2,000 tons of high explosives and incendiaries.

Twenty bombers were lost in the raid, in Mosquito attacks on western and central Germany and northern France and in minelaying operations. Five of the heavy bombers lost were Canadian.

Well Below Average.

This was well below the average of 28 lost in the seven previous raids on Berlin.

The grim bombardment, the eighth in 42 days, presumably was directed at sections of the city which so far had escaped. It was estimated unofficially that ruins now were spread through at least 75 per cent of Berlin, enough to spell the end of the capital as the nerve centre of Germany's politics and economics. After the last previous attack on Dec. 24 it was estimated that 60 per cent of the city was devastated.

It was the 99th British attack, including Mosquito stabs, on the Nazi capital, hit by nearly 11,000 tons of bombs in seven previous assaults since an obliteration campaign was launched in mid-November.

First German reports said the bombers flew over in strong formations through thick clouds that hampered defences.

Berlin still was digging out from the wreckage of a 1,000-ton blow early in the morning of Dec. 24 when the fresh ruins was sowed.

Living in Immense Ruin.

"We now live in an immense ruin in which there is nothing more to bomb," a Swedish correspondent in Berlin reported to Stockholm last night after telephone service—severed between 7:50 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.—was restored.

A Berlin broadcast said "the sky was covered with a thick layer of clouds and British planes dropped explosives and incendiary bombs on thickly populated residential districts."

The knock-out campaign began Nov. 18 when the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. hurled 2,500 tons on Berlin and Ludwigshafen. The succeeding raids on Berlin were:—

Nov. 22 — 1,000 bombers dropping 1,300 tons.
Nov. 23 — An estimated 1,400 tons.
Nov. 26 — More than 1,000 tons.
Dec. 2 — More than 1,500 tons.
Dec. 16 — 1,500 tons.
Dec. 24 — 1,000 tons.

Today's German communique acknowledged "heavy damage to several districts of the Reich capital. Destruction was caused particularly in residential quarters."

Not Many Ministers There

Under the Nazi regime, more and more power and influence were concentrated within the capital and the city became not only the party centre but the hub of the Reich's industry and commerce as well.

Berlin's razing, therefore, would go far beyond the destruction of the buildings within her sprawling boundaries, and affect the centralized administration of the war throughout Germany and occupied territories. However the flight of ministries from the capital began early last August, more than two months before the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. started its tremendous knock-out campaign Nov. 22.

Four Children Burned to Death At St. Lambert

St. Lambert, Que., Dec. 30—(CP)—Four children, three sons and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Lansing, were burned to death here early today when their home was destroyed by fire. The mother received a badly lacerated leg when she climbed over the verandah railing on the second storey and jumped to the ground. Mr. Lansing suffered from shock. The dead are: Robert, 13; John, 12; Wayne, six and Linda, four.

The children were asleep in the attic when the fire started and the flames spread so rapidly, it was impossible to save them. Police said, however, that Mrs. Lansing had Linda in her arms when she came out on the verandah, but the child became frightened and ran back into the house. They found her body in front of a window, near a stairway, they said.

Cause of the fire is unknown.

'Dangerous Year' Forecast by Goebbels

New York, Dec. 30 —(AP)— "A dangerous year in which the fate of civilized mankind is once more at stake" is foreseen in 1944 by Paul Joseph Goebbels, the Berlin radio quoted the German propaganda minister as saying today.

"We do not deny that the enemy has caused us much difficulty and will do so also in the future," Goebbels said in his year-end review. "That is so in war.

"The year 1944 still contains riddles upon riddles."

But he concluded that "the enemy has not succeeded in depriving Germany of the essential economic and military positions—the preliminary conditions for the coming final victory—which German Armed Forces had conquered by its past great victories for German security."

STRIKE ENTERS 10TH DAY

Montreal, Dec. 30 (CP)—The strike of about 2,000 municipal white collar employees of the city of Montreal today entered its 10th day with no hopes—and certainly no signs—of a settlement before 1944.

Striking for higher wages, the civic employees last night reiterated their declaration not to return to work unless given definite promises of salary increases by the Quebec Municipal Commission which controls the city's finances.

Australia, Despite Earlier Resentment At Britain, Still Loyal to Empire

Written for The Canadian Press
By ARTHUR R. FORD

London, Ont., Dec. 30 — (CP) — What about the Americans in Australia? How are the Americans getting along with the Australians? What influence will their presence in such large numbers in the Antipodes have upon the life of the Dominion and upon its political future?

To obtain the proper picture it is necessary to give a little background. The only picture of American life which the ordinary Australian has ever secured, has been through the movies — which are largely of American origin. He sees the United States through the eyes of Hollywood. Most people on this continent will admit that the Hollywood picture is sometimes not altogether a true one of American life. There was thus a lot of glamor about the American soldiers, and most Australian girls in particular had an idea that all Americans were millionaires.

After Pearl Harbor, and especially after the fall of Singapore Australia was in a desperate plight. The flower of the Australian army and all of its equipment were in Africa. The country was almost defenceless and it was a country in the state of near-panic which saw the Japanese marshing southward. It seemed as if nothing could stop them. Australia had always put its faith in Singapore and the British Navy as its main defence against any possible invasion from the north. There was a reaction against Britain. There was a feeling that Britain had let her down. There was an appeal to the United States for aid in this time of crisis.

BLACKEST PERIOD FOR NAZIS SINCE SOVIET INVASION

Correspondent Says That High Command Appears to Have Lost Control of Its Forces

WHOLE FRONT CAVING

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 30 —(AP)— The German High Command appears to have lost control of its forces, at least temporarily, on the Russian front in the blackest period for the Nazis since their invasion of the Soviet Union.

It is apparent that Hitler or his generals, or both, have guessed wrong again—have been outwitted by the Red army general staff and have made one of their greatest blunders of the war.

Marshal von Mannstein's whole Ukrainian front is caving in. His proud tank units are piling up in the snows.

Garrisons are out of communication with the command. They are being surrounded and the Russians are retaking territory.

Hitler's big blunder was his counter-offensive west of Kiev.

He drew large numbers of tanks and soldiers from other sections of the front and from the deep rear—from France, Italy, Poland and The Netherlands—and threw them with great fury into Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's front, hoping to achieve a breakthrough, cut off large numbers of Red troops, retake Kiev and capture command of the middle Dnieper again.

His great effort gave him two cities—Zhitomir and Korosten—and lots of villages. But it cost him several thousand tanks and thousands of soldiers.

Moscow, Dec. 30 — (AP) — Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's 1st Ukraine Army, spearheading a great Soviet three-front winter offensive, rolled toward Russia's 1939 frontier today across the flat, frozen steppes that contain few natural defence obstacles east of the Bug River in Poland, 190 miles away.

Vatutin's troops were less than 48 miles from the rail and river town of Gorodnitza, on the Polish-Russian border, following their spectacular capture of the rail hub of Korosten yesterday. Aiming toward the first plunge out of Soviet territory, they pushed forward impetuously on the heels of a bitterly resisting but exhausted enemy.

With the northern arm of Vatutin's forces rapidly expanding a 42-mile-wide breach in the Leningrad-Odessa railway from Korosten south to Chernyakhov, other units were closing in on Zhitomir from the north and east, and latest front dispatches placed vanguards beyond the town of Livkov, five miles northeast of that equally important junction on the Western Ukraine rail network.

Nowhere were there any signs that Marshal Fritz von Mannstein's thoroughly disorganized army would be able to stem the tumultuous Soviet onrush short of the Bug river.

On the southern front, inside the Dnieper River Bend, Gen. Rodion Malinovsky's 3rd Ukraine Army, in a new supporting drive, second in importance only to Vatutin's offensive, struck westward across the river from Zaporozhe in a nine-mile advance that completely restored the great Dnieper dam to Russian hands.

FLAME THROWERS SEARING A PATH FOR U. S. MARINES

Artillery and Flame Help to Melt Resistance Around Cape Gloucester Drome

RABAUL RAIDED

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 30—(AP)—Flame throwers are searing a path for United States Marines through Japanese pillboxes defending the airdrome on Cape Gloucester, New Britain, front line headquarters said today.

While Marines on the eastern flank of the invasion beachhead at Borgen Bay were holding their front under attacks by a larger Japanese force, their comrades on the western flank advanced a half-mile, using flames and artillery to melt the stiffening opposition.

The western thrust put the invaders about a mile from the important air field on the northwestern coast of New Britain, the communique said.

The Marines on the east line which extend inland from Borgen Bay were doggedly hurling back attacks from an enemy force.

Allied planes lent support of the ground action Tuesday, the latest day reported.

Westward from New Britain, across Vitiaz Strait, the Australians continued to push the Japanese up the coast of the Huon Peninsula, New Guinea. They overcame stubborn resistance to reach Blucher Point Tuesday. This is about 30 miles north of the Allied base at Finschhafen.

Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific headquarters announced successful air and sea raids on Rabaul, the enemy plane and supply base at the northeastern tip of New Britain, and Kieta, air and shipping base on the east coast of Bougainville Island in the Solomons, both Monday.

Plane Spotters Correct But No Cause for Alarm

West Palm Beach, Fla., Dec. 30—(AP) — The way it turned out there wasn't any cause for alarm, but West Palm Beach has three aircraft spotters who proved they know their business.

The trio — Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Smith and Mrs. Herbert Weiss — were doing their weekly tour of duty Oct. 13 when a strange plane flew in from the sea. Excitedly they tagged it as a German JU-88 bomber, and so notified United States Army authorities.

Their identification was correct, but they did not learn until later that it was a captured plane, flown by an American crew and destined for Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, for examination.

London, Dec. 30 — (CP Cable) — A new series of action conferences is expected to be held in England shortly attended by all the leaders of the Allied Western European invasion forces to put 11th-hour touches on the master plan for the mammoth, combined operation from Britain.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Commander-in-Chief, Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, his deputy, and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Commander of the British group of armies under Eisenhower, probably will be back in England before long. This "Victory Trio," which never has been beaten, will get down to actual work with Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay and Air Chief Marshal Trafford L. Leigh-Mallory, whose appointment as Allied Naval and Air Commanders respectively was announced yesterday.

It is understood that Western invasion headquarters, set up many months ago, now is running smoothly with huge staff and advisory bodies practically completed. Similarly, British Army group headquarters, which likely will direct operations for a British Army, has been established for Montgomery to take over immediately. A United States Army group organization possibly is ready, too, for the still-unannounced United States Field Commander.

Canadians on Staffs

There are several Canadian officers on the invasion headquarters staff and the Canadian Army also is represented at Army Group headquarters.

The big invasion chiefs will settle down to their task immediately they arrive and the tempo of invasion preparations will accelerate until the fateful day when landing craft bump the enemy beaches.

Training of infantry and armored forces for specific but highly-secret tasks is well advanced. Naval and air forces ticketed for the invasion also are in the last phases of invasion manoeuvres.

Vast supplies for the gigantic expeditionary force will be marshalled and a huge fleet of ships to carry the troops to the continent as well as warships to protect the convoys and support landings will be collected at many secret points. Britain indeed is becoming one huge combined operations base.

BRITISH OCCUPY CASTEL DI SANGRO IN CENTRAL ITALY

Town Is Situated On Road Leading Up To Pescara-Rome Highway

CANADIANS ADVANCE

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
AP War Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 30—(AP)— British troops of the 8th Army have occupied and pushed on through Castel Di Sangro in the Apennine mountains some 40 miles from the Adriatic, Allied headquarters announced today.

Castel Di Sangro is six miles northwest of Alfedena, on a road leading northward up the hills to the Pescara-Rome highway. It is on a part of the front that has been inactive except for patrols for some weeks.

Fighting swayed back and forth in Villa Santa Maria in mountain country along the Sangro, 22 miles inland from the Adriatic.

Canadian 8th Army troops have pressed a mile up the Adriatic coast from Ortona toward Pescara over a heavily-mined road, headquarters announced.

On the left flank of their advance at Ortona, 8th Army units seized an important hill half a mile northwest of Villa Grande, headquarters said.

In the central sector, 5th Army troops stormed 3,000-foot Mt. Cersauola, five miles east of Biagio, after a half-mile advance, the hill overlooks the Colle-Atina highway.

Heavy German attacks on Puntafiume, at the mouth of the Garigliano river on the west coast, have died down with the village still in Allied hands, a headquarters officer said. Elsewhere on the front patrols were active.

The German communique broadcast from Berlin claimed that "on the Italian front southwest of Minturno an enemy base was captured." This presumably was a preference to Puntafiume, which the Allied officer said was still in 5th Army hands. The Germans claimed that "the garrison was taken prisoner and booty was seized."

The Germans were reported still holding San Vittore on the road to Cassino, but delayed dispatches from the 5th Army front said an American artillery bombardment had levelled the village and that American patrols had penetrated the edge of the village but had been forced to withdraw.

Allied air forces bombed seaports and railways supplying the German forces across the peninsula battle line, with heavy blows especially on Rimini and Ferrari.

Yugoslav Partisans Strike Into Northern Italy

German Transport Column Destroyed Near Gorizia

One-Third of All Yugoslavia Already Liberated by Tito's Armies

BITTER FIGHTING

London, Dec. 30 — (AP)—Yugoslav Partisans, boldly striking 25 miles into Northern Italy, have destroyed a German transport column near Gorizia, on the railway extending southward to the Adriatic port of Trieste, Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) announced today.

The thrust into Italian territory which the Germans previously had claimed to have freed of all guerilla opposition came with the announcement of new Partisan victories in Croatia, in which the provinces of Banlya and Kordun were said to have been swept clean of German invaders.

The victories, which added new territory to hinterland areas estimated at 41,000 square miles — roughly one third of all Yugoslavia —already liberated by Tito's armies, followed weeks of bitter fighting.

The communique, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio, gave these reports from other fighting fronts:

The Yugoslavs were battling strong German formations in Eastern Bosnia but in the Sanjak border area they were mopping up remnants of enemy units.

Tracks of the Priboj-Sarajevo railway were uprooted near Priboj, interrupting enemy rail traffic on one of his main supply routes.

Capture Large Stores

Northeast of Sarajevo, Partisans surprised a German detachment between Prijedor and Bosrnske Novi, killed 36 enemy troops and captured large stores of war material.

Bitter fighting continued in the Dinara Alps in Dalmatia, while naval units of the Yugoslav army sank a 20-ton German food ship off the Adriatic coast.

Farther north in Slovenia, Partisans were encircling Novo Mesto, 35 miles west of Zagreb. Successive German counter-attacks were repulsed, 50 Nazi soldiers killed and two tanks and large amounts of war equipment captured.

Units of a brigade destroyed a Bulgarian detachment at Djevdjelijl, on the Yugoslav-Greek border. A Bulgarian officer and 65 Bulgarian soldiers with all their equipment came over to the Partisans.

Reports of the Partisans' reconquest of 41,000 square miles of Yugoslavia were broadcast by the Moscow radio and confirmed by Yugoslav sources in London as "fairly accurate." Moscow said that in the first six months of 1943 the Yugoslavs killed more than 35,000 enemy troops and captured 16,000, together with huge stores of war equipment.

Coolies Defending Changteh Used Rocks and Bricks to Beat Off Enemy

By CLYDE A. FARNSWORTH
Associated Press Staff Writer

Changteh, China, Dec. 30 — (AP) —They fought for the first time on the shore of the Yuan River where it curves westward from the "forever peaceful" gate of Changteh and they died there — 31 men of the original 57th Chinese division—not as the coolies they had been, but as warriors.

The story of these men, to whom China's war had meant little more than the heavy pressure of shoulder yokes on bone and muscle, struck me as the most dramatic episode thus far disclosed of the battle of Changteh.

We heard their story at the spot where it happened, from moon-faced Col. Sun Ching-Hsien, commander of the 170th Regiment of the immortal 57th Division, which itself was consumed in China's "Little Stalingrad."

Col. Sun, standing beside a crude, half-destroyed pillbox, told how Japanese machine-gun cross fire had so reduced the ranks that 35 army laborers and orderlies were rounded up and charged with the defence of more than 150 yards of the city's ancient wall.

That was late in the afternoon of Nov. 26. After dark they crawled along the ancient settlement to their assigned positions. The Chinese command was convinced that more than 300 Japanese, hidden behind gun positions and waterfront buildings, would attempt to storm the wall.

Wall is 10 Feet High

The wall is 10 or 12 feet high at this point. The Japanese, under cover of solid masonry towering near the wall knocked together scaling ladders, attached hand grenades to bamboo poles, and the attack developed as anticipated.

"These men used rocks and bricks to beat back the enemy," Col. Sun said. "They also had five or six iron-tipped, wooden spears.

"As soon as a Japanese head appeared in the darkness, the men would lunge at it with spears or stones. They beat off the attack. They seized at least 13 scaling ladders.

"Wouldn't it have been much simpler to shoot the Japanese with pistols as they came, rather than to use spears and brickbats?" I asked.

"They had few pistols and no bullets," the colonel replied.

When this force and others along the wall could do so they seized Japanese ammunition to increase their own waning fire power. They stuffed uniforms of their dead with rice straw and set the dummies up at night to draw Japanese fire and disclose machine-gun positions.

The coolie force beat off Japanese scaling attempts for two days, then the Japanese forced the eastern gate and the four who still were alive retreated.

Montreal Man Charged With Killing Wife

New York, Dec. 30—(AP)— Lewis Wolfe, 33, identified by police as a wealthy Montreal contractor, was charged today with beating his attractive, red-haired Viennese wife to death with a steel-weighted shoe in a Brooklyn Hotel last night.

"I was suspicious," Assistant District Attorney Edward A. Heffernan quoted him as saying. "It was on my mind. Finally I got up. I took the shoe and beat her. I continued to beat her until she was quiet."

Heffernan said the wife, Paula Mona, 27, a radio singer and actress whom Wolfe married in Palestine 10 years ago, came to the United States only recently for a reunion with her husband after a six months' separation.

"I thought she was unfaithful to me," Heffernan said Wolfe told him. "I thought. maybe she had met somebody else on the boat."

About midnight last night, Heffernan added, the contractor called police to the hotel and told them he had killed his wife.

Arraigned on a homicide charge, Wolfe was held without bail for a hearing Jan. 3.

Roosevelt Appears Likely Candidate For Fourth Term

Washington, Dec. 30 — (AP) — The consensus of political Washington today appeared to be that President Roosevelt is a candidate for a fourth term on a platform promising to win the war and then to link the economic and military future of the United States with that of other nations.

That was the deliberative Republican interpretation of Mr. Roosevelt's news conference action Tuesday in laying at rest the new deal for a win-the-war program, in warning against economic and military isolation after the war and in outlining a program of proposed postwar expansion in security, employment, recreation, education, health and housing.

Some high ranking Democrats agreed privately with this view and Senator Carl Hatch (Dem., N.M.) went so far as to reiterate publicly his prediction that if the war is still on, Mr. Roosevelt will be renominated and re-elected.

The Republicans greeted the President's abandonment of the New Deal with scornful assertions that he was far behind the rest of the United States, but the Democrats generally thought the win-the-war slogan was fine — if it could be made to catch on.

Vice-president Henry Wallace, a member of the New Deal team since its inception, told a reporter he thought Mr. Roosevelt "has furnished the right slogan for the moment."

JAP BOOSTER BROADCASTS

LETTER CARRIERS TO HAVE HOLIDAY

Postal letter carriers will take one of the infrequent holidays on New Year's Day, it is announced by Postmaster J. V. C. Truaisch, who today indicated there would be no parcel post or letter carrier delivery on the holiday. Air mail and special delivery service would be given as usual, it was stated.

Post office wickets will be open from eight in the morning until noon while the lobby will be open from six-thirty in the morning until six in the evening. Mails will be despatched from the office and received as usual and there will be one evening street letter box collection.

COINCIDENCE NOTED AT COUNTY COURT

It was something of a coincidence but it just so happened there was no occasion for a session of County Police Court at the Court House today. "Everything is quiet and serene", remarked Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson, but it remained to have Magistrate J. L. Lloyd bring forth the fact that on the Thursday prior to the New Year in 1942 there was no session of County Police Court. Thus, today marks the first time there has been no such court in the city for exactly a year.

DENIES SPAIN RECOGNIZES NEW MUSSOLINI GOVERNMENT

Madrid, Dec. 30—(AP)—Authorized Spanish sources denied flatly today that Spain has recognized Mussolini's new Fascist "government" in Italy as claimed Tuesday night in a Berlin broadcast.

These sources added that Gen. Francisco Franco's government has no intention of recognizing the Italian puppet regime.

Ontario Business College Notes

The year 1943 has been one of intense business activity and the need for well-trained office workers has been greater than ever before.

A large number of young people have gone out from Ontario Business College this year to good positions. Many more could have been placed had they been ready and available when asked for. The demand has far exceeded the number that could be supplied. Apparently this condition will continue during 1944.

When there is not sufficient office help available with proper qualifications, it compels business concerns and the Government to employ some incompetent and untrained personnel. After the war is over such a condition will not be tolerated and only those properly qualified will be then employed. So it behooves young people to equip themselves now with the proper training while there are good permanent positions available.

Any one of average ability can in a few months be made ready for and practically certain of getting a good position, provided, of course, he or she works and co-operates with the College staff. The O.B.C. standards are high, but the work is not difficult. Efficient, painstaking teachers give students the individual instruction needed to make rapid progress possible.

Since the summer holidays in July, the attendance has been large and steadily growing. Six students have recently come from Quebec, two of whom are daughters of O.B.C. graduates. Another recent arrival is from Florida, U.S.A.

Many new students will start courses after the Christmas holidays. Classes will be resumed at 9 a.m., Monday, Jan. 3rd. You may enter then or any school day thereafter.

Contract Let To Rebuild Crystal Hotel

Telephonic confirmation from Ottawa that a government permit authorizing immediate commencement of repairs and redecorating at the Crystal Hotel on Front Street has been received by the proprietor, Mr. Charles Treverton, it was learned yesterday afternoon. Several thousand dollars damage was caused at the hotel last Thursday morning when in sub-zero weather a stubborn fire caused firemen several hours' work before being extinguished.

Although the fire burned for several hours before being completely extinguished, smoke and water damage at the hotel comprised a large percentage of the total damage. The fire was confined principally to the basement of the north side of the hotel with the floor of the men's beverage room falling in as the result of fire damage to stringers.

Despite the fact the fire was confined to the lower floor, heavy smoke permeated the entire building causing damage to linens and clothing, while steam loosened plaster which will have to be replaced. Contract for structural repairs has been let to E. F. Rutherford, local contractor, with work expected to commence before the week is out.

Public Urged To Be Careful On New Year's

With the approach of New Year's Eve again Chief W. R. Probert requests tolerance in the matter of drinking and the driving of motor cars.

"The response from our suggestion of not to drive if drinking at Christmas time was met with the hearty co-operation of all citizens. However, again we urge the New Year's Eve celebrants to refrain from driving if the occasion of drinking intoxicants enters in the surrounding picture," urged Chief Probert in his New Year's message to the public.

"I would like to wish all citizens a very happy and prosperous New Year and at the same time request their co-operation in the matter of hilarious New Year's celebration. If you find it necessary to drink, please don't drive your motor car. There has been a light fall of snow recently, which naturally makes the streets somewhat slippery and tends more towards skidding. This, coupled with drinking, might result in serious accident. So, again I urge—if you drink, don't drive, and if you have to drive—well then, don't drink, and then we'll all enjoy a Happy New Year," requested Chief Probert.

Belleville Pilot Sees Rocket Shell Explosion

PO. A. G. McCauley Tells of Observing Multiple-Exploding Rocket in Raid Over Berlin

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 30— (CP Cable)—German anti-aircraft defences have added to their arsenal two new weapons—a multiple-exploding rocket and a new kind of flare—Canadian fliers returning from last night's raid on Berlin reported today.

PO. A. G. McCauley, a Belleville, Ont., pilot, said he saw a rocket shell which seemed to explode, continue on its way, then explode again at various intervals.

The new flare was reported by WO. J. T. Hill of Lloydminster, Sask. He said this flare was shot up from the ground in the usual way, but burned for only a few seconds instead of the customary 15 minutes as is the case with fighter flares sent up to illuminate attacking aircraft to fighter planes.

"I imagine it must have been a sort of bluff in order to put us off," Hill said, "as none of the fighters actually appeared."

Tpr. M. Spencely Killed in Action

Happy recollections of their 64th wedding anniversary celebrated Christmas week were saddened for Mr. and Mrs. James H. Grills, 158 Church Street, upon notification from Ottawa, that their granddaughter's husband, Trooper Morley R. Spencely of Oshawa, had been killed in action in Italy. A member of the Ontario Regiment, Trooper Spencely, with a chum, Pte. J. Farrer, had been killed on December 16th.

Going overseas in June, 1940, Trooper Spencely had been married to Miss Dorothy Pigden, Mr. and Mrs. Grills' granddaughter, only eleven day when he enlisted. Mrs. Spencely is daughter of Mr. and Mr. James Pigden of Oshawa. She received notification of her husband's death on Monday.

Lt. Frank Clarke Wounded in Italy

Official information indicating that Lieut. Frank D. Clarke, son of Dr. and Mrs. M. J. Clarke, 23 Chatham Street, had been wounded while in action in Italy, was received yesterday. The nature of the wounds was not described in the initial report, however.

Lieut. Clarke was educated in Belleville and after graduating from the Collegiate Institute became attached to the Argyll Light Infantry before the war. He enlisted in the Canadian Tank Corps and saw active service in North Africa before proceeding to Sicily and then Italy where he was wounded.

Lieut. Clarke has two brothers in the service, Capt. John M. Clarke of the Dental Corps in England and Lieut. Norman Clarke, who is at present an instructor at the Canadian Army Training School at Simcoe.

FEE IS $5,000 WAR BOND

Boston, Dec. 30—(AP)— A mere $5,000 fee will be required to make a single reservation to spend a New Year's even frolic at one of Boston's Hotel night clubs. The $5,000 fee must be in the form of a newly purchased United States war bond Dec. 31 for that amount.

NO WOMAN WORTH IT SAYS JUDGE

Chicago, Dec. 30—(AP)—"No woman is worth killing yourself for," Municipal Judge Francis Borrelli told John Jankaskas, 27, when he freed him on a charge of disorderly conduct yesterday. Jankaskas had admitted he attempted to end his life with gas because his wife had left him. "If your wife doesn't come back to you," Judge Borrelli told Jankaskas, "find another."

AUSTRALIA

So when Gen. MacArthur arrived with American troops, they were received with almost hysterical enthusiasm. Nothing was too good for them. With their snappy uniforms and their pockets full of money they were everything that the Australian girls had pictured them. The Australian girls fell for them and fell for them hard. The Australian soldier with his useful, but rather slouchy uniform and his less gallant manners was pushed to one side.

There were many marriages with American soldiers. There were no accurate figures obtainable, but it was said that in Sydney alone there were between 2,000 and 3,000 marriages and in Perth, we were told, there were 300 marriages. There have been 30 divorces in Perth alone in which American officers or soldiers have been named as correspondents. Most of these Australian girls now are trying to obtain passage back to the United States, and there is naturally a good deal of doubt in many cases as to how these marriages will work out. It is exactly the same problem which the Canadians and the English have faced in England in the last war and in this. The American authorities have stepped in and permission to marry is not being granted without considerable investigation.

When the Australian soldiers came back from Africa and Europe there was naturally a good deal of resentment over the situation they found. These 'diggers" had fought in Africa, in Greece, in Crete and in Syria. Now they were being rushed to New Guinea, because they were hardened and seasoned troops, to face the worst fighting in the world.

Aussies Resented Yanks.

They found the Americans with much larger pay and more money in their pockets. The Australians could not get taxicabs; the Americans had forced the price of whisky up so high it was unobtainable—which may or may not have been a good thing for the Australians, according to the way you look at it. The Australians started talking about chocolate soldiers. The Americans retorted that they had come to Australia to save them and the Australians shot back: "We thought you were refugees from Pearl Harbor". And so frankly there were a lot of clashes between American and Australian soldiers.

However, that has blown over now and all the time we were in Australia we did not see a solitary incident, nor did we hear of one. The Americans and Australians are getting along as well together as one could expect when soldiers in such large numbers meet together. In Brisbane, which is overrun with soldiers, both American and Australian, the authorities have done a smart thing. They send out the military police, one American and one Australian, together. This worked well. The nearer the troops are to the front the better they get along together. They have learned to respect each other's fighting ability.

Naturally the presence of so many Americans is bound to have some influence on Australian life. Baseball, for example, is growing in popularity in Australia, although it is doubtful if it will crowd out cricket. The Australian girls are dressing more and more like Americans. But, generally speaking when the war is over and the Americans leave—and very few will remain to settle in Australia —the commonwealth will go its own way again and work out its own civilization.

Harmony Among Officials

If there has been some trouble between the soldiers what about the Australian and American high officials? Gen. MacArthur and Prime Minister Curtin took to each other when they first met. They became close friends and have cooperated 100 per cent in working out the defences of Australia and in planning the campaign against Japan. There might easily have been a lot of friction because Gen. MacArthur had almost to assume for a time the role of dictator and he asked a lot of hard things of Australia.

What about the future? The feeling of resentment toward Great Britain has largely passed away. Australia is quite determined today to remain a part of the British Commonwealth of Nations. This has been made very clear in speeches of Mr. Curtin.

The attitude of Australia today is very similar to that of Canada towards the republic. They want to be good neighbors with the United States, they are anxious to cooperate in working out the future destiny of the Pacific Ocean; they realize that in future they will have to play a more important part in world affairs and peculiarly in Pacific affairs. They have no thought of leaving the British Empire but they are prepared as a member of the commonwealth, to work closely with the United States in bringing about a world peace and a better world.

A DRY LAUNCHING

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 30—(AP)—"God bless you and speed you through the dangerous waters," said sponsor Mrs. Morley E. Mackenzie of Toronto, and she smacked a champagne bottle on its nose. Bands played, a crowd of 800 looked on. But the freighter S. S. Defiance didn't budge on the Moorse Shipyard ways, and a dry launching unique in maritime history was completed. Workers belonging to an A. F. L. Carpenters' (shipwright) Union had gone on strike and refused yesterday to pull the blocks from under the vessel.

Woman Found Dead, Slashes on Body

Camden, N.J., Dec. 30 — (AP) — Attractive, 33-year-old Mrs. Elvira Alice Rodia, who was awaiting induction into the United States Women's Army Corps, was found dead on a lonely Delaware township road last night with slashes on her face and body.

Assistant Camden County Prosecutor Anthony Mitchell said early today that her husband, Edward, 40, a Philadelphia taxi driver, had admitted slashing her with a straight razor which was found near the body.

Chief of Camden County Detectives Lawrence Doran said Rodia told him the slashing occurred after his wife, who had been living with her mother for several weeks, told him a reconciliation was impossible and that she had been accepted for enlistment in the W.A.C.

[illegible] charge has been placed against Rodia.

3 P. E. County Soldiers Reported Wounded in Italy

Picton, Dec. 30 — Three Prince Edward County young men with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Italy have been wounded and a member of the R.C.A.F. is missing.

The soldiers are Pte. Warren Emorey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Emorey, who went overseas in 1940.

Pte. Oswald Milner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Milner, was wounded in Sicily but returned to action and was again wounded in Italy.

Pte. Clifford Cole, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cole, had been wounded Dec. 15.

The messages from the Director of Records at Ottawa stated that nature or extent of the wounds had not been ascertained and details would follow.

Pilot Officer Norman Maybee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Maybee, Wellington, was officially reported missing on Dec. 20th. A later message stated that the flier was seen to bail out of his plane over France and he is believed to be safe. He was attached to a night fighter squadron and had taken part in many raids over the continent.

Pte. Arthur B. Clapp of Milford has also been wounded, his mother, Mrs. Manetta Clapp, has been advised. He went over with the First Division and in a recent letter home told of a thrilling experience in taking supplies by mule train to the unit which had been cut off from its base by the enemy.

Wolf Hunt

Athol and South Marysburgh township councils met at Cherry Valley Monday night to plan a wolf hunt. This will be held when the first snow comes, to permit tracking. Two hundred have volunteered to take part and the two townships will be thoroughly searched for the maranders which have killed many sheep. Two have been shot in Athol and one in South Marysburgh, but all were males, leading to the belief the females and others are still there. The province, county and township each offer $25 rewards for each wolf shot, making a total of $75. A wolf was shot last weekend in Athol by L/Cpl. Lewis Rorabeck after it had been chased all day by Lawrence Hineman. It weighed 35 pounds.

Visit Hospital

Patients in the R.A.F. hospital were cheered on Christmas day when 39 gaily colored bags containing a variety of gifts were distributed from the tree. These were prepared by the Red Cross and were taken to the hospital by Mrs. C. H. McGibbon, Mrs. N. Welsh, Mrs. F. Kemsley and Mrs. E. L. Bronskill. The ladies provided afternoon tea for the staff and gave each patient a book. They were shown through the fine hospital and assured that their visits were welcome. More books will be sent for the library there.

The Wellington committee, under Mrs. Ira Burd, similarly looked after Mt. View Station.

The county women are doing grand work and so far this year have turned in more than 1,000 quilts, though materials have been scarce.

A box of articles to be mended has been received from Mt. View Station and the Red Cross workers seek to be helpful in any way possible.

Work room activity is being resumed with cutting on Monday and sewing on Tuesday. There are ten seamen's leather jackets to be made. There is plenty of work to be done and workers are urged not to slacken their efforts.

Xmas Party

The Rotary Club entertained their wives and children at a Christmas party at Globe Hotel. The 18 kiddies were seated for lunch at a long, gaily decorated table. President Ed. Mr. Walden was at the piano. The children marched to where Santa was seated by a tree and presented their gifts which were placed in Christmas cheer baskets. In turn they received a sock of candy. All voted it an enjoyable affair, including the parents, who enjoyed the light refreshments served them.

Hastings-Belleville Suburban Roads Commission '43 Outlay Under $3,500, Main Work on College St. East

Jamieson Bone, Belleville's representative on the Hastings-Belleville Suburban Roads Commission, in his report for the year 1943 to Mayor Rollins and members of the city council points out that the outlay on repairs and upkeep of roads has been kept down to a little under $3,500. The main work performed this year was the raising of College Street east of the Corbyville Road to the C.N.R. Round House. Mr. Bone's report follows in detail:-

"On account of the war we again decided to keep down expenses and work, and only perform such repairs and upkeep as are necessary to proper service. In the beginning of the year we estimated our total expenditures as $4,500 but they will be a little under $3,500.

"The principle work done by us was the raising of College Street between the Corbyville Road and the C.N.R. round house. This road you will remember has been a bone of contention between the City and County for 20 years to my knowledge and has always been flooded and impassable in the Spring. The surface of this road was raised to a maximum depth of 18" in the lowest spot and for a distance of 600'. A 30" wood stave culvert was installed and the ditch running from this culvert under the C.N.R. tracks was thoroughly cleaned out with a bulldozer so that all the adjoining swamp land will be permanently drained. This is the same water course that used to cause the city so much trouble and is now conveyed by you underneath Memorial Park and into the river. The C.N.R. legal department asked us to sign all sorts of impossible and absurd undertakings, which we refused to sign, and I am not sure that the matter has been fixed up yet, nor am I at all sure that it is possible to make a bilateral agreement with the C.N.R. legal department. The only agreement that appeals to them is one that is entirely in their favor. The ditch dug from the swamp was 400' long by 7' wide at the bottom and varies from 1' to 3½' deep. We considered this a great favor to the C.N.R. but they consider the favor to be all ours.

"We also took over from the county the road running on the south of the C.N.R. tracks from the Swift Canadian Company to the coal chute crossing. Part of this road was new this year and had to have some attention, which we [illegible] to the C.N.R.

"If the council has any recommendations to make in the matter of suburban roads I would be glad to have their views."

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones, family and Mrs. W. Westfall, entertained on Christmas Day, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Westfall and family, Mrs. R. Jeffery, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Westfall and family, also Mr. and Mrs. L. Westfall and family of Trenton.

Sea Defeats for Hitler

Another German naval disaster has been reported following close on the report of the loss of the German battleship Scharnhorst in the Arctic on Sunday last. Now three Nazi destroyers have been sunk and others crippled in the waters of the southern part of the Bay of Biscay. In the same area an Axis blockade runner with goods from the Far East was sent to the bottom by British coastal planes.

News of the sinking of the German destroyers came in a joint Admiralty and Air Ministry communique.

These two smashing naval blows have, as "Red Fleet," the official Soviet publication says, virtually caused the German battle fleet to cease to exist. "The hour came when Hitler had to play his last card. That was when the Scharnhorst was trumped," Red Fleet says.

Germany's desperate position with her naval losses and her Luftwaffe which has long since lost its effective power to stage an offensive, it is said, forced Hitler's hand to try and save the lost U-boat campaign by throwing in the Scharnhorst to try and redeem the submarine warfare.

Report is that Hitler himself personally ordered the Scharnhorst to put to sea. If he did he once again took a grave step as far as Germany was concerned. His achievement in strategy has been notoriously weak as decisions in Russia, at Stalingrad and elsewhere, and in North Africa, led to shattering defeats of the German army.

Time and the steadfastness of the United Nations which have given the opportunity for the development and the full use of Allied resources have latterly been hitting Hitler hard with the neutralizing of his naval power and of his submarine warfare, the frustration of the German air force, the battering and pulverizing of German industrial cities and communication lines, and the sequence of Allied victories in Russia and in North Africa, in Sicily, and now on the continent of Italy. The looming in the West of the gigantic power of British and American forces for the thrust at Hitler's dominated Europe is a new worry to Hitler.

Quinine

According to the News Bulletin of the National Geographic Society, quinine may again be produced in South America. It seems that there are 700,000 "forgotten" quinine-bearing acres in Columbia. The quinine prescribed by doctors is not native to The Netherlands Indies, the pre-war source of supply, but a foster child left on a foreign "doorstep" less than a century ago when seeds were carried abroad from parent trees in Peru.

C.N.R. Wartime Operation

The Canadian National Railways have made history in 1943. Final figures will show that both the operating net revenues and cash surplus will surpass all previous records by substantial margins. It is the source of much satisfaction that this is achieved in a year when the railway has been able to do its greatest service in the war effort of the Dominion.

All the system's vast resources, human and material, have been used to the utmost to handle the immense flow of traffic, freight and passenger, that developed through the year as the tempo of war quickened. Freight traffic is estimated in 1943 to have reached 36,233,000,000 ton miles, as against 31,729,000,000 ton miles in 1942, an increase for the year of 14.2 per cent and an increase over 1939 of 112.1% and of 213.7% over 1933 when the depression began to lift. Passenger traffic is estimated to have reached 3,633,000,000 passenger miles in 1943, an increase of 315.2% over 1939 and 446.3% over 1933.

This great increase of traffic was handled in 1943 by a staff only 7.5% more than in 1942, with a decrease of 0.2% in the number of locomotives owned and with increases of only 2.4% and of 1.6% respectively by the numbers of freight cars and passenger cars owned by the company. While the figures do not tell the full story because of improvements in equipment, roadbed and so forth that have since been made, still, it is interesting to observe that the vastly increased war traffic on the C.N.R. in 1943 was handled with 16.6 per cent fewer locomotives, 15.5% fewer freight cars and 4.7% more passenger cars than was the traffic of 1917, a comparable year of the last World War.

The gross revenue last year was $375,000,000 and this year it is believed it will reach the total of $440,000,000. Last year after paying operating costs, the net operating revenue was $86,000,000 and after payment of taxes, fixed charges and so on, the surplus for the year was $25,000,000. The over-all surplus for this year will be substantially increased over the 1942 figure.

This is a fine record for the railway and it reflects credit upon the devotion to duty of management and employees.

Another Report of Mussolini

Another story is out about Mussolini, that he died ten days ago in a German hospital "from long-standing stomach trouble and complicated by acute mental derangement," but it does not trouble the world, which is now well rid of this man who played an ignoble part, wrecked with his infamy his own Italy and tried to collect glory and wealth by treachery and foul play against humanity. There is no certainty that the report is correct but the world does not care. Mussolini does not count any more and it is well for the world that he is wherever he is and in whatever state he is in — for he won't be able to trouble mankind again.

Whatever fate meets him can never be adequate for one who in selfishness caused the loss of many thousands of lives.

If one desires to moralize Mussolini's course and his rapid descent show the inevitable decline and collapse of any regime or personality built on wrongdoing.

If Mussolini has gone to pieces physically and mentally it is because he flouted the laws of heaven, nature and man, because he used evil to try to overthrow good, because he set his hand against every other man's hand except those of his criminal associates.

At this time two other arch plotters of iniquity, Hitler and Tojo, are passing through the stage which inevitably leads to destruction and death. About them and those that support their aggression the clouds of justice and vengeance have gathered and there can be but one ending, destruction of everything pertaining to Hitler and Tojo and their governments.

Hitler and Tojo can read their approaching end in part in the collapse of that wretched, miserable figure who once went by the names of Duce and Mussolini, now hated and scorned and used by his fellow criminals like Hitler and Goebbels and Tojo and the latter's barbaric associates.

Mussolini has been a sort of living corpse in Germany, or wherever he is, a sign of what Hitler and Tojo are to become in the time that is hurrying forward.

1,000,000 tons more cereals for bread and more than 250,000 tons more potatoes have been grown in Britain this year than in last year's record-breaking effort. This harvest is the greatest yield per acre of these products since officials records have been kept.

PUBLIC SPEAKER'S WIFE

Once more, while thinking of the wives
Who comfort us and grace our lives,
With all we bring to them of care
And toil and loneliness to bear;
With all men ask along life's road,
Of hosiery darned and buttons sewed;
Of "Whereabouts my shirt and tie?
Where have you hidden them, and why?"
I'd say she leads a sorry life
Who is a public speaker's wife!

When first it dawns upon "the peach"
Her husband loves to make a speech,
And learns the man to whom she's wed
With fancy phrase has stocked his head,
And likes, as Yorick, long before,
"To set the table on a roar,"
And thinks whene'er he tells a tale
He makes it fresh, however stale,
That wife is doomed at home to sit,
Despising eloquence and wit.

At first, at banquet tables she
On exhibition, too, will be.
But by and by, when she has heard
And knows from first to closing word,
From opening jest to climax strong,
Her husband's speeches, brief or long,
She finds at home she'd rather stay
Than have her evenings drag away,
And nightly being asked to stand
To take a bow and get a hand.

When rings the 'phone her head will shake
It means another speech to make!
The morning mail, as sure as fate,
Brings in another banquet date.
One speech means more. The man is weak;
He can't decline requests to speak.
And since so often he's away,
None will dispute me when I say
A public speaker's wife is not
An altogether happy lot.

On Night Patrol With U.S. "Plywood Navy"

Famous Novelist is Passenger on Swift Little PT Boat as It Bags Enemy Bomber and Attacks a German Convoy Off the Coast of Italy

John Steinbeck, the famous author, wrote the following account of a night patrol of the "Plywood Navy" off the coast of Italy, after his recent return to the United States from air assignment as war correspondent.

The orders were simple. The naval task force was to destroy or drive German shipping out of the sea in the whole area north of Rome. German convoys were moving out of various ports, possibly heavy equipment from Italy to the south of France. The task force was ordered to break up this traffic.

It is not permitted to say what units comprised the force, but at least a part of it was a group of torpedo boats, some British MTB's and some American PT's.

The afternoon before the attack was spent in putting the boats ready. The gunners had their guns apart, oiling and scrubbing the salt spray from the working parts. The guns on the little boats must be worked on all the time. Even the cartridge cases turn green from the constant splashing with salt water.

In the afternoon the torpedoes were inspected and the fuel tanks filled to the limit.

As the sun went down, the work was finished and dinner was started in the tiny galleys of the "Plywood Navy." The force was to sail at dark. Long before dark the moon was up. It would set after 2 in the morning and it was planned to be on the ground and ready for attack as soon as the moon had set.

The Air Attack

Just at dusk the motors burst into roars one at a time and then settled down to their throbbing beat. These motors can be quieted so that they make very little noise, but in ordinary running they sound like airplanes.

The moonlit night came, and the little boats moved out from their berths and, once clear of the breakwater, they formed in three lines and settled down to traveling speed.

On 412 the master and his first stood on the little bridge. The spray came over the bow in long, swishing spurts as the PT put her nose down into the easy swells and the light wind picked up the splash. Their faces were dripping.

A call came from aft—"Aircraft at 9 o'clock!"

The men at the turrets and at the after gun swung their weapons sharp to the left and elevated the muzzles, and the gunners peered uneasily into the milky, moonlit sky.

Then off to the port side in the milky sky there was the dark shape of a plane and not flying very high The gunners stirred and followed the shape with the muzzles. It was too far off to fire. The master picked up his megaphone and called "He'll come in from the side if he's coming. Watch for him." The drone of the plane disappeared.

"Maybe he didn't see us," the first said.

"With our wake? Sure he saw us. Maybe he was one of ours."

He must have cut his motors. Suddenly, he is overhead and his bomb lands and explodes just after he passes over. The roar of the explosion and the battering of the machine guns come at once. A wall of spray comes over the side from the explosion and the boat seems to leap out of the sea.

The lines of the tracers reach for the disappearing plane and the lines seem to curve the way the stream from a hose does when you move the hose. Then the guns are silent. The master calls: "Watch out for him. He may be back. Watch for him from the same side." The gunners obediently swing their guns about.

This time he didn't cut his motors. Maybe he needed altitude. You could hear him coming. The guns started on him before he was overhead and the curving lines of tracers followed him over and each line was a little bit behind him. And then one line jumped ahead. A little blue light showed on him then. For a moment he seemed to hover and then he fell, end over end, but slowly, and the blue light on him got larger and larger as he came down.

The rest of the guns were after him as he came down. He landed about 500 yards away and the moment he struck the water he broke into a great yellow flame and then a second later he exploded with a dull boom and the fire was sucked down under the sea and he was gone.

"Good shooting," said the captain.

A signal light blinked from the command boat and 412 swung out of line and raced toward the Italian shore. Then, its mission finished, it slid quietly back to sea and set out in search of its companions.

The captain said, "Keep your eyes peeled for the others. We don't want our own people to smack us." He went down into the little chartroom again and studied his charts. Then he poked his head up and spoke to his first, "A port isn't far off now," he said. "Let's get there. We might catch a convoy."

On top of his words there came a distant drumming of engines.

The captain cocked his head a little. "Something wrong," he said. "Doesn't sound right," and he cocked his head on the other side, like a listening spaniel. "Ever heard an E-boat?" he asked.

"You know damn well I haven't."

"Neither have I," said the captain, "but those don't sound like PT's or MTB's to me. He peered over the rail. The signalman had his blinker ready to make a recognition signal.

The captain said quickly, "Kill the motor."

Through the misty, milky light the E-boats came. They seemed to grow up out of the night, the misty shapes of them high prowed and unmistakable. The 412 drifted easily in the water.

The captain said hoarsely to the signalman, "Don't signal, for God's sake!" He was silent for a moment and there seemed to be E-boats all around. "Listen," the captain said. "We've maybe got to make a crash run. I don't know when."

The E-boats moved slowly past. They must have seen the 412 lying uneasily in the moonlight. Perhaps it didn't occur to them that a hostile craft would lie so still so near to their guns. The breathing of the crew was almost audible.

The E-boats were nearly past engines of the 412 roared and the boat leaped in the water. She stood up on her own crest and tore away. Her wake in the last of the moonlight was creamy behind her. She whipped over the water like a gull. But the E-boats did not fire on her. They continued placidly on their way.

Five minutes of the run and the first throttled down and the 412 settled back into the water and leveled out and the sound of her motors died away.

The captain whistled to himself, "That was close. Let's lie here and get our breath."

The Attack on Enemy Convoy

The moon lay close to the water at last. In a few minutes it would be dark, deliciously dark, safe and dark. The men stirred about nervously on the silent boat.

And then across the moon a dark shape moved and then another. "Good God," the captain said, "there's a convoy. That's what the E-boats were for." A large dark hull moved across the moon. "We've got to get to them," the captain said excitedly.

"They'll get us, sure," said the first.

"No they won't."

He called his orders softly. The torpedo men moved to their places. The 412 turned silently and slipped toward the passed convoy. There seemed to be ships of all sizes and the 412 could see them against the sinking moon and they could not see the 412.

"That's big one," the captain said. "She must be at least 5,000 tons." He issued his orders and took the wheel himself. Then he swung the boat and called softly. "Fire!"

There was a sharp explosive whisk of sound and a splash and the torpedo was away. He swung again and fired another. And his mouth moved as though he were counting.

Then, without warning, the sea and the sky tore to pieces in a vomit of light and a moment later the 412 nearly jumped out of the water. "Run," the captain shouted. "Run!" And the 412 leaped up on its fantail again and pushed its bow into the air.

The explosion was gone almost the moment it had started. There wasn't much of any fire. It just subsided and the water closed over it.

"Ammunition," the captain shouted. "Ammunition or high test gasoline."

But the rest of the fleet was not silent. The tracers reached out for the sea and the rockets. The cross fire reached to sea and combed the sea and searched the sea.

Some time later the captain touched his first's arm and the first pulled down the boat again. In the distance, as the moon went down, the E-boats were probably beating the ocean looking for the 412 or the submarine or whatever had hit their ship. But the 412 had got away.

INVASION HEADS

Final disposition of the invasion forces depends to a large degree on German moves between now and Day. Both sides are trying to outguess one another in the greatest military chess game in the world, with victory in Europe as the stake.

Nazi Divisions Smaller

The biggest question to concern the Allied invasion command will be location of the German forces—approximately 300 field divisions—and their future deployment.

At the moment Western Europe is held by about 47 divisions, 40 in France and the Netherlands and seven in Norway. There are nearly 197 on the Russian front, 25 in Italy—with 10 in the line facing the 15th Army group—18 in the Balkans and seven in Finland.

During the last two years German divisions have become smaller and few run to the former strength of 15,000 men. The strategic reserve which Hitler hitherto held behind the fronts now is believed to have practically disappeared.

Thus there is no great reserve of trained manpower to stem the Russian advances, cope with Marshal Josep Broz' (Tito) Balkan Partisan Army of 250,000, meet the pressure of the 7th and 5th armies in Italy and prepare to face western invasion.

However, it is likely that more divisions will be switched to the west to meet what German military writers have stated will be a 50-division assault by the Allied forces. The truth of this estimate will be shown only when the Allied attack goes in.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

"...we must fight on as fought the pioneers of the early days in Canada, the strong stern men who kept in sight their goal of Canada's best interests against all difficulties and obstacles. Let our motto be the same as theirs — 'Fortitude in Distress.' There are breakers ahead, but we shall reach the shore if we fight on."

An invitation to a wedding made settlers forget their troubles in a [illegible]. Even those not asked to the Big doings heard about them through the "grape-vine" system, which worked just as well then as now. Before the ministers began to make their circuits, every betrothed pair had to get a magistrate to publish their banns and to marry them. It is related that one couple who lived far from either preacher or magistrate did not have the ceremony performed until their children were full grown.

As the Day drew near, women friends of the bride walked or drove long distances to help with the preparations. The log cabins grew fragrant with the aroma of freshly baked bread, cakes and other goodies—of which great quantities were made to satisfy the hearty appetites of the wedding guests. In the evening, after the preacher had given his blessing the fiddler tuned his instrument and dancing kept up 'til morning.

The visiting ministers usually travelled about on horseback. It took them several weeks to cover their districts, and there were always three or four services a day at each stopping place. Distances were discouraging . . . miles and miles of little-travelled roads between settlements . . . and these became mere trails through dense forests. Frequently when night came on preachers would find themselves stranded far from any habitation. They'd spend long sleepless hours under the trees, their ears cocked for the sound of prowling wolves. Then the lullabies of the pines were an irritation, for other sounds were lost in the music... On reaching their destination they held services in the largest available room, or in the open air if the weather allowed and the throngs were extra large. Many a time and oft the members of these congregations walked ten miles or more to take part in the meetings. It was quite the thing to go barefoot to save shoe leather. On went the boots when the traveller came within sight of the settlement!

ONE-THOUSAND COMETS

Every little while it is announced that somebody in one part or another of the world has "discovered a new comet."

There is something awe-inspiring about comets, and the popular interest in these strange denizens of the ether has always been great.

It is estimated that nearly 1,000 comets have been seen.

Of these about 400 appeared before the invention of the telescope, which means that they must have been very bright.

A comet that is visible to the naked eye for only a few weeks may be followed through the telescope for years.

Even some of the smallest known comets are larger than the earth.

The "Great Comet" of 1811 was larger than the sun and was 1,000,000 miles in diameter.

Generally speaking, a conspicuous comet appears within our range of vision about every decade and a really remarkable one about every thirty years.

The comets known to us are "part of our universe." Like the earth and other planets, they travel in an elliptic path around the sun, but their orbits are more elongated than those of the planets.

There are about 50 known comets with orbitary periods of less than a century.

Halley's comet, with a period of about 75 years, has been traced back through ancient records for about 2,000 years. It was first observed in 1682 by Edmund Halley, whose name has become associated with it because he figured out its cycle and predicted its return.

The tails of comets are always pointed away from the sun.

Comets shine mainly by their own light and only partly like planets by reflected sunlight.

They consist of gas and swarms of meteoric particles held loosely together by gravity. On at least two occasions the earth has passed through the tails of major comets without suffering any ill effects. It happened in the case of the comets of 1861 and 1910. Apparently the gases in the tail of a comet are so rarefied that they have no effect whatever upon the atmosphere of the earth.

Astronomers indicate the size of comets, like stars, in terms of magnitudes."

Halley did not live to see the return of his comet. He died at 86 in 1742, but the comet showed up again in 1758, just as he had predicted.

TUGGLE—LANGDON

Trenton — Decorations of evergreen and poinsettas, guest pews marked with sprigs of holly and Union Jacks and Stars and Stripes marking lands of birth of bride and groom; adorning the front of the church characterized a typical Yuletide wedding when on Monday, Dec. 27th, at three o'clock, in King Street United Church, Trenton, Jennie Elizabeth Langdon, Reg.N., daughter of Mr. H. S. Langdon and the late Mrs. Langdon, became the bride of Flying Officer William Tuggle, R.C.A.F., Dunnville, Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Tuggle of Ross, California. The Rev. J. D. Many Coupons Expire At End of the Year

As far as all practical use to the consumer is concerned, the No. 2 Ration Book will become a mere museum-piece on New Year's Day, for none of the coupons remaining in it will then possess the slightest value for the purchase of rationed goods. All the butter coupons in the book have long since expired and on December 31 all the sugar and tea or coffee coupons in the book will similarly expire, along with meat coupons 26, the only ones of that series in the old book which still possess validity.

The Local Ration Board points out that the coupons expiring with the close of 1943 are not, however, confined to the No. 2 (old) ration book. Butter coupons 38, 39, 40 and 41 in the current (No. 3) book will be worthless after December 31 in the hands of the consumer and so will meat coupons 27, 28 and 29. In addition, all canning sugar coupons will be without value to the consumer when New Year's Day dawns.

In view of the continuing necessity of all rationed foods being conserved wherever possible, the Board suggests that wherever a consumer has no real need of the foods which the expiring coupons represent, the latter should be destroyed.

Reports reaching the Board indicate that in a large number of households the ration allowances of one or more of the commodities rationed are in excess of normal consumption. Wherever such a condition exists and the foods in question are not really required, national service will be rendered and the entire supply situation assisted by unneeded coupons being destroyed.

Ration Coupon Calendar

AS AT DECEMBER 30.

STOLE SANTA CLAUS

Los Angeles, Dec. 30—(AP)—He's gone, red flannel suit, excelsior insides and all. He was part of a holiday display, and why anyone would want him, nobody knows. But Fred Starnes, a film worker, told police: "Somebody's stolen Santa Claus."

The Marry-Go-Round

Slacks —And Charm.

Some critics have objected to the wearing of slacks by the war-working girl. But nobody can deny that the girls in uniform look their snappiest and most attractive. Why not in slacks?

It may be true that there are some girls who look sloppy and baggy in slacks and others who look trim and neat, just as some women look baggy in mink coats while others can carry them off, with style. But I don't agree with these pessimists who declare that slacks are discouraging to romance and unsightly to the masculine eye.

Men MUST love women, after all! Once the masculine eye gets accustomed to a working girl's garb it will be as easy for him to admire a girl in slacks as in skirts.

Men have loved us in so many weird and grotesque guises and disguises; we can't seem to disillusion them, no matter how hard we try!

They've loved us when we went around with rings in our noses and our hair wild and scrambled in prehistoric days—and they've loved us in huge ruffs and jewelled stomachers in Elizabethan days.

They've loved us in mother-hubbards and buckram—and in shorts and beach-pajamas. They've loved us in hoopskirts, powdered wigs and high-necked cotton nighties—and in boyish bobs, shaved necks and skirts above the knees.

They've loved us in pompadours, false puffs, cast-iron corsets and bustles that protruded twenty-four inches, making us look like sacred camels or acute cases of spinal disease—and they've loved us in dark goggles and a sun-tan that made us look like Hottentots.

They've loved us when we were fat and buxom and roly-poly—and they've loved us when we were hipless animated bones, with sharp collar-bones and elbows like can-openers.

They've loved us in curl-papers, magic-wavers, boudoir caps, cold-cream and kimonos —and they've loved us in long ear-rings, with white-washed noses and blood-red finger-nails.

Surely, our appearance in slacks won't utterly wreck our power to charm them, and harden their hearts toward us! They are more modest than high-water-skirts, and more graceful than bustles. So what?

A woman is a WOMAN! A girl may paint herself up to resemble a totem pole, disguise herself to look like a boy and starve herself down to a living-skeleton—and still man will recognize her as something he can't do without!

Don't tell ME that women dress to please men! They don't HAVE to!

Personally, I've never worn slacks. But, I certainly would, if they made me more comfortable at my job!

FREY WIPES OUT SECOND BASEMEN FIELDING RECORDS

Fields at .985 Clip to Better Mark of .983 Set in 1925

ONLY 13 ERRORS IN YEAR

New York, Dec. 30—(AP)—Lonnie Frey of the Cincinnati Reds wiped out all fielding records for National League second basemen during 1943 as his club led the circuit afield with an aggregate of .980, official averages released today reveal.

Frey, 31 years old and completing his 10th year in the senior circuit, fielded for .985 to wipe out the previous mark of .983 set by Earl Adams of the Chicago Cubs in 1925.

He made only 13 errors in accepting 873 chances and participated in 112 double plays as he hiked his average eight points above his 1942 figure in the first season that saw Eddie Miller, sure-fingered shortstop, in the same infield.

The statistics reveal that Miller, brought to the Reds a year ago from the Boston Braves, was the best fielding shortstop in Ford Frick's circuit for the fourth straight year. Miller's average was .980.

The all-star infield, on a fielding basis, would be completed with Elbie Fletcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates at first and Merril May of the Philadelphia Phillies at third.

Fletcher, who like Frey has joined the armed forces since the close of the season, was tops at the initial sack with a .996 figure while May's .963 was good enough to win the honor at his post.

Dan Lithiler's error on May 30, his only one of the year and one which ended a streak of 189 perfect games, didn't deprive him of the outfielders' championship. The St. Louis gardener, who started the campaign with the Phils, had an imposing .996 to go alongside the 1.000 he tacked up the year previous.

Claude Passeau of the Chicago Cubs was the best fielding pitcher for the second straight year, making every one of his 68 chances cleanly. In all, 26 pitchers were perfect fielders, but the title went to Passeau who had the most chances.

Al Lopez of Pittsburgh and Tommy Livingston of Philadelphia and Chicago headed the catchers with .991 figures, each having 448 chances and making four errors.

In team fielding, the pennant-winning Cardinals led with 4,278 put-outs.

Canadiens in Action Against Detroit Wings

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal Canadiens, building up to another fat winning streak after their early-season undefeated streak was halted at 14 games, meet Detroit Red Wings tonight in the only National Hockey League game scheduled Thursday. The game will be played in Montreal.

Now leading the parade by seven points, Canadiens have won their last three games while the fifth-place world champions have been restricted to one victory in their last five games. A triumph for Detroit would lift Wings into a fourth-place tie with Chicago Black Hawks, who trail Toronto Maple Leafs by two points and Boston Bruins by four.

Boston Divinity Student Wins J. E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy

By the Canadian Press

Bespectacled Gilbert Dodds, Boston divinity student, yesterday was named 1943 winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial trophy by the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States as the athlete who had done most to advance sportsmanship during the year, the middle-distance runner polling 860 votes of sports leaders.

Dodds' chief track performances this year were his game races against Gunder Haegg, Swedish holder of world's records, through whose tour of the United States last summer the A. A. U. was able to turn over $135,000 to the Army Air Forces Aid Society.

The Canadian Army Auxiliary Services Directorate, Ottawa, gave formal recognition last night to two outstanding performances in civilian competitions by army contestants during the year. One was the double victory by Sgt. Gerard Cote in the Boston and Yonkers Marathons and the other was the win by Pte. M. Phillips of Kitchener in the 220-dash at a London, Ont., meet last July.

Held New Year's Day for the past 25 years, the 10-mile road race of the Hamilton Y. M. C. A. has been suspended for the remainder of the war, it was announced by the race committee last night, because of a lack of experienced gallopers.

Recent conqueror of Beau Jack, Bobby Ruffin, New York lightweight yesterday was signed to meet Juan Zurita of Hollywood in a 10-round feature at Madison Square Garden Jan. 14. The bout replaces the Mauriello-Baski fight, called off because of Mauriello's illness.

The boxing show scheduled for Madison Square Garden last night was called off by Promoter Mike Jacobs when it was learned Jake La Motta, a member of the Coast Guard, had been transferred to another station and could not appear against George Kochan.

The Al Sabath bargain colt, Alsab, arrived at Tropical Park, Miami, yesterday, to open his campaign as a five-year-old, with jockey George Woolf retained to ride him in Florida features. The horse for which Sabath paid $700 has won $349,565 to date.

Hockey enthusiasts with Canadian Overseas Forces generally favor the R. C. A. F. order barring Air Force teams from Allan Cup or Memorial Cup competition in Canada, it was ascertained in London after the ruling had been published in The Canadian Press News. It was "war first, sport second", in the minds of the great majority, according to a cable last night.

Toronto, Dec. 30 — (CP) — Bill Cowley is back in the groove. The Boston centre seems to be able to take any winger and make a leading goal scorer out of him in one season. This time the object of Bill's affection is Herb Cain, first to reach the 20-goal mark in the current National Hockey League campaign. Last year when everyone figured Buzz Boll was washed up as a major leaguer, Cowley took him as a winger and Boll was first to reach the 20-goal mark in 1942-43. Cain has been in the big time since he joined Montreal Maroons in 1933 but he has never before won renown as an unusually high scorer although he did fire 20 goals in 1934-35 with Maroons and 21 in 1939-40 with Boston.

Jack (Ottawa Citizen) Koffman comments: "The records show Bill made high-scoring wings out of Ray Getliffe and Charlie Sands, did the same with Roy Conacher and Eddie Wiseman ... Bill, it appears, can make a consistent scorer out of any person capable of skating the length of the ice."

Cut-up:

Commenting on the bust-up between Brian Timmis and Sam Manson over division of the Hamilton Wildcats football melon, Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle quotes Annis Stukus, long-time grid star, as saying: "Manson is doing the usual in these matters. Of course the boys on top like Joe Krol and, say a good quarterback, get the lion's share of the divvy. It's always been like that and personally I'm in favor of it." Stukus, incidentally, is a good quarterback.

Round and About:

Nominations for the Women's Amateur Athletic Federation Rose Bowl," awarded to the year's outstanding girl athlete in Canada, number only three so far — Doris Geldard, Toronto junior swim star; Joan Langdon, Vancouver swimmer, and Letty Smart, Toronto basketball player ... Maj. Conn Smythe, Toronto Leafs manager in absentia, wrote from England: "I see where Pop Patrick is now missing the Amerks. They used to be good for 25 per cent of his points at least each year. Well, he's the one that wanted them out so maybe those of us that want them back can get him to see the light." The loud chuckle in the background is from Red Dutton ... Ross McKelvie, the Balmy Beach football star, is playing junior hockey with Stratford Kroehlers.

What's Doing in Sport

Baltimore—(AP) — Jockey Matthew Quinn, 27, was ruled off the turf yesterday by the Maryland Racing Commission on the ground he allegedly offered a bribe to another rider, the late Joseph W. Pannell, to pull his horse in a race at Marlboro Nov. 27.

Ottawa—(CP) — The Canadian Army Auxiliary services directorate yesterday recognized a number of track and field records established at an overseas track meet at Aldershot, Aug. 14. Two Ontario entrants, Lieut. W. J. Brown of Bowmanville and Pte. R. Poppin of Toronto, were members of the 440-yard relay team which set an army mark of 44 2-5 seconds.

Toronto, Dec. 30—(CP)—A delegation of Toronto sportsmen will seek a hearing with Dr. R. P. Vivian, Ontario Health Minister, to obtain information on the proposed physical fitness campaign for which the federal government is donating $250,000 to be allocated among the provinces. The decision was reached at a meeting last night attended by representatives of baseball, basketball, soccer and girls' sports.

Toronto, (CP)—President Frank Sargent of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announced last night that the 1943-44 Memorial Cup finals for the junior hockey championship of Canada definitely will be played in Toronto as an "emergency measure." Because war has confused the amateur hockey picture, Sargent said, delegates attending the two-day C. A. H. A. meeting here decided to shift the Memorial Cup venue from Winnipeg to Toronto as "insurance" that the greatest possible number of spectators may attend what is likely to become the C. A. H. A.'s premier attraction.

Hamilton (CP)—The executive of the Hamilton Flying Wildcats, Canadian football champions, held a meeting last night to deal with a complaint from Coach Brian Timmis regarding the alleged unequal distribution of the cash profits among the players. No statement was issued regarding developments but it was disclosed that Timmis had been paid $1,250 for his season's services.

HERSHEY BEARS HELD TO 2-2 TIE

(By The Canadian Press.)

Leading Hershey Bears and second-place Cleveland battled to a 2-2 deadlock at Cleveland last night while Buffalo Bisons blanked out Providence Reds 3-0 in the only two scheduled American Hockey League games.

Hershey now has a total of 35 points as a result of 15 victories in 24 starts. They tied five games and lost four others. Cleveland trails six points behind Bears with their 12 wins and five draws in 23 starts.

Phil Hergesheimer's goal halfway through the first period put Barons in the lead last night. But the league's leading scorer, Captain Wally Kilrea tied the count unassisted in the second period.

Bill Hudson put Bears ahead late in the second, but Lou Trudel tied the score at 3:20 in the final.

In the Red-Bison encounter Buffalo's three goals were collected in the second round.

Dede Klein tallied the first at 2:44 on a pass from Maxie Bennet. Almost four minutes later Eldy Kobussen collected the second, and Rusty Waldriff scored Bisons' third on the 18-minute mark.

Railroads Shake Off Strike Threat But Not Wage Row

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Dec. 30 — (AP) — With the Army at the throttle, the railroad system of the United States was rid of a strike threat today but not of the wage controversy that provoked it.

Two Brotherhoods, the Trainmen and the Engineers, executed agreements with the carriers, but the demands of the 18 other organizations remain unsettled. The case of the 15 non-operating unions, in fact, seemed more tightly knotted than ever.

Chiefs of three operating unions —conductors, firemen and switchmen — told Lt.-Gen. Brehon B. Somervell early yesterday they would not challenge the government, but they delayed sending strike cancellation orders to their chairmen in the field until 9 p. m., in order to include in the message some information of the wage settlement. The order finally was sent without such information because, the union chiefs said, government spokesmen avoided a commitment.

The contracts signed by the trainmen and the engineers provided for an increase of nine cents an hour and a week's vacation.

Similar terms were reported available to the firemen, conductors, and switchmen, but the chiefs of these unions feared acceptance would mean a wage freeze for the duration of the war.

Here is how the "non-op" case stood: When these 15 Unions representing more than 1,000,000 office, shop and track workers, cancelled their strike order Monday they sent a letter to President Roosevelt accepting the sliding scale increases of four to 10 cents approved by Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, and said they would accept the President's arbitration of their overtime demands.

In their opinion, this left only the overtime issue for arbitration. The railroads do not agree and want the four to 10 cents and the overtime ruled on as one issue. That would tend to cut down the total amount of the award.

Moscow Reports Admiral Doenitz May Have Quit

London, Dec. 30 (CP)—Royal Navy cruisers and R.A.F. planes teamed up in the Bay of Biscay area to sink three more warships of Hitler's dwindling fleet and to destroy a speedy blockade runner, that was attempting to sneak supplies through to Germany.

Details of the battle, involving 11 Nazi destroyers, were disclosed by the Admiralty and Air Ministry last night as Moscow reported that Admiral Karl Doenitz, German navy commander, either was expected to resign or had resigned after the bitter loss of the 26,000-ton battleship Scharnhorst Sunday.

A joint Admiralty-Air Ministry communique said the light cruisers H.M.S. Glasgow and H.M.S. Enterprise suffered minor damage in the running fight with the Nazi destroyer flotilla, and that one Halifax and one Beaufighter of the coastal command were lost.

Commanding the Glasgow in the engagement was Capt. H. T. W. Grant, R.C.N., 44-year-old native of Halifax on loan to the Royal Navy.

A Berlin broadcast by a propaganda agency claimed five British destroyers were sunk in the engagement.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Dec. 30 (CP)—To a man with ambitions to win the 1944 Derby, $63,780 is not a lot of money to pay for the horse which probably will rule the winter books as second favorite to take the classic.

Walter Hutchinson, prominent London book publisher, paid that price at the Newmarket sales recently for the fine two-year-old, Happy Landing, which has lost only to Dorothy Paget's unbeaten Orestes.

"I think he will beat Orestes next year," Hutchinson said, and he was prepared to go well above the price paid to get the horse. The bidding began at about $30,000 and jumped $2,000 each time until Hutchinson's successful bid.

There are only 30 Canadians on a Liberator squadron which entered a team in the R.C.A.F. Overseas Hockey League but 14 of them managed to get away from their duties for two hours to represent the squadron in its first game. The "Libs" met the Canadian Mosquito intruders and lost 12-1.

LAC. A. K. Hill of Toronto scored four goals for the Intruders while LAC. Frank Valenti of North Bay, Ont., and Cpl. Don Prentice of Regina netted a pair each. The lone goal for the "Libs" was scored by Sgt. Hill of North Hatley, Que.

The war is bringing about a change in the colors of some of Britain's most famous football clubs. The Board of Trade recently allowed 40,000 clothing coupons for new uniforms but many of the clubs will have to shed their historic color schemes for those of simpler manufacture.

Plain red, white or blue jerseys predominate now among the uniforms.

Golf balls become so precious, sales are made only if the purchaser brings in old balls which go into the manufacture of new ones, which are really only the old ones remoulded. Regulations permit remoulding only if no additional material is used.

In a 1,000-word statement drawn up by the Players' Union, professional British footballers have made their contribution to the many plans being discussed by the Football League Post-War Planning Committee. The players have asked for increased wages and the creation of a pensions fund.

There seems little chance that the £8 ($36) a week maximum will be abolished though it is considered likely a guarantee minimum of £4 a week will be established.

Practice Was Tough.

So hard did Coach "Toots" Holway drive the Belleville juniors in their initial practice Tuesday night that he contracted a mild case of flu' and last night Bill Dennis took over when 26 kids went to the ice. A few new faces were seen including Paul Kringle, of Calgary, who is at present stationed at No. 5 I. T. S. Last year Paul was with the western "Wolverines" and should materially lend to some scoring prowess for the locals. Some five other local lads were on the scene last night giving Bill Dennis much to worry about regarding scrimmages.

"Tonight we are going to divide the entire squad into two teams and play regulation hockey from seven until eight. There'll be a referee and full stops for off sides in the event the fans want to look over our junior prospects," stated Bill today. Yes, it looks as though junior hockey is going to be big business at the Hume Arena this winter.

High & Far Away.

"Many years ago, there was a hockey player in Arnprior named Charlie Stavenaw, who was reported to have the hardest shot in hockey," writes Dink Carroll in the Montreal Gazette. "The Ottawa Senators, with Tommy Gorman at the helm, were interested in the player, particularly because of the publicity build-up he had enjoyed over his bullet shot. The Senators, after much negotiating, finally signed the player and there was great curiosity among the fans to see the man who was reputed to be able to propel a puck as though it had been shot from a rifle. But the Senators first had him work out in secret and they were a bit disappointed when they discovered the type of player they'd signed. Stavenaw, a right-winger, was big and ponderous, and after the players had watched him for a few minutes they agreed that he should be skating to a band. He had to wind up before he could pull the trigger on his famous shot. Nine times out of ten he was checked before he could get it away. The Senators paraded him in several games for the fans' inspection, and the latter were disappointed because he never managed to get a shot away. But they kept on going to the games in the hope that each night might be the night when he'd let one go. Finally, in a game against Toronto, Stavenaw was left alone long enough to wind up and cut loose. The puck sailed away, far over the net and over the heads of the spectators, to wind up somewhere in the rafters of Dey's Arena. Stavenaw was through in Ottawa from that moment on, but Senators still owned his contract. Every time one of the other clubs wanted to negotiate a player deal with the Senators, the player the Senators would offer was Charlie Stavenaw. Charlie Querrie, then in control of the Toronto team, tried many times to do business with Tommy Gorman, but Tommy mentioned the name of Stavenaw so often that Querrie nearly choked on it."

Bowl Games

Saturday sees the annual bowl football games across United States, from Florida to California. Since the inception of the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena in 1906 others have joined the spectacle, but the Southern California game still carries the most color, although other games may prove more spectacular insofar as competition is concerned. In the East-West Shrine all-star game played at San Francisco the West squad is favoured to win.

Local sport fans will listen to these games via the radio route and although public interest in these "crockery classics" has diminished in war years, how about trying this for a parlay on Saturday:-

Rose Bowl — Washington over Southern California.

Sugar Bowl—Georgia Tech over Tulsa.

Cotton Bowl—Texas over Randolph Field.

Orange Bowl—Texas Aggies over Louisiana State University.

Sun Bowl — Southwestern U. (Texas) over New Mexico U.

Oil Bowl—Southwestern Louisiana Institute over New Mexico U.

Here's the Answer.

Not long ago Secretary Wally Berry, of the Belleville juniors, wanted to know why sport columns continued to print articles about baseball in mid-winter when basketball and hockey were the dominating sports in America.

Only the other day Doug Vaughan, sports editor of the Windsor Star, answered Wally's question in a brief, but concise paragraph. Says Mr. Vaughan-"Baseball retains its year-round popularity because its operators are smart enough to keep the sport always before the public. Even throughout the winter the interest of the fans is maintained by the flood of statistical stories on what happened the previous season—about the leading pitchers, the leading hitters, the fielding averages and so on.

Some of these statistical stories make interesting reading because they uncover data unknown before; others are very dry and some are even downright misleading.

Take that story the other day on the fielding averages of the various teams in the American League. Fielding averages have a negative nature, being based, you might say, on things that don't happen or at least don't happen to be hits, and hits and runs are just about the most important part of baseball."

LESSON NO. 261

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Mary had a little slam. Her face went white as snow. In every way her thought would jam with rules she did not know. She followed me to school one day, as nervous as St. Vitus. I soon drove all her fears away. But now she has slamitis.

Slamitis is to a bridge player what buck fever is not to a deer hunter. When a player shoots for a slam that he does not see, that's slamitis.

This is the start of a series that will teach you how to bid slams safely. It will indeed. And it will show you how to avoid bidding unmakeable slams, I hope.

A slam is all 13 tricks; or all but one of 13 tricks. All 13 tricks is a grand slam. Only 12 tricks is a small slam.

To bid a slam means to contract to take that many tricks. To make a slam means to take that many tricks after having contracted to do so.

The aim of bidding and making a slam is to receive the unusually high award in bonus points for doing so. Knowing when not to bid a slam prevents the loss of points that a lower contract would pay.

To get an idea of what a slam pair of hands looks like, take a snapshot of this deal:

NORTH
♠Q 6 4 2
♥Q 6 4 2
♦A J
♣A 4 2

WEST	EAST
♠9 8 3	♠10
♥3	♥10 9 8
♦K Q 4 3	♦10 9 8 7 6 2
♣K Q 10 9 8	♣7 6 3

SOUTH
♠A K J 7 5
♥A K J 7 5
♦5
♣J 5

Know that the contract will end at a small slam in spades. That, any palooka can make with ease. An expert can make a grand slam with it against any lead and any defence with these cards.

Unless you are familiar with the play involved, you may not see how all 13 tricks can be taken. Even with all the cards in sight. But lay out the cards on a table and try. It is good practice.

Meanwhile, we may take a couple of weeks dawdling with the bidding of this deal. So, lay in a supply of patience and we will nibble away at it a little at a time.

Don't bite off more than you can chew the fat over.

"Dixie"
(In Technicolor)

The gayest, most glamorous entertainment the old South ever knew—the great minstrel show—is reproduced by Paramount in the Bing Crosby-Dorothy Lamour technicolor musical romance, "Dixie," which opened today at the Capitol Theatre to the applause of a thrilled audience.

It tells the story of how that grand old song came to be written a hundred years ago by Dan Emmett, with Bing playing the role of Dan who was the first of America's minstrel men. It tells the story of Dan's love for Millie Cook and Jean Mason (roles filled very lusciously by Dorothy Lamour and blonde Marjorie Reynolds) and how the triangle worked out. It tells of the rise of the Virginia Minstrels, originated by Dan, with Billy de Wolfe, Lynne Overman, Raymond Walburn and Eddie Foy, Jr., playing the parts of the men who formed the Minstrels.

Six new hit tunes and six beloved old ones make the kind of beautiful music to set your feet a-tapping. Crosby's singing is exceptionally good as he warbles the new "Sunday, Monday or Always" and "If You Please" (among others) and the old "Dixie," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," plus the other four.

There isn't any doubt of the fact that this is a Bing Crosby super-special that ought to make you "look away" toward the Capitol Theatre for your share of the fun, melody and romance.

"Six Gun Gospel"

Johnny Mack Brown is no football star. He's too rough! Producer, writers or director must have had blood in their eye when they concocted the action for "Six Gun Gospel," new Johnny Mack Brown starrer which opened today at the Capitol Theatre.

High point for action in westerns with casualties hitting both hero and outlaw camps occurs in this new Monogram thriller. Brown, who has notably carried on his football fame with unceasing action in his pictures, hits a pace here that will satisfy any fan for action.

A Popeye cartoon and the serial, "Secret Service in Darkest Africa" conclude the grand holiday program.

AT THE BELLE

"THE SKY'S THE LIMIT"

King of screen dancers, Fred Astaire again proves his right to the title with his brilliant work in RKO Radio's joyous new offering, "The Sky's The Limit," in which Fred co-stars with a new and charming partner, Joan Leslie.

The picture, which is now on the Belle Theatre screen deals with the hectic romance between a Flying Tiger pilot and a girl photographer while the former is on a short furlough in New York City. Keeping his identity secret and dressed in civilian clothes, the flier puts on an unusual campaign to capture the girl's attention, which gets him involved with her millionaire employer as well.

Plenty of gay situations and surprises follow as the plot unfolds, while the two stars turn in a number of unsurpassed dance routines that will delight any audience. Two of them, a romantic duet on a penthouse roof and a novelty solo by Fred on a bar-top, are spectacular in the extreme and easily ranks among the finest things the camera has ever registered.

Three highly whistleable new tunes by Johnny Mercer and Harold Arlen, "My Shining Hour," "I've Got a Lot in Common With You," and "One for My Baby and One for the Road," are also featured in the picture, with Freddie Slack and his orchestra providing most of its music.

Robert Benchley heads the featured cast of the David Hempstead production, and Robert Ryan, Marjorie Gateson, Richard Davies, and Elizabeth Patterson have important roles which they handle deftly. The telling direction of E. H. Griffith adds much to the entertainment qualities of the film, which the writer considers one of the best vehicles the nimble Astaire has had in many years. Don't miss "The Sky's the Limit" whatever else you may do.

Varied Featurette Treats

A sport hit, "Barnyard Golf," a funny Walt Disney color cartoon "Chicken Little," and "Broadway Dimout," an effective and thoroughly entertaining multiple-reel screen miniature precede the feature attraction.

"BEST FOOT FORWARD" In Color

A wealth of new talent will be displayed on the screen of the Belle Theatre where M-G-M's technicolor musical "Best Foot Forward" featuring Harry James and His Music Makers will open at the Belle Theatre New Year's Eve Frolic.

Nancy Walker, the screen's newest comedienne, has been dubbed "the female Mickey Rooney." Tommy Dix, the youngster who authored the theme song for the "March of Dimes," has auditioned for the Metropolitan Opera. June Allyson and Gloria De Haven, daughter of Carter De Haven, are two little bundles of dynamite on the screen. They sing and dance and are beautiful too.

Recruits from Broadway

Kenny Bowers and Jack Jordan are new recruits from the musical comedy ranks of the Broadway stage, but after their initial appearance in "Best Foot Forward" they have been signed to long term contracts by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Veterans in the cast include red-headed Lucille Ball, William Gaxton and Virginia Weidler.

A great surrounding show has been assembled for presentation.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Heat's On"

Advance notice on "The Heat's On" Columbia's musical extravaganza previewed on New Year's Eve at the McCarthy Theatre lists a cast, besides the stars Mae West, Victor Moore and William Gaxton, of feature players who will keep audiences warm whether any other form of heat is on or not.

There's Xavier Cugat and his Rhumba Orchestra; there's songstress and piano playing whiz, Hazel Scott together with the high trump of trumpeters, Leonard Sues; lovely, warbling Mary Roche; David Lichine, actor dance originator and director extraordinary; Lester Allen, Alan Dinehart, Lloyd Bridges, Almira Sessions, Sam Ash, Jack Owens and Lina Romay.

Added to these hot ingredients, there are six songs by some of Hollywood's better known composers including Jay Gorney, Edward Eliscu, Henry Myers, Jule Styne and Sammy Cahn. As sung by Mae West, Mary Roche and Hazel Scott, these numbers are said to be high contestants for the hit parade.

The original screenplay, with suspense, glamour and guffaw producing situations, was written by Fitzroy Davis, George S. George and Fred Schiller. It is a battle of wits and gags between Mae West and William Gaxton with Victor Moore getting laughs at both ends and the middle.

The musical show, "Indiscretions of 1943," starring Fay Lawrence (Mae West), is a flop. Tony Ferris (William Gaxton), its producer, contrives to have the play raided by the police with the idea that the newspaper publicity will boost business.

Tony accomplishes the trick thru Hubert Bainbridge (Victor Moore) mouselike brother of Hannah Bainbridge (Almira Sessions) crusading head of the Bainbridge foundation dedicated to uphold the morals of the nation.

Tony's plan kicks back, however. The show is permanently closed and Fay, furious over the sad outcome, walks out on Tony and very quickly joins another producer, Forrest Stanton (Alan Dinehart) in his potential hit "Tropicana".

Now Tony's furious. He persuades Hubert to call Stanton and advise him that Fay's on the Bainbridge blacklist. Then, feigning reluctance he allows Stanton to sell him "Tropicana", but pays for it with money he hasn't got.

Desperate, Tony talks Hubert into giving him money from the Bainbridge Foundation's treasure, Hannah having previously left town leaving Hubert in charge. Janey (Mary Roche) Hubert's pet niece is to be starred.

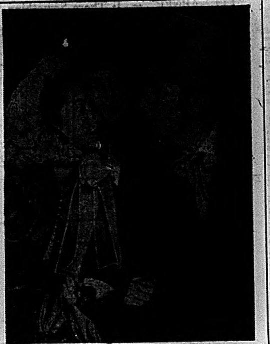
When Fay learns that Tony has bought "Tropicana" she quits cold. Then she meets Hubert and in a very humorous scene learns the truth about Tony's machinations. Stanton is informed. Hannah is phoned is Seattle. She returns and stops the show.

But there's a twist which builds into a big dramatic and musical climax with everything ending happily for all concerned.

The "Heat's On" brings Mae West back to the screen after several years absence, in a streamlined characterization. Gone are the flowing skirts and bustle of her gay-ninety films. The costumes designed for her by Columbia's expert Walter Plunkett are said to be the ne-plus-ultra in modernity.

An evening gown of gold and silver brocade, studded with gold beads, a negligee consisting of flesh-colored lace, moulded to the body and bordered at the bottom and around a twelve foot train with black fox fur, are only two of her wardrobe items which will certainly make the audience sit up and take notice. Also seen is a tailored suit trimmed with ermine tails and a white fox cape which would do the most exacting female proud.

"The Heat's On" was directed by Gregory Ratoff.



AT THE CAPITOL—Three's a crowd graphically illustrated above by Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour and Billy de Wolfe, in "Dixie," now at the Capitol. The added western "Six Gun Gospel" stars Johnny Mack Brown.

AT THE BELLE —In gay romance, "The Sky's The Limit," brings together for the first time Joan Leslie and Fred Astaire. The two are co-starred in RKO Radio's sprightly filmusical for which Arlen and Mercer supplied the songs and Freddie Slack and his orchestra provide the music.

AT THE McCARTHY—Twinkling fingers do double duty—we're talking about the ten educated digits of Hazel Scott, shown during her "The White Keys and the Black Keys" number from "The Heat's On," New Year's Eve attraction at the McCarthy.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was suppose to bring some man home for dinner with him today, and this morning at breakfast ma said, I wonder what would be the nicest thing to have for Mr. Hinstead, William?

The nicest thing to have for any guest, naturally, is whatever he's fondest of, but convention says chicken or a roast, so of course it has to be chicken or a roast, pop said, and ma said, Not at all, that's just where you're quite wrong, and I can prove it by Lady Manly-Sharpe's best selling book of reminiscences.

Why, what's she selling, I mean what does she say? pop said, and ma said, Lady Manly-Sharpe is known as England's perfect hostess, and she relates that one time she expected the Earl of Bitswold to dinner, so she went to great panes to find out his favorite dish only to learn that the only food he really cared about was sausages and kidneys in Madera sauce. Well now it seems in England that's strictly and solely a breakfast dish, but Lady Manly-Sharpe served it for dinner just a same, and the Earl of Bitswold insisted far and wide that he had never sat down to a more perfect dinner, ma said.

Then in that case we're all set for tonight, Mrs. Manly-Potts, because I happen to know that Hinstead is truly happy only when he is in possession of 2 things at the same time, one of them being an acute hunger and the other being a dish of liver and onions, pop said, and ma said, Now William, if you think I'm going to fall blindly into any such trap and serve your own pet dish although as far as you know Mr. Hinstead bitterly detests it, you were never more mistaken in your scheeming life.

Okay, Lady Potts-Manly, I've done my bit, my conscience is clear, pop said.

And he folded his paper and left for his office laughing to himself, and tonight we had chicken and Mr. Hinstead ate white meat with no particular expression on his face for or against.

Wants Husband Back But Thinks Touch Of Jail Won't Hurt

Chicago, Dec. 30 — (AP)—Mrs. Martha Warchol, 45, in municipal court to complain against her husband, August, 49, took off her hat, bowed her head and pointed to a bald spot.

"Look," she said to Judge Edward P. Luczak, "see that spot where he jerked out a handful of hair. I've got the hair in my purse."

As she searched the purse for the hair, Judge Luczak told her:

"I believe you, madam. What do you want me to do with him?"

Warchol appeared downcast as his wife pondered for a moment. They exchanged quick glances.

"I want him back," said Mrs. Warchol, adjusting her hat, "but a little touch of jail wouldn't hurt him."

Judge Luczak sighed, continued the case until Feb. 18.

CHAPTER 8

"Just what do you do for the Bay Company?"

"I'm what you call in the States a 'trouble-shooter.' I go wherever things are wrong with the fur supply. If mink or fox are decreasing in Manitoba, I go there; if trappers are having a bad year in British Columbia, it's my job to find out why. For the last two years the company has let me help the Canadian Government establish fur farms and beaver refuges. It all keeps me on the go."

"And you love it, don't you?"

"Who wouldn't? And some day, when this war's over, I'll be able to write another book—a better book this time."

"And that's what you really want?"

"That's one of the things." Colin looked down at her. "What do you really want, Irina?" It was the first he had called her by that name, and the sound of it seemed to linger in the dusky silence of the room.

"I want—" She stopped. "Some day, some day a long way off, I may tell you what I want. Just now I only want what every girl wants—to be happy. That isn't much to ask, and yet—it may be too much."

"Not for you it won't." He flashed on his light. "And now we both better start for bed. What you need is a night's sleep."

With his light he guided her up the stairs, but as she turned into her room she called back, "Good night, Colin, and — thanks."

"For what?"

"For being understanding and for not putting me on a pedestal."

It was midafternoon next day when Colin tied his canoe to the dock at the Indian school and walked up the path. One of those sudden, unpredictable changes in weather had come overnight—the wind, blowing out of the south, was bringing a brief illusion of summer back. Midges fluttering out over the water caused the fish to leap and the few birds that yet lingered were calling from the spruce thickets.

Between the school buildings he saw a high aerial, and the buildings themselves, that had looked so spectral and shadowy the night before, gleamed brightly now beneath the sun. But, as Colin walked through the playgrounds, he was struck with the silence that held the place. The windows were closed no smoke came from the chimneys, nor the least sound or movement.

Mounting the steps of the nearest building, Colin found the door unlocked and, entering, looked down a long, bare hall. Still no slightest sound. It seemed utterly deserted. He called out and his own voice echoed drearily back from the stairs above. Then once more he stepped to the door and called. This time he was rewarded: a small dark face was peering at him from around the corner of the log wall.

Colin waited. The face dodged back and cautiously reappeared—a small Indian boy, not over six, looking at him with doubtful, beady eyes. For barely a second that scrutiny endured, then the child scuttled across the playground and disappeared into a cabin.

Still puzzled, Colin followed, but as he neared the cabin, he saw Blair wave from the doorway.

"Where's everybody?" he asked.

"Off on a picnic at the Catholic mission. All except this youngster." She smiled down at the child who had taken refuge behind her skirts. "He's enjoying a mild case of measles." In a low voice, Blair added, "Father's inside" and, turning, she called back, "Father, here's someone you know."

A burly form made its way through the door and Colin found himself looking into the face of Dr. Benedict.

For more than twenty years, tales had grown up abut Dr. Benedict—tales of braving blizzards and the hazards of rotting ice to bring hope and healing to some stricken village of the Crees, tales of exposure to the ravages of epidemics that swept across the land like the scythe of death itself. All this, to Dr. Benedict, had been only professional routine.

Supremely forgetful of himself and of his worldly fortunes, he knew no difference between a sick half-breed and a Hendrik's Bay dignitary. To both he gave the same degree of care—his best. Small wonder that Indian children touched him as he passed, hoping by that simple contact to derive something of the quality that had made this big, gentle physician an object of veneration among their people.

And now Colin watched him as he held out his hand; the man was robust and vigorous as ever, and with the same great mane of grizzled hair. But it was in the eyes Colin first saw a change. They were no longer clear and untroubled. They had become watchful, as if behind them brooded some uneasy thought that was never far from consciousness.

But at sight of Rae, the doctor's voice resounded. "Colin, my boy! You're welcome as a June day! Blair told me you might come over." It was a voice that strove to be hearty, but the old ring had gone. He smiled down at Blair and with that smile Colin remembered the great bond of devotion between them.

Then almost at once the smile faded; he stood abstracted, his eyes fixed vacantly before him until, with an effort, he roused himself and drew on his coat. "Hate to hurry away like this." He picked up his medical case. "I'm due to give some inoculations down at the Point." He kissed Blair and patted her cheek. "Back in an hour or less darling. Don't rush off, Colin."

He walked with long strides down the path, and something familiar in that stalwart figure caught Colin's gaze—then suddenly he knew. It was Benedict he had seen with Dove the night before.

Blair's voice brought him back. "He's worried, Colin."

"Do you suppose he's worried about your flying?"

"No. When he found out how much I loved it, he bought the plane. I didn't want to take it; I didn't see how he could afford it. Father said it would be useful in emergency cases."

Colin's eyes were still on the window. "But he really got it because he knew you wanted to fly."

"That's the way he's always been. That's why I can't bear to see him worried and afraid to tell me why. Colin, we've got to help him. He was always so fond of you; maybe he'll talk to you when you're alone with him."

"We can try."

The sight of the aerial mast through the window made him ask, "What's Dove doing with that aerial?"

"He has a little radio set in his office."

"How little?"

She smiled. "Most of the time he can't get Winnipeg. But he always tunes in on the weather reports from God's Lake."

From behind the cabin the Indian child came running, a small wooden wagon in his hand. The axle had broken loose and the boy held it up toward Colin.

"Busted," he announced accusingly.

Solemnly Colin surveyed the toy. "Get some wire, son. We'll fix it."

And happily the boy scurried off.

"How does your father get on with Dove?" Colin asked.

"Very well—outwardly."

"What do you mean by outwardly?"

"I mean—Dove gives Father absolute freedom in all medical questions. He always speaks very highly of Father's work."

"He should. Your father's reputation with the Crees must make him very valuable to Dove—whatever is going on." Colin turned toward her. "Tell me something. Dove said he chartered a plane from The Pas to Learmonth."

"He told me that, too."

"I radioed The Pas from Selkirk's office this morning. They say no plane has been chartered there in nearly a month."

Incredulously Blair looked up. "That means—"

"He lied. But the important thing is that he did come in by plane. It's the only way he could. Now what I want to know is—what plane?"

She had no answer, and Colin went on, "Last night, I thought I heard a plane going south. Is there any air line between Winnipeg and the bay?"

"None. Even when the Airways are running, they don't go north—only east to God's Lake." Then, with a sudden recollection, she added, "A trapper came down from the bay a month ago with an infected hand. He talked about hearing a plane, but he was never able to see it. He thought it was mine, and I thought he imagined it, but now—"

At the sound of running feet Colin looked up to see the Indian child racing toward him, the broken cart in one hand, and triumphantly waving a small coil of wire in the other. He dropped them both in Colin's lap, then stepped back expectantly.

"You fix," he commanded.

Still plunged in thought, Colin began to undo the wire. "A plane might mean they're smuggling furs into the States. That would account for Dove being able to pay such good prices, but I can't imagine—"

Abruptly Colin stopped, his eyes fixed on the coil of steel wire; then frowning, he turned to the Indian boy. "Where did you get this?" he demanded.

Frightened, the child took a step back, then motioned toward the buildings across the clearing.

Colin leaned over him. "I know. But where?"

"In the hall. Upstairs."

"Where upstairs?"

"Attic."

"Is there any more of this up there?" The boy shook his head, and Colin held out the coil toward Blair. "Recognize this?"

"It's wire, isn't it?"

"Snare wire—five-strand wire of solid steel. It's been forbidden in this country for years." He glared down at it. "This stuff has destroyed more fur animals than all the traps in the world. It's illegal even to have it."

With angry eyes he looked at Blair. "Dove can't be mad enough to supply snare wire to his trappers. It would ruin him and his school both. And yet this boy finds a coil in the attic." Colin's voice quickened. "Is it up there your father and Dove spend so much time together?"

"Yes. Almost every night."

"Is that building part of the school?"

"Dove calls it 'the Hall.' They built it after the others, and Dove helped with the construction himself. His office is in there, and Father's hospital; that wing with the slanting roof is the chapel."

"Who lives there?"

"No one—except when the hospital is being used."

"What's upstairs?"

"Two empty rooms and an attic."

With mounting excitement Colin walked the length of the cabin and at the window he stopped. No sign of life out there. No one in the playground or on the trail to the river. Now, if ever, was his chance, and Colin's eyes were shining when he turned again to Blair. "How soon will Dove be back?"

"In an hour—maybe less." She read his thoughts, and in quick protest shook her head. "Colin, you don't—"

"Yes, I do. I want to look over Mr. Dove's Hall."

"There's nothing to see."

"I'm not so sure."

"But if Dove comes back while you're there—"

"The longer we wait, the worse our chances are. Come on."

Together they hurried across the clearing and up the steps. Dr. Benedict's office was a small room just to the right of the entrance, barely large enough to hold a desk, a shelf of medical books and a locked cabinet of drugs.

Colin pointed across the hallway. "What are those rooms?"

"Schoolrooms, but they've never been used."

"What's on the other side?"

"Father's hospital and the chapel. I'll show you."

The hospital occupied two large, well-lighted rooms. With a quick glance Colin passed on to the end of the hallway where a door led into a high-ceilinged chapel with rows of wooden benches, a great black stove and a small organ.

About the wall, painted in the Cree language, were Biblical quotations and on the opposite side a wide door opened toward the river.

Colin moved across the floor. "Blair"—he led her back to Benedict's office—"I have a feeling I'm going to spend the next few minutes in the attic. Can I borrow a torch?"

From her father's desk, Blair picked up a small flashlight and warned him again. "They may be back any minute."

"I know. But a chance like this might never come again." Two at a time, he ran up the steps.

A long, bare hallway stretched the length of the upper floor. To the left of the stairs, Colin saw two open doors, but a glance showed only empty rooms and, turning, he hurried toward the attic.

Darker back there. Feeling his way along the rough board wall, he reached a closed door. It swung open at a touch. Switching on his light, he stepped inside.

About him was a great dust-covered room, cold and musty, the pungent, indescribable odor of drying furs clinging to the very air. Dozens of snowshoes stood against the wall and numberless blankets piled high. Steel traps of every size hung by their chains to wooden pegs, most of them small Victor No. 1, traps used for muskrat—but no snare wire.

Through the window he could see the lake gleaming; and remembering the gasoline cans that Dove and Benedict had carried up the night before, Colin looked about him—no one was to be seen!

With a sense of growing frustration he began moving around the room. Something—something too vague for analysis was wrong with the place.

Colin paced the attic's length—a little over thirty feet. He tapped on the wall toward the chapel, listened and tapped again. Then running downstairs, he led Blair back to the chapel.

"Stand here, close to the wall," he told her. "Let me know if you can hear me knocking from upstairs."

Once more in the attic he struck with his fist on the side toward the chapel, lightly at first, then louder, and hurried back to Blair.

"I could scarcely hear you at all," she declared. "It seemed to come from far away."

Excitedly he nodded. "Now we're getting somewhere." He paced the length of the hall, from the steps to the chapel wall. No doubt about it; a space of at least twelve feet remained unaccounted for.

Heart pounding, Colin headed for the attic again, to search every inch of that bare wooden wall.

Almost at once he found it—a loose knot in a board behind a heavy crate. Kneeling, he pried with his pocket knife, and the knot dropped out in his hand—his flashlight gleamed on a small keyhole set deep within the wood.

Even then it took a careful search before Colin could trace the outlines of a low door, so skillfully cut that they blended perfectly with the cracks between the pine boards.

Dropping the knot back in place, Colin pulled the crate to its old position of concealment, and ran down to the chapel where Blair waited.

"I've found a secret room up there." His voice was exultant. "Look—it's been blocked off with wallboard on this side, above the rafters. Maybe—" He shoved the flashlight in his pocket and, standing on a bench, swung himself to the lower rafters.

"Colin!" Blair's voice rose in desperation. "You haven't time!"

He did not answer. Did not hear. Straddling a transverse beam, close to the ceiling, he was examining the large hole around the stovepipe, then with his knife pried loose a section of wallboard and pulled it back as far as it would go without breaking. The temporary entrance barely let his shoulders pass, but, by pushing on the beam below him, he squeezed through.

Gingerly he stood upright. In the darkness his hand struck a wooden crate and, flashing on his light, Colin found himself within a small, windowless room, piled high with cases marked "Surgical," and all consigned to Dr. Benedict. Almost within arm's reach lay the four missing gasoline cans and just beyond them a powerful shortwave radio set.

Cylinders of rolled paper stood in the corner, and opening one, Colin saw it was a map of the eastern seaboard, from Boston south to Miami. He opened another—a detailed map of Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian Islands. Puzzled, he replaced the maps. Why should they be of the United States? The States weren't in the war . . . then.

Stacks of packages sealed in heavy brown paper were piled in another corner; shaking one, Colin heard a sound like rustling sand; another responded with a faint gurgle of liquid.

Here then—within this tiny hidden room—must lie the answer to Dove's nocturnal errands. And here too—if he could read the riddle—might lie the solution to Dove's mysterious purpose, the purpose that, in a dead man's words "could change history itself."

The War Today—
Widening Breach Indicated Between Hitler and Top Generals

During the temporary absence of deWitt Mackenzie, this column is being conducted by William Frye.

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press War Analyst

If Admiral Karl Doenitz has resigned his command of the German Navy it probably marks just about the last gasp of Hitler's military leadership by intuition.

Russian sources, reporting Doenitz' resignation — actual or imminent — as a result of the sinking of the battleship Scharnhorst by the British Home Fleet, also tell of a widening breach between Hitler and his top generals.

That breach is a peculiar one, healed for their own purposes by the generals, who don't like Hitler but can't spare him.

There is considerable evidence that the Prussian officers of the Junker class, the core of German military tradition, are once again in full control of the army. Hitler remains the titular commander-in-chief, because he is still a symbol in the minds of the German masses. But the officer caste — the Junkers, not the upstarts — runs the army.

Von Rundstedt Archtype

Archtype of the Prussian military aristocrat is the commander of the western group of armies, the man who will meet the Allied invasion, Field Marshal Karl Rodulf Gerd Von Rundstedt. Relieved of his command — by report, at his own request — when his Caucasus invasion was mauled by Red Army counter-blows, he came back to organize the coast defences, and is in complete charge in France and the Low Countries.

Others who have returned to high command after disagreement —to put it mildly — with Hitler, are Gen. Fritz Erich Von Mannstein, with important command of a large portion of the Russian front, and Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz, active again in the high command after living for a time in retirement in northern France following a falling out with the Fuehrer. Both of these men were among the officer Junta reported more than a year ago to have started a program to "isolate" Hitler and establish themselves favorably with the Allies in case of defeat or stalemate.

HOUSE SHIFTED BY IMPACT

Woodstock, Dec. 20 — (CP) — Transport truck driving east of the city, swerved to avoid a youngster in a scooter wagon, struck the cottage of Mrs. Madge Basket and pushed it one inch back on its foundation. The impact shattered stucco on the outside of the building and damaged plaster inside, but driver, boy and house inmates were unhurt.

Waste Paper Shortage Critical

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board administrators concerned with paperboard, packages and other paper products are alarmed at the critical waste paper inventory stock positions of the mills.

The administrators concerned have informed this Division in unequivocal terms that at present, and for the next six months at least, there is a definite waste paper shortage. Indeed the shortage is much more acute than at any time since the war began. The paper situation is critical.

Waste paper, especially brown paper, containers and corrugated paper are now more urgently required because of the great scarcity of virgin pulp wood, and because of the greatly increased need of paper containers for the packing and shipment of food and munitions supplies to our Armed Forces, overseas and at home, and also to Britain and our Allies.

Shipments of all kinds of waste paper to the mills must be increased. We cannot at this critical time allow any mill to close down due to lack of the necessary waste paper.

The production, in increasing quantities, of containers for shells, medical kits, emergency rations, blood plasma, grenades, gas masks, Air Force emergency packs, bomb fins and rings, and for hundreds of other Naval, Army and Air Force uses, makes this urgent appeal necessary.

To keep Canada's supply lines intact to the Armed Forces and Allies, requires an endless stream of paper containers. These millions of containers sent overseas cannot be returned for re-use. This is an important contributing factor to the paper shortage in Canada.

There is a definite guarantee that every carload of waste paper, baled or securely bundled, for which no market is available through regular trade channels, will be cleared through a government company.

There is an abundance of needed waste paper in the home, in the store and in the factory. Now is the time to get it moving to the mills through the local Voluntary Salvage Committee or through any known commercial or trade channel.

Don't forget to salvage all Christmas cartons, paper containers and brown wrapping paper.

Tungting Lake Area of China Heavily Bombed

Chungking, Dec. 30—(AP)—Japanese installations and shipping in French Indo-China and in the Tungting Lake area of Central China have been bombed without loss, it was announced today.

In a raid of 36 Japanese planes on a forward base in China Monday, United States fliers destroyed four Zeros, probably destroyed five others and damaged two more. One U. S. plane was shot down.

Civil Defence Com. Decides To Carry on Work

Several reports in the press, that the military authorities had re-assessed the danger of air raids in this part of Canada, and as several letters and bulletins received from Toronto the local unit of the Civil Defence Committee have finally got the matter down to the point of knowing where they stand. The committee has been anxious to retain the equipment left in the city, especially the two fire-pumpers and a quantity of first-aid supplies, stretchers, blankets and bandages. According to the latest bulletin received, Mr. McIntyre Hood, Secretary of the Ontario Civil Defence Committee says the financial support which amounts to one-half of the expenditures incurred by the local unit will be withdrawn as of December 31st, 1943. Any commitments, however, which could not be terminated by this date would be honored.

Committee to Carry On

Federal and Provincial authorities were very high in their praise for the numerous volunteers who had put so much time and effort into the civilian defence work, and wish to go on record as being very appreciative of the unselfish efforts. Several methods of showing this appreciation are under consideration. The authorities also have decided that where municipalities wish to carry on on a very limited basis, the equipment, which has already been provided will be left for the use of volunteers, and it was with this thought in mind, that the meeting of the Belleville unit was called last night at which the executive of the Belleville Civil Defence Committee, with Chairman Mayor Harry Rollins presiding, decided unanimously to carry on with the same personnel as heretofore.

Assistant Fire Chief Vance pointed out, that it would be most desirable to have the added protection of properly manned pumpers and every effort will be made to keep this auxiliary in a constant state of readiness. There is more than a possibility, that the extensive first-aid supplies now stored at the Fire Hall will be turned over to the St. John Ambulance Association for their use in case of emergency. It is felt by the committee that these two groups of equipment, the pumpers and first-aid supplies, should be kept here in the interest of the protection of the life and property of Belleville citizens.

Leave Some Equipment

It was pointed out by the committee that to the best of their knowledge the equipment of a personal nature, stirrup pumps, helmets and so on, will be left with the people to whom they were issued as a souvenir of their unselfish efforts on behalf of the Civil Defence Committee. Mr. Harold Seldon, secretary of the local unit of the Civil Defence Committee, also expressed his appreciation of the whole-hearted support given the endeavor by the citizens of Belleville, and reiterated his often expressed opinion, that Civil Defence Work was simply a form of insurance, and if we did not have an air raid it was a loss of time, but if we did have one, the experience would be invaluable.

Use as Auxiliary Equipment

The opinion was expressed that in the case of the recent fire at the Crystal Hotel, had there been a high wind which would have tended to spread the fire to the rest of the business section, the auxiliary fire pumpers would have had to be out in the case of any minor household fires breaking out.

In this field of opportunity there is a need for voluntary workers, organized on a neighborhood basis, to assist in the direction of neighborhood clubs or groups such as those sponsored by the Y.M.C.A., or in such organizations as the Boy Scouts, Sea Cadets, as done in other Ontario communities. A.R.P. duties, might well examine the possibilities of this form of training as of great value in offsetting the tendencies of the misuse of leisure time by boys and girls.

EGG PRICES EASIER

Continuing a decline in price which commenced on the pre-Christmas market, fresh eggs sold for ten cents less per dozen on the local market Thursday than was quoted recently. Grade "A" eggs sold at 45 cents the dozen with pullets being quoted down to 40 cents. Specials sold at 50 cents the dozen.

Offering of turkey and geese was rather slim, only two turkeys being seen, with these and the geese being quickly bought up at ceiling prices. There was considerable fowl offered with chicken selling up to 45 cents the pound for well-finished birds. Extra large birds sold as high as $3.25 each.

Attendance on the outside market was slim, there being only a few apples and vegetable offered.

JUMP FROM WINDOW

Havelock, Ont., Dec. 30 —(CP)— Mrs. Frank Parcels and her 12-year-old daughter, Gladys, of Havelock, were forced to jump 14 feet from an upstairs window early today after a fire broke out in their home as they slept. Mrs. Parcels tossed some bedding onto the ice and helped her daughter out. The house and contents were destroyed.

Boot Rebuilding Plant Handles 1500 Pairs Weekly

Ottawa, Dec. 30 — (CP) — The tramp of boots is sweet music to an army branch which in a year repaired and restored to service more than 826,000 pairs of boots and shoes, and now, through a boot rebuilding plant, can produce up to 1,500 pairs a week using uppers stripped from condemned boots.

The army said today the operations of the army's salvage and disposal department have realized $410,352, the Defence Department said, and salvage operations are receiving greater recognition as a source of supply.

The branch handles repair of garments, tents, marquees, web and anti-gas equipment, laundering, disinfecting and the recondition of enamel and similar ware.

Car Plunges Through Ice Two Drowned

Sudbury, Dec. 30—(CP)—Two persons, a child and an elderly man, were drowned last night when the car in which they were crossing lake Penage plunged through the ice. No word has yet been received as to their identity.

Provincial police left for the scene of the tragedy during the night and have not yet reported back to Sudbury headquarters.

It is understood eight persons were in the car when it plunged through the ice, but that six of them managed to escape.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 30. (CP)—Industrial and Mining groups were moderately strong on the Toronto Stock Exchange today and the Western Oils showed slight weakness.

Prices were higher for the Utilities, Papers and Foods and the Steels were lower. Distillers-Seagrams and Winnipeg Electric Pfd. firmed a point or more and Hiram Walker weakened 1-2 to 59 1-2. Bell Telephone declined a point.

Better prices were boarded in the Gold group for Kirkland Lake, Preston, Chesterville, McKenzie, and Propriatary Mines. Reports of a new strike in the Kirkland Lake Mines stirred buying interest in that stock and it had a heavy turnover. Teck Hughes, selling ex-dividend, was down ten cents.

Hudson Bay, Nickel, Falconbridge and Venters were stronger Base Metals. Western Oil stocks showed slight weakness in Calgary and Edmonton and Anglo-Canadian.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 30 —(AP)—Stock market leaders achieved modest recoveries today and scattered specialties exhibited strength. Most advances were limited to fractions near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues advanced, with Distilleries strong. Hiram Walker added 1¼ and Distillers Seagrams ⅛. Canadian Pacific and Dome gained fractions.

ST. PAUL'S S. S. CHRISTMAS TREAT IN PARISH HOUSE

St. Andrew's W.M.S. Holds Election of Officers for Year.

Marmora. —The annual Christmas treat in connection with St. Paul's Sunday School was held in the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening. Many parents accompanied the children for the event. Rev. A. B. Caldwell acted as chairman. Opening with the National Anthem and a short program was given. The school rendered a carol: "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear", after which Betty Jennings played as an organ solo, "Away in a Manger". Rev. A. B. Caldwell then addressed the parents on the achievements of the Sunday School during the past year. He reminded them that the school is held every Sunday without break and also mentioned the fact that the Sunday School contribution to Missions this year would be greater than for many years. Ivan Lavender then recited in costume "Santa's Helper". Next on the program was the hymn—"Come All Ye Faithful", which was sung by girls of Mrs. W. Lavender's class. A recitation by Jacqueline Leal, entitled "Jolly Bill" proved diverting. Donald Davidson then gave a reading "Santa Claus is Almost Late". Four girls of Miss Jenny Gray's class rendered a carol, "Silent Night". Jean Mumby recited "A New Doll". Closing the program was the hymn "Hark the Herald Angels Sing", by the School. Santa Claus was well on time and made frolic with the children as he gave each a Christmas cracker. He also distributed the gifts from the Christmas tree. Rev. A. B. Caldwell then made the presentation of book prizes to eight scholars of the school, who had the best record of attendance for the past year. The recipients were Gwendolyn Rundle, Audrey Lummiss, Dorothy Lummiss, Helen Lummiss, Glen Phillips, Bert Gray, Donald Davidson and Ivan Lavender. Teachers then came forward and presented a bag of candies and orange to each scholar of their class.

Christmas Services at St Paul's.

On Sunday morning, a children's service was held at ten a.m., at which the rector spoke to the children on the true meaning of Christmas. Due to the rector holding a celebration of Holy Communion at St. Mark's, Bonarlaw. W. J. Cottrell, Diocesean Lay Reader, was in charge of the morning service. The evening service which was well attended by members of St. Paul's and St. Andrew's congregations took the form of a carol service. In addition to well known carols being sung by the choir and congregation, a duet was sung by Mesdames L. R. Rundle and I. B. Nichol, "All My Heart This Night Rejoices" and a solo, "Like Silver Lamps in a Distant Shrine", by W. J. Cottrell. An impressive discourse was delivered by Rev. A. B. Caldwell. Had So Much Gas, Bloating Acidity Was Afraid to Eat

"Food Lay Like a Heavy Lump In My Stomach," Says This Woman; Limbs, Back Became Sore and Painful; Rejoices Over Grand Relief Obtained by Taking Syntona

"During the past year I suffered so badly with gas, bloating and acid indigestion I was afraid to eat," said Mrs. Minnie Arniel, 809 Queen's Avenue, London, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"Food just lay like a heavy lump in my stomach. I'd belch up hot, sour liquids and have awful dizzy feelings with spots darting before my eyes. Rheumatic pains set in my limbs, joints and muscles and I got a dull aching pain right across the small of my back. Some days I felt stiff and sore all over. This condition got me very worried and nervous and I was often so upset at night that I didn't get to sleep for hours after going to bed.

"After trying one thing and another without getting any benefit, I read about Syntona and wasn't taking it long before my food began to digest better. I was free from all that gas, bloating and acidity. Then, as I kept taking it, my nerves became relaxed so I could rest better. Gradually the aches and pains left me and I found I wasn't having that dizziness or sickening spots before my eyes. Now I enjoy all my meals and feel more healthy and energetic than I did in a long time. I highly recommend Syntona to other people who are suffering from troubles such as I had. It is a fine medicine."

MRS. MINNIE ARNIEL

The good results obtained by taking Syntona are vouched for by hundreds of men and women throughout this vicinity. It is made entirely from good old herbs, roots and barks and contains no harmful drugs.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

RUSSIANS OPEN DEEP WEDGE IN TORN NAZI LINES

Red Army Breaks Thru on 185-Mile Front in Ukraine

Vatutin's Vanguards Reported Only 43 Miles or Less From Polish Frontier

A GERMAN DEBACLE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Dec. 31. (AP)—Russian forces streaming through the greatest hole yet torn in Nazi defences have broken into the outer Bug River defences in a driving offensive that has split the routed remnants of Nazi Gen. Von Mannstein's legions and carried to within 30 miles of the river itself, front-line dispatches said today.

The Russian column sweeping toward the Bug, Germany's next line of defence along the south-central front west of the Dnieper River, thrust down the Kiev-Zhmerinka railway to open a deep wedge in the reeling Nazi army.

Marshal Vatutin's vanguards were reported within 43 miles of the Polish border and within 90 miles of the Dniester River which forms Rumania's eastern boundary.

With the Warsaw-Smela railway severed at captured Kazatin, only one supply line remained open to the retreating Nazis before the main Odessa-Lwow line itself is endangered. That one supply line from Poland winds southeastward through the Ukraine and the Red Army advance has carried to within 20 miles of the supply link. Cutting of this line would mean that all supplies for Nazi forces in the Dnieper Bend and west of Kiev would have to move over the Odessa-Lwow railway.

The advance column sweeping southwestward toward the old borders of Poland and Rumania was but 30 miles from the Provincial centre of Vinnitza on the Upper Bug River. Vinnitza lies only 60 miles from the Dniester.

On Offensive Near Kirovograd.

(The Friday German communique also indicated that the Russians were on the offensive again north of Kirovograd, in the Dnieper Bend, where German forces were reported to have been counter-attacking yesterday.

("A gap in the German lines north of Kirovograd has been closed", the announcement said tersely, adding that the numerous prisoners and extensive booty were taken.

(It said only that "heavy fighting was continuing" in the Zhitomir area west of Kiev and near Vitebsk farther to the north.)

Another arm of Gen. Vatutin's 1st Ukrainian army was striking westward in a hard-hitting mobile advance outflanking Zhitomir.

This arm was reaching for Shepetovka, 70 miles west of Zhitomir and the biggest railway junction of the Ukraine, and Novograd Volynski, a junction for two main highways about 45 miles northwest of Zhitomir.

The Russians were about 20 miles west of Zhitomir and Korosten at several points, and the great breakthrough, almost 200 miles wide, was affording the Red Army a great new area of operations.

Cavalry and motorized infantry, strong units of which were pushing forward, were far behind the shattered German front in some places and drawing close to the lowest Pripet Marshes. Hundreds of German tanks lay abandoned behind the fast moving troops, Soviet dispatches said.

The Russian spearheads knifed through the remnants of Marshal Fritz von Mannstein's 22 defeated divisions — perhaps 300,000 troops —on the eighth day of this greatest Soviet offensive of the winter that already had swept up a total of 1,300 communities.

The German debacle came just 6 weeks after von Mannstein's army had been ordered into a counter-offensive seeking vainly to recapture Kiev and regain control of the Dnieper River basin at all costs.

Victory Saluted

The "rout" of von Mannstein's army — so labelled by Premier Stalin in a triumphant order of the day — was hailed as comparable only to the victory of Stalingrad, and was saluted in Moscow with 20 salvoes from 224 guns, a tribute reserved only for major successes.

Stalin's citation said Vatutin's Army had advanced from 30 to 60 miles in the Kiev Bulge through Wednesday to capture more than 1,000 towns. The army communique added another 300 liberated since then, as the Red Army troops pounded westward over the frozen terrain, carpeted with abandoned German equipment.

Zhitomir and Berdichev, German-held rail junctions at the southern end of the 185-mile breakthrough, were by-passed by Russian advance detachments, who went on to capture Kazatin, 15 miles southeast of Berdichev and Samgorod, 13 miles farther south and 90 miles from the Rumanian frontier. Fall of Zhitomir and Berdichev was expected hourly, front dispatches indicated.

On the northern end of the long front Gen. Ivan Bagramian's 1st Baltic Army was closing in on Vitebsk from the north, east and west. Dispatches reported Russian units only a few miles from the centre of the city on one side.

Crippling Shot By Duke of York Led To End of Scharnhorst

London, Dec. 31 — (CP) — The British battleship Duke of York scored the long-range, underwater hit on the Nazi battleship Scharnhorst which crippled the 26,000-ton warship and led to her destruction, the Admiralty announced today.

The Admiralty's report, based on further information covering the Dec. 26 Arctic battle, disclosed that two forces of British destroyers attacked the Scharnhorst after the first crippling blow was delivered, and hammered out additional damage which enabled the Duke of York to close in for the kill.

Once within close range, the British battleship's mighty artillery brought the action to a quick end, the account said.

It was learned authoritatively in London that there were only 36 survivors from the Scharnhorst's complement of 1,440 officers and men.

U.S. Heavy Bombers Pound Targets In Suburbs Of Paris

TRANSFER 1847 MEN FROM NOBEL TO OTHER AREAS

Move to Begin To Plants in Toronto And New Ontario Sections on Monday

NO PAY LOSS

Toronto, Dec. 31 —(CP)— Transfer of 1,847 men from the government-operated explosive plant at Nobel, Ont., to industries in the Toronto area and Northern Ontario will begin Monday, it was announced today by B. G. Sullivan, Regional Selective Service Director.

The transfer—described as one of the largest labor transfers in the history of Canada—follows announcement of the closing of operations at the plant which came into operation early in the war.

The first group of 220 men will leave Nobel for Toronto Monday and others later in the week. It is expected 875 men will be transferred in 10 days and 1,200 by the end of January. The transfer rate will then be reduced to about 300 a month until only a skeleton maintenance crew is left at the plant.

"Not one man will lose a day's pay in the transfer unless at his own request he is given time off," said Mr. Sullivan. "Not only are the men's expenses being paid but they will travel in special cars so they will not have to be pushed around or stand during the journey."

Transfer Seen as Pattern.

He added that industry is watching the transfer closely as it will "set the pattern" for future labor movements as war industries close down or change over to peacetime production.

Mr. Sullivan said that when the Nobel plant closing was announced, Selective Service sent officials to Nobel and several industries including Victory Aircraft, Massey-Harris and International Nickel sent employment representatives to interview the men.

The men were interviewed first by Selective Service representatives. Those with mining experience were advised to go to Sudbury with International Nickel, those with bush experience were put in touch with companies needing woodsmen and others were advised to go to the Toronto area aircraft and war plants.

Some of the jobless workers are going into what is actually peacetime work—the manufacture of farm machinery at Massey-Harris. Mr. Sullivan said Massey-Harris is now engaged in a vast program of agricultural implement manufacture "because farm machinery will be urgently needed in the rehabilitation of Europe."

Three Days Grace On Tax Payments

Toronto, Dec. 31 —(CP)— Income Tax officials here said that three days of grace had been granted for persons with a normal deadline today for completing payment of 1942 income taxes, or professional men—with the same deadline—with the last instalment of 1943 tax due.

The officials said three days extra were granted because the income tax office here will close at 1 p.m. today for the New Year holiday. Anyone missing the Monday deadline would be liable to the usual three per cent fine on the unpaid balance, as well as the regular five per cent annual interest on the unpaid amount.

Less Cruelty to Animals Seen in 1942 More People Avoided Radio Tax

Ottawa, Dec. 31 (CP)—Canadians are stealing fewer rides on trains, causing fewer forest fires, showing less cruelty to animal and avoiding the payment of wages less often the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today in a summary of criminal and other offences during most of 1942.

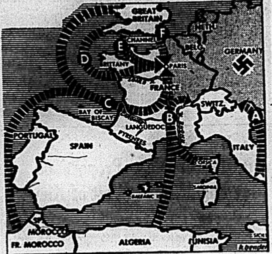
But, on the other side of the ledger, 21,706 were found to have no radio licence against 12,447 in 1941, more were convicted of speeding in cars, the use of "insulting, profane and obscene language" increased slightly, and there were more assaults and breaches of street and traffic regulations.

Convictions for having no radio licence showed the greatest increase among the common offences in 1942—74.4 per cent more than in 1941. Speeding offences increased 17.5 per cent; drunkenness 11.1 per cent; breaches of liquor laws 9.9; street and traffic offences 7.5; municipal by-laws 2.3

But there was less gambling in 1942 as convictions in this category dropped 30.7 per cent.

In 1942, 7,352 Canadians were "loose, idle or disorderly" but there were 8,056 in the previous year. Vagrants dropped from 8,856 to 7,212.

COULD ISOLATE GERMANY



Invasion moves which would isolate German troops in fortified zones are shown here as forecast by some military experts. Isolation could come about thus—troops in north Italy would be isolated between A and B by thrusts through southern France up the Rhone river valley and landings on Italy's northeast coast. Nazis in the Pyrenees could be penned in by invasion from the Bay of Biscay (C) toward Languedoc. Three drives from Britain, with landings on either side of Brittany (D) and (E) and on the Channel coast (F) would push northward behind the Nazi fortifications in Brittany. All thrusts could converge in one mighty stab toward Paris and apply effective isolation used by the Germans in their flanking of the Maginot Line.

8 GERMAN TRAINS ARE DESTROYED BY YUGOSLAVS

Germans, Desperate, Make Attempt to Seize Islands Off Dalmatia

PARTISANS MOP UP

London, Dec. 31 — (AP) — The German enemy is trying "with all his strength" to break guerilla resistance in Eastern Bosnia, and has drawn up fresh forces and special landing troops in an attempt to seize islands along the Dalmatian coast still in Partisan hands, a communique broadcast from headquarters of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) said today.

No details were given of the German attack on the islands, but presumably they were making giant efforts to seal off the Adriatic supply route from Italy to the Partisans' "Balkan Front."

Nine heavily-guarded German troop and supply trains, most of them operating on the main Zagreb-Belgrade railway line serving Northern Croatia and Serbia have been attacked and eight of them destroyed, the communique said.

Tons of Supplies Seized by Partisans

Scores of freight cars were wrecked and many tons of enemy supplies fell into the hands of the Yugoslav Partisans. Many German troops were killed or taken prisoner in the rail attacks.

Partisans were engaged in mopping-up operations in the Croat province of Banija, now practically cleared of German troops, and annihilated an enemy column yesterday's Broz's bulletin said. A German garrison near the town of Turopolje was captured.

Cairo, Dec. 31 — (AP) — The Partisan forces of Marshal Josip Broz (Drug Tito) have suffered irreparable losses in recent weeks of heavy fighting and 14,000 guerillas are cut off in the Dinara Alps of Northwestern Yugoslavia, a statement from King Peter's Yugoslav government here said today.

"They are deprived of all possible support from the outside and are at present engaged in desperate fighting with their backs to the Dinara Alps," the statement said.

"Under pressure from German and Ustachi (Croat Puppet Troops) the forces of resistance of Yugoslav fighters in Bosnia have been gravely endangered," it added.

"The Partisans have been pushed back from all the major towns and villages and broken up into small groups, some of which are in process of disintegration. Others are retreating in disorder towards western Bosnia."

The statement from King Peter's government, which is opposed to Marshal Broz and his Partisan government, lacked confirmation from other sources. Broz' communiques have announced successful resistance to the German invaders and his supporters in London have estimated that the Partisans have liberated one-third of Yugoslavia. The Royal Yugoslav government frequently has attempted to belittle the efforts of the Partisans.

ENGINEER KILLED TRAINMEN BURNED BY LIVE STEAM

Steam Pipe of C.N.R. Freight Engine Bursts While Pulling Train

STOP FAST TRAIN

Ottawa, Dec. 31 —(CP)—Two railroaders, A. Valliere, 30, of Limoges, Que., and M. S. Cybulski, of Barry's Bay, Ont., were in hospital here today in "quite serious condition" following the burst of a steam pipe in a Canadian National Railways freight engine near Alexandria, Ont., which fatally injured T. C. Reasbeck, 54, of Ottawa, the engineer.

Cybulski, fireman and Valliere, brakeman, suffered scalds to the hands, face and ankles when the pipe exploded, and Cybulski also suffered a deep scalp wound.

Live steam shot into the cab of the locomotive as the train was pulling 55 cars up a grade near Alexandria, about 55 miles east of Ottawa. Reasbeck was thrown through the cab window by the explosion.

Cybulski is believed to have jumped from the engine cab. The train, which continued to roll forward after the explosion, finally was stopped about three-quarters of a mile east of the point where Reasbeck was found.

Conductor Ross Conley of Ottawa and other crewmen put out flares to stop the fast C.N.R. Transcontinental No. 1 train from Montreal which was following the freight. The Transcontinental was halted at Alexandria, however, and later pushed the freight into Greenfield, Ont., and took the injured men aboard.

Two Alexandria doctors, E. J. Dolan and D. Primeau, boarded the Transcontinental train there and went to the scene, where they were assisted in treating the injured by Miss Edna Hill of Apple Hill, Ont., a trained nurse.

11 P. C. DROP ANNOUNCED

Toronto, Dec. 31 —(CP)— Ontario's mining industry produced raw materials to an estimated value of $230,000,000 in 1943, Hon. Leslie M. Frost, Provincial Treasurer and Minister of Mines, announced today. In a year-end review of the industry he said the amount represented a drop of 11 per cent from the $261,363,088 production value in 1942.

RECAPTURE TEN VILLAGES

Chungking, Dec. 31—(AP)—Chinese forces have recaptured more than 10 villages around Owchihkow in the Hunan-Nupeh border region, thereby restoring the situation in that sector to what it was before the Japanese began their rice area campaign Nov. 2, the Chinese High Command announced today.

Enemy remnants around Owchihkow were mopped up, the communique said.

5TH ARMY MAKES LEAPFROG ATTACK ON WEST COAST

Aimed at Junctions Controlling Road to Rome Over the Pontine Marshes

BREAKS STALEMATE

By WES GALLAGHER
AP War Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 31 — (AP)—Anglo-American 5th Army troops carried out a large scale raid along the west coast of Italy north of the Garigliano river yesterday, and seized the initiative from the Germans along the long stalemated and water-logged front in that sector, Allied headquarters announced today.

The announcement confirmed at least in part German broadcasts that the Allies had made an amphibious leapfrog attack in that area and had established a bridgehead.

Gen. Sir Harold Alexander's headquarters gave no details of the raid, but it apparently was aimed at junctions controlling the coastal road to Rome over the Pontine marshes — a highway that for centuries has been known as the Appian Way.

Berlin broadcasts yesterday claimed the Allies had been prevented from reaching the Appian Way and that the fighting had been localized on the beaches with heavy casualties for the landing forces. The key city in this battle area is Minturno, slightly inland from the coast.

The attack by the Allies countered a heavy two-day offensive by the German 10th Army in the Garigliano sector aimed at the town of Puntefiume at the mouth of the river.

Headquarters gave no additional information about the drive of American troops to San Vittore, last fortified village in the valley leading to Cassino. Bitter fighting has been raging there and the town has been reduced to rubble by Allied artillery, advices from the front said, but the Germans were dug into wine cellars underlying the town where it was difficult to reach them with artillery fire.

Year-End Aerial Offensive Rages Over French Soil

More Than 3,000 Craft Sent Over Enemy Targets Thurs. By Air Command

TARGETS NOT LISTED

By W. W. HERCHER
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 31—(AP)— United States heavy bombers supported by R. A. F. fighters smashed at targets in France today, it was announced, and the Paris radio said the bombs rained in the suburbs of Paris.

Exact nature of the objectives of the daylight assault were not announced as the year-end aerial offensive—which had sent more than 3,000 planes thundering against enemy targets in the previous 24 hours —raged on to a climactic finish.

American planes last bombarded Paris on Sept. 15, striking at the Cam ballbearing works and the Hispano-Suiza and Caudron-Renault airplane and motor works.

Other raids on the Paris region this year were on April 4 when the Renault works was hit, Sept. 3 when the Messerschmitt repair factory was smashed and Sept. 9 when an aircraft engine factory was the target.

Paris was among 36 French towns warned in a BBC broadcast on Nov. 17 of impending Allied air attacks.

A later Paris radio broadcast said 200 persons were killed and 2,000 injured at Paris.

Paris, administration centre for German occupation authorities, also is a Nazi war production centre. The Renault works on Seine Island at Billancourt is reported to be producing transport vehicles, tanks and airplane engines. Nearby is the Gnome-Rhone works, which turns out airplane engines for the Germans.

The closing raids of 1943 today also followed fresh blows last night by R.A.F. Mosquitos which hit targets in western Germany and northern France, and new mine-laying operations, in which not a single Allied plane was lost.

The targets of an estimated 500 R.A.F., United States and R.C.A.F. medium bombers and fighter-bombers yesterday—announced by the officials only as "military objectives in northern France"—possibly were the "rocket gun" emplacements of the Nazis in the Pas de Calais area.

The daylight operations today were launched in cold fine weather by flocks of medium bombers which returned in an hour.

Another great force went out between Folkestone and Dungeness, heading toward the French coast with numerous squadrons of fighters flying top cover.

In return the Germans stabbed only lightly at southeast England last night, causing slight damage at one place but no casualties.

The year-end pounding of the Reich began Wednesday night when R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. planes dumped more than 2,000 tons of bombs on Berlin to practically end the rule of that capital as the nerve centre of Germany. Twenty planes, five of them Canadian, were lost in the assault.

With daylight, and shortly after the Berlin raiders settled down on their fields, some 1,500 Allied planes —U.S. bombers protected by R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. fighters — struck deep into the Reich against undisclosed targets while another 500 planes, including those from the air arms of Britain, the U.S. and Canada, were lashing at France.

Twenty-two bombers and 12 fighters in the protecting coveys of U.S., R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. and Allied escorts were lost in the mammoth assault against undisclosed German targets, a communique announced early today. Twenty-three Nazi planes were downed, 11 of them falling to bomber gunners.

While the communique did not identify German targets, the London Herald, quoting Swiss reports, said the prime objective was a poison gas works of the I. G. Farbenindustrie at Ludwigshafen.

Allied Leaders Confident of Victory But Nazis Gloomy As New Year Dawns

By The Canadian Press

Prospects for the new year of world conflict brought from Allied military leaders declarations of confidence and victories in mighty impending blows against the enemy, while Nazi spokesmen offered the German people only gloomy predictions of more hardships in 1944.

The Allies are "closing in upon the enemy" and the coming year "gives every promise of being a year of deliverance," declared Lt.-Gen. Jacob L. Devers, who is going to the Mediterranean theatre as Deputy Commander of Allied forces.

Devers told graduates of the Royal Military College at Aldershot, England, that they would participate in "what well may be the most stirring and far-reaching events in the annals of the world."

In Washington, Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Navy, said he concurred with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, new European invason commander, that Germany may be defeated in the coming year, and asserted that a tremendous offensive against Japan is planned in 1944. The "main lines of attack" have been set, and "unremitting pressure on Japan will be continued and increased," King declared.

Russians in Moscow, preparing to celebrate New Year's as the biggest unofficial holiday of the year, everywhere expressed hope that 1944 would see the end of the war.

The new year's preview as painted by German newspapers reaching Stockholm was sharply different. Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter could only offer hope that the German army might hold off the Russians, and warned it could mean defeat if the Nazi armies are forced to withdraw within the German border. Reviewing 1943, it acknowledged only Russian gains — not mentioning bombings, North Africa, Sicily or the fall of Italy — as it declared there "has been no decisive change in the military situation."

Heinrich Himmler's weekly Das Schwarze Korps said the bombings had made "hundreds of thousands of Germans thirsting for revenge," and that the Germans would not rest until revenged by "the killing of 100 persons for every German killed, by the ruining of 100 places for every German place ruined." Promises of a secret weapon again were advanced.

In Tokyo Domei News Agency broadcast a gloomy New Year's message from Premier Hideki Tojo warning the people that Japan now faces a "crucial test" and that it is "the sublime duty of everyone now to sacrifice body and soul within a single atom of self-interest."

The broadcast, reported by the United States Office of War Information, quoted the Premier as saying that "with the Anglo-Americans counter-attacking, the war is at the decisive point. Victory or defeat in greater East Asia, construction or downfall of greater East Asia, all depend solely upon the outcome of the present struggle."

Another Wonder Drug Produces Dramatic Cures

Berkley, Calif., Dec. 31 (AP)—The University of California Medical School disclosed today that another so-called wonder drug—Gramacidin—is competing with penicillin in dramatic cures.

Dr. Henry Brainerd, clinical instructor in medicine, reported today in a university news bulletin that Gramacidin, prepared from soil bacteria by a relatively simple process, owes its healing powers to the same general principle as penicillin. He said Gramacidin is more than 1,000 times as active in germ-killing as the sulfonamide drugs.

Describing the drug as cheaper and easier to produce than penicillin, Dr. Brainerd said Gramacidin has been used successfully in cases of impetigo, boils, infected wounds, burns and various types of ulcers with "variable and sometimes very dramatic results."

AIR RIFLE PELLET HITS BOY IN EYE

Mrs. G. Irwin, 172 Station Street, complained to police authorities last night that her young son had been struck in the eye with a pellet discharged from an air rifle. No information was heard regarding the seriousness of the injury, however. Later police learned the name of a neighbor lad who was seen discharging an air rifle in that vicinity last evening. Police investigations are continuing.

ANTIFREEZE CAUSE OF BLAZE IN CAR

Overheated alcohol which spilled out of the radiator and onto the hot motor caused considerable damage to an auto owned by Norman Nixon at noon on Thursday. The car was parked at the Riverside Garage on Moira Street when the fire took place, the blaze damaging the wires and other motor parts before being extinguished. Garage employees fought the blaze with Pyrene solution prior to its being brought under control by members of the Fire Department, who saw the blaze from the station window.

GARBAGE COLLECTION AS USUAL ON SATURDAY

Employees of the Public Works Department engaged in garbage collection about city streets will not observe the New Year holiday and garbage collection will be made as usual, it was announced today by City Engineer Charles Mott. Considerable number of residents had been wondering whether the collection would be made on the holiday and had called the city hall for advice as to whether or not they should put their garbage out.

Many Disappointed When Supply Of 'Mickeys' Runs Out

The absence of "mickeys" at the local liquor store left a goodly number of citizen facing a "dry New Year's Eve celebration" tonight.

Hundreds of citizens, had purchased 26 ounces of liquor "for their Christmas quota, leaving the remainder for a New Year's "mickey". A liquor store official here revealed that when the local store opened Thursday morning after being closed since Christmas Eve' they had on stock some 850 12-ounce bottles of gin and rye. By one o'clock in the afternoon there wasn't a "mickey" in the place as the result of the early morning rush. Thus persons who had sufficient ounces for only a 12-ounce bottle were "just out of luck."

Liquor Control Board officials were conservative when comparing this year's volume of holiday business as against last. "Frankly I believe the sales on the comparative week last year were greater", stated one official.

There was no imported wine available at the store today. The local native wine store and the beer warehouse reported a steady flow of business.

Destroyer Survivor Confirms Death Of Tpmn. 'Vince' Guay

Their son was reported as missing following the naval action.

Communication with Seaman Fisher of Saskatchewan, sole survivor of the St. Croix, revealed that Torpedoman Guay had been mortally wounded in the attack which sank the destroyer. He was rescued but died the same night aboard the British destroyer Itchen which was later torpedoed.

Born in Thurlow township, Torpedoman Guay was popular among the Belleville district younger set and was active in athletics, having played on district baseball and hockey teams. He attended Carmel public school and was a member of St. Michael's Church, Belleville.

Construction In City During 1943 Increases $26,400

An increase of $26,400 in the 1943 building list as compared with that of 1942 was seen in the city of Belleville this year it was indicated at the year end by City Engineer Charles Mott. Total permits for the year were 185 representing a construction value of $211,444, as compared with 117 permits during 1942 with a building value of $185,040.

Although the current year saw a considerable increase in the number of permits issued, by far the greater number of these were for small alterational jobs or for repair projects. The number of new residences build during the year was considerably less than one year ago, although there were quite a number of industrial building additions and expansions noted.

A total of seven permits were issued during the month of December, representing construction value of $26,050. This compares with five permits issued for the same month last year with a value of only $5,180.

Permits issued during the month included Universal Moulded Products Limited, one storey addition to plant costing $6,500; R. J. Messervey, 5 Reid Street, hen house, $400; Fred Terry, Gordon Street, workshop, $100; R. F. Hayward, alterations at 93 Station Street, $200; Consolidated Optical Company Ltd., plant addition, $7,950; Houston Company Ltd., addition, $2,900, and to Harold D. Bateman, for repairs at the Crystal Hotel, $8.000.

Harold L. Ickes Expresses Thanks For Ear Muffs

That high-ranking state officials still can take time out to reply to a well-meaning practical joke despite the demands of national wartime problems was indicated here this week with the receipt of a letter by B. A. Yanover, local haberdashery proprietor, from Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior for the United States.

It all started a week or so ago when in an issue of Life magazine a picture of Mr. Ickes appeared, the shot being taken in sub-zero weather during a visit to Washington State. The frost apparently had been getting to Mr. Ickes' ears because he had them covered with his hands and in a measure of light-hearted sympathy Mr. Yanover forwarded a pair of ear muffs and a letter with the season's compliments. But at that Mr. Ickes had the last word as was evidenced in his letter.

"In reply to yours of December 20th., I have been known to wear ear muffs at that, having frozen my ears severely in my early courting days," wrote Mr. Ickes. "So if the ones you are sending are big enough I will probably be able to put them to good use, especially when I venture north again in wintry weather. I am glad that your business is good enough so that you feel warranted for this extravagance.

With best wishes for the New Year."

Harold L. Ickes.
Secretary of the Interior.

1943 May Set Record Number of Convictions

A record number of convictions in city police court were recorded in 1943, revealed Deputy Chief Arthur Harman as the year closed out today.

"We have not tabulated all cases for the annual police report, but it is safe in assuming there were well over eight hundred convictions registered in the city police court in 1943," added Deputy Chief Harman, who is also clerk of the police court.

There was no session of city police court on December 31st.

"With the exception of one minor liquor count there were no other cases to be heard so we abandoned the court for the remainder of the year and hope to start 1944 with a clean slate," added Chief W. R. Probert as he again issued his annual plea regarding New Year's Eve celebrations. "If you drink, please don't drive a motor vehicle," concluded Chief Probert.

Aussie Private Awarded V.C.

London, Dec. 31 — (CP Cable) — The London Gazette today announced the award of the Victoria Cross to an Irish-born Australian, Pte. Richard Kelliher who three times braved heavy fire in the New Guinea fighting.

Twice he attacked a Japanese machine-gun nest single handed and the third time he rescued a wounded comrade.

Without orders, Kelliher dashed out and hurled two grenades at the post which was holding up his platoon. He killed some of the defenders but not all. Then he went back and got a Bren gun and finished the job. The third time he went back to rescue a wounded section leader under fire from other Japanese position.

Kelliher is the 13th Australian V.C. of the war.

Special Entertainment and Dances Will Feature New Year's Eve Events

When the first stroke of twelve sounds throughout the city at midnight tonight, Belleville will be going in full swing to welcome in the New Year. Private parties, dances and theatres will entertain the celebrants from the early hours of the night to the early hours of the morning. Special programs have been arranged by the three local theatres for their midnight shows, the Trianon Ballroom will conduct a New Year's Eve dance with The Commodores giving out with their usual danceable rhythm and the fun will run high, aided by a number of special dances and the noisemakers that go with every New Year's party.

The Belleville Armouries will be the scene of two parties, the officers will entertain their ladies and friends in their Mess, while the sergeants will do their utmost to frighten the small fellow with the sash from their newly appointed party-room, the Armouries shooting gallery, which they have decorated with fine display of talent and taste. Both dances are to be by special invitation only.

The Belleville Club will conduct their annual New Year's Eve dance in their quarters at Pinnacle and Bridge streets, also by special invitation, and many of the business and professional men and their wives will gather in these rooms to welcome in 1944. Service dances will be held at at least two of the R.C.A.F. stations in the vicinity, Trenton and No. 5 I.T.S. The latter is offering a floor show as well as a dance. Tables have been set in cabaret style in the gymnasium. The officers of R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, will hold a reception in the Mess on New Year's Day to which a number of local people have been invited.

Sharp at midnight, Jamie Clark and his pipers will parade the aisles of the Belle Theatre playing "Auld Lang Syne" and "Cock O' the North" and other Scottish tunes associated with the advent of the New Year.

Not to be outdone by the city parties, the Patriotic Workers of Carrying Place have taken over Quinte Inn where the general public is invited to dance the Old Year out and the New Year in to the music of a 5-piece orchestra.

With victory in sight in the theatres of war, Belleville will have more cause for celebration this year than they had last New Year's Eve. It is expected that 1943 will go out and 1944 enter with a greater spirit of good will and thankfulness than for several years.

The War Today—

Disaster of Vast Proportions May Engulf Nazis West of Kiev

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press War Analyst

The spectacular surge of the Red Army west of Kiev, now beginning to swing in flanking movements north and south, and the apparent collapse of the German line may imply a Nazi disaster of staggering proportions.

They have not yet produced such a disaster, and it would be premature to assume that the war will be ended because of the brilliant success of Gen. Vatutin's Ukrainian army. It may yet develop that the line he has smashed was not the main German force.

Red Offensive Surprises Nazis

What appears to have happened is that the Russian offensive came before the Germans were entirely prepared for it, in greater force than they expected, and before the withdrawal of the bulk of German troops from the Dnieper bend could be completed.

That withdrawal may never be completed now, since the capture of Kazatin and the encirclement of Berdichev broke one of the two main rail lines out of the areas; but there is every reason to believe that the withdrawal was well started, and an estimate of the number of German troops left there would be strictly a guess.

At one time, the Germans had around 500,000 wounded soldiers in hospitals there, and huge numbers of combat troops. One guess is that, if the Red Army offensive carries south of Berdichev through Zhmerinka to the Bessarabian border, the Germans might lose as many as 20 divisions by that flanking development and would be lucky to lose as few as 100,000 combat men. The size of the transportation problem involved in a withdrawal is indicated by the estimate that it would take 75 trains of 50 cars each a week to take out the wounded alone.

The Nazi counter-attacks in the Kiev region have been called a counter-offensive, and termed one of the worst tactical blunders the German High Command has made in the course of the war. If there had been a counter-offensive aimed at recapture of Kiev, blunder would be the proper term. There has been repeated evidence, however, that they were limited counter-attacks, aimed at keeping the railroads open through Kazatin-Berdichev-Korosten to facilitate the withdrawal from the Dnieper bend, and as such they made the best kind of tactical sense.

The blunder was in ever trying to hold the Dnieper as a winter line, and Hitler and his generals are reported to have disagreed sharply over that.

Bandits Attempt To Rob Liquor Store at Cobourg

Port Hope, Ont., Dec. 31 — (CP) —Less than an hour after thieves attempted to break into the government liquor store at nearby Cobourg today, a door was forced in a service station here and a tire, five gallons of anti-freeze, some car batteries, $50 worth of cigarets and a book of gasoline ration coupons were stolen.

It was learned here that Ontario provincial police at Bowmanville chased an automobile, believed to have been used in the garage break-in, into Scarboro township.

Police at Cobourg said three men attempted to break into the liquor store by removing the glass from the front door. They were interrupted by constable Roy Doherty and exchanged several shots before escaping.

Attempts to break and enter the Ontario Liquor Control Board store at Cobourg were foiled early today when three car bandits exchanged shots with night constable Roy Doherty when he discovered the men attempting to gain entrance to the liquor store through the front door. There were three men seen, two in armed services uniforms and a civilian. They were travelling in a stolen sedan and also entered a service station at the eastern town limits of Trenton where they stole a quantity of cigarettes, Provincial Police added.

When Constable Doherty came upon the robbers they had already removed the glass from the front door of the store and the door was opened preparatory to a wholesale robbery. Following the exchange of shots the bandits made a successful getaway in an easterly direction. They had stolen a Pontiac, bearing licence plate number 86-W-77 in Bowmanville early in the night and later at Newcastle switched licence plates when they stole a plate number 2-C-386.

Provincial Police here say the robbers drove east until reaching Trenton where they entered a service station and stole cigarettes. Then by taking concession roads north of Highway No. 2 the car fugitives managed to reach Bowmanville early today where Traffic Officer Bob Duncan picked up their trail and in a fast chase followed the robbers into Oshawa where they disappeared.

Americans Secure Excellent Bases By Recent Victory

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(AP War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 31 —(AP)— Allied airmen soon will be ranging out from the American-won Cape Gloucester airdrome on New Britain to carry out aerial assaults on Japanese holdings in the Bismarck Archipelago.

United States marines overran both runways of the strategically-situated airdrome at nightfall Thursday, just four days and four hours after the first wave of the Guadalcanal veterans stormed the shores of northwestern New Britain.

Lt.-Gen. Walter C. Krueger, commander of the U.S. 6th Army, told General MacArthur that American losses were "unbelievably light" in the final assault which cost the Japanese at least 500 dead.

MacArthur visited an advanced command post at Cape Gloucester today and received personally the report of the marines' victory from their commander, Maj.Gen. William H. Rupertus.

More than 100 planes that dropped 256 tons of bombs and fired 30,000 rounds from their cannon and machine-guns blasted the way for the final assault which swept the marines onto one runway Wednesday and the second strip yesterday.

The Cape Gloucester drive pushed the centre of the Allied line from New Guinea 200 miles northward to the shores of the Bismarck Sea. It demonstrated that Allied naval forces can operate with decisive effect on Bismarck waters long dominated by the Japanese. And it gave Allied fliers a new jumping off place for attacks on enemy position in the Admiralty Islands, Kavieng and Rabaul.

"Curly" has been a resident of Belleville for a number of years and is very well known by many of the younger set of the city. "Curly" was born in Kingston and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Clifford of that city. He attended schools in Kingston and Winnipeg and was active in juvenile and junior sports circles. In 1939 he enlisted with the R.C.A.F. and was stationed at Trenton air port until April 1941 when he was posted to Mountain View at the opening of that station. In the summer of 1941 he was detailed for special duty at Toronto with the R.C.A.F. Women's Division College just opened and remained there for a short period as an instructor. Another posting took him west to Calgary where he remained only a short time and returned to Trenton where he took up the duties of a mechanical transport instructor. In July he remustered to air crew and was posted from Trenton to Toronto and then to No. 5 I.T.S., Belleville, where he took his initial air crew training.

During his service at Trenton station "Curly" was secretary of the "Adastral Players," a group of R.C.A.F. personnel who put on plays and short comedy skits under the direction of Wing Cmdr. C. R. R. Lloyd, R.A.F., who was at that time Officer Commanding the Air Armament School and recently repatriated to England. He was married in August 1942 to Virginia E. Nasmith of Toronto and a daughter, Kerry Virginia, was born to the Cliffords on December 2nd, this year.

Flt.-Sgt. Clifford was presented with the bracelet given to The Outstanding Airman of the course at No. 5 I.T.S., when he had completed the course. The presentation is given in recognition for leading his class all through the course and for attaining the highest average upon examination. He has one brother in the R.C.A.F., AC2 Ernest R. Clifford, who is at present attending pre-air crew training at the R.C.A.F. Pre-Air Crew Training School at Hamilton, and a second brother, Walter G. Clifford, who is with the Merchant Marine.

Greeting a Momentous Year

No year was ever looked forward to with such hope as the year 1944 which is now being ushered in. The coming twelvemonth is freighted with the greatest possibilities which have ever been foreshadowed by man. For four and a third years the greatest war in history, which affects every living soul of the two billion or more inhabitants of earth, has raged, and now comes the year 1944 big with destiny. Never before in history has mankind been so closely brought together as in these years as the war has touched every land directly or indirectly. What the world has gone through can leave the world never again the same as it was before the war years. It is in this sense that the New Year is welcomed.

Greatest results are prayed and hoped for from this struggle for it is a war of right against the Axis powers of darkness and evil.

That Germany will be forced to unconditional surrender in the year 1944 has been confidently forecast by General Eisenhower and others, the one condition being that all do their "full duty." What a reward of heroic service by the self-sacrificing men at the front and by the steady untiring people at home!

If 1944 is destined to see the overthrow of the greatest threat that ever reared its head against civilization in all recorded history, then 1944 will be a new year heralding ages of peace for a world torn so many times in the past twenty centuries with strife.

These four and a third years of conflict have produced one of those happy auguries which delight mankind—the sight of the nations of earth in the vast majority lined up on the side of freedom and democracy, fighting to bring security for ages-to-be for all peoples. And there is the second cheering and inspiring fact that the victory is coming to the unselfish nations, those that fight under the banners of liberty and a growing democracy.

Many signs are seen that the enemy powers are suffering from the strain of their effort while the year 1943 has seen the upbuilding of the greatest Allied power for the carrying of freedom to all parts of the earth. With the greatest effectiveness this power has been hurled at the enemy and results have been showing in victories for the past year and more.

1943 has been a year of disillusionment for the Nazi leaders and Prussian militarism in the air war, the sea war and in the land war. And the year is closing on a supreme note of United Nations' solidarity and on expectation of the smashing effect of the impending invasion by the Allied Nations in the "second front" and of the great Russian offensive.

As the bells of 1943 ring out a year and those of 1944 ring in the New Year the message they sound will herald the Allied victory. They will ring through the stout hearts of European peoples who have defied the murderous regime of Nazism and militaristic Germany. These same bells will sound the knell of crashing German power. Overrun Europe waits expectant for the greatest day of ages when liberation will come and the Nazi chains be struck off and the age of a new world of security from aggression begun. These peoples are ready for the day when tyranny's shackles will be shaken off and now is the time when every person must be prepared for the era that will mean so much to mankind.

May mankind's dearest hopes be realized that complete victory will come over Germany soon and as soon as possible over Japan so that the world may begin the era of peaceful progress under safeguards of security and that the boys may return from the far corners of the earth where they have been fighting the good fight for the world. The coming days and months are laden with great tasks to be performed and with grave responsibilities in order to bring supreme results. May all be worthy of the effort which has been and will be put forth.

Mr. Churchill's Personal Note

A delightfully personal touch appears in Mr. Churchill's message to the United Nations concerning his complete recovery from illness. Like a man who has always enjoyed good health he delights that he has been able to discharge all his official duties all along. His never-to-be-suppressed sense of the jocular and jovial finds expression as he writes, "I am now leaving the place where I have been staying 'for an unknown destination,'" in a little bantering with the censorship.

In praise of his physician, medical authorities and nurses who arrived "as if by magic," he playfully says of the fight against his illness "I hope all our battles will be equally well conducted."

Everyone has been talking of sulfa drug and Mr. Churchill does so too and as a patient is able to make a remark about the operation of this marvellous drug in combatting pneumonia.

His playful wit romps in his reference to the intruder spot on his lung as being "repulsed."

It is a plain letter at the end of which he says, "I thought that some of those who have been so kind as to inquire or express themselves in friendly terms about me would like to have this personal note which they will please take as conveying my sincere thanks."

His friends in the United Nations are glad indeed to hear this message from the inspiring leader, written in simple words, and in a tone delightfully playful and cheerful.

Week of Prayer

Following the custom in previous years a series of meetings known as "the week of prayer" will be held from Jan. 3rd to 7th in this city.

During the period of war millions of men and women have come to give prayer a larger place in their lives. They recognize that prayer satisfies a natural emotion. The people pray daily for their King and Queen and Country and the Empire, for the triumph of right and for divine protection of those in the armed forces who undergo dangers and trials on land, on the sea and in the air. They feel in the course of events that there is a guiding spirit and hand inspiring the United Peoples and directing events through the wisdom of the leaders and the courage and fortitude of the soldiers, sailors and airmen and of the people at home. They recognize how frail and helpless they are when they stand alone.

There is no more apt time for such meetings than at the beginning of a year and particularly of the year 1944 which holds in the days ahead possibilities of the greatest events in many centuries for the whole world.

Winter Prairie Fire

(Regina Leader-Post)

Grass fires and stubble fires on the prairies are common enough in the autumn months. At that time of the year vegetation is normally dry, many straw stacks are being burned, and in the past years while shells were still available many hunters were abroad in the country.

But prairie fires around Christmas time are rare. Ordinarily there is enough snow to prevent them either by burying the grass or keeping it moist as the snow melts before any fire that might start.

The fire between Mortlach and Bonharm, west of Moose Jaw, was a costly novelty, costly in that it caused the loss of two barns, scorched some dwellings and destroyed pasture. Its vigor and size no doubt was due to the almost complete lack of snow this year.

Laziness grows on people; it begins in cobwebs and ends in iron chains. The more business a man has to do the more he is able to accomplish, for he learns to economize his time.—Sir M. Hale.

PREDICTION

There are great victories in store,
And apple bloom,
And in the months which lie before
The tyrant's doom.

Perhaps some February day,
Made white with snow,
The forts of Europe will give way
To boys we know.

Or, with the coming of the spring,
The warming sun
May shine upon a glorious thing—
War's final gun.

There will come summertime again,
And it may be
That with the ripening of the grain,
Full victory!

Or, when the growing time has passed,
The golden fall
May close the book of war at last
With: "That is all!"

And ere the bells of Christmas ring
To mark His birth,
May come the peace He hoped to bring
To all on earth.

Expression of Thanks

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Will you kindly permit us through the columns of your valuable paper to thank the Kinsmen for the splendid entertainment and presents, which they gave to the children in our foster homes. We understand they had a glorious time visiting our Receiving Homes and if they enjoyed it as much as the children, we are sure they will be well repaid for the efforts put forth for the benefit of the little ones in our care.

The Society was also able to send presents to all the wards and British child guests for Christmas through the generosity of the public and we sincerely thank the public for providing the means for these gifts. We would especially thank the ladies of St. Michael's Benevolent Society (Mrs.) F. S. Anderson), Dr. E. Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

SIR WILFRED LAURIER, 1917

"You'll have to stay in bed today if you want to go to the applebee tomorrow." When Mother spoke up like this and looked significantly at their clothes the youngsters had no "come-back." They knew she wasn't being harsh—it was just that their little dresses and shirts had to be washed and made ready for the great occasion—and they with but one set of garments to their name!

Around about September of every year the pioneers would begin to lick their lips and look hungrily at the rosy fruit dangling from their apple trees. The orchards were "babies"—set out eagerly as soon as a clearing could be made, and tended as lovingly as growing children. Such excitement there was when the first apples rounded out, but nothing compared to the dither everyone got into when there was a big enough harvest to have an apple-bee! Boys and girls teamed up, the boys doing the peeling, the lassies the quartering and coring. As for the older folk, they were busy stringing and tying apples so they could have dried fruit all winter long. Some of the apples were set aside for the cider press, which led a busy life since everybody was fond as could be of the fragrant nectar.

Apples chosen for the year's supply of cider had red skins, yellow and often fibrous pulp, and a tangy dryness. Cider-making was usually deferred until December, if possible. The apples were reduced by the cider mill to a uniform mass, and this was then exposed 24 hours to the air, being spread and once or twice turned to facilitate absorption of oxygen. It was then ground again, juice added, and the whole pressed. The ordinary mill owned by farmers was often a heavy cylindrical stone 3 to 4 feet in diameter [illegible] 1-foot thick made to revolve and [illegible] along in a circular trough in which the apples were placed. The mass was then put into haircloths and powerfully pressed, and the liquor run into casks.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED!

EVE'S LAST NAME

The surname of Eve, like that of her husband, was Adam.

Genesis 5:1-2 says: "This is the book of the generations of Adam. In the day that God created man, in the likeness of God made he him; male and female created he them; and blessed them, and called their name Adam, in the day when they were created."

"Adam" is merely a Hebrew word meaning man in the sense of mankind or a human being. It is derived from "adamah," earth, and is akin to a Hebrew verb meaning to build or to produce.

"Adam" was not at first regarded as a proper name, but was originally applied to the human race. In the verses just quoted, as well as elsewhere in the Bible, "Adam" is applied both to the first man and to mankind generally.

The revised version of the Bible translates "adam" as "man" or "the man" in all cases except where it clearly means the first man, where it is rendered "Adam."

In Genesis 2 it is related that God formed the first man "of the dust of the ground" and the first woman of one of the ribs of the first man. Some have supposed this to be another account of the creation of the human race, but it is more probable that it was intended to supply additional details about the same event told of in Genesis 1.

Genesis 2: 22-23 says: "And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man." This is an attempt to render into English the thought of the Hebrew original. In Hebrew the usual word for man as an individual is "Ish," while that for woman as an individual is "Ishshah," and the similarity in sound in both Hebrew and English emphasizes the spiritual relationship between Ish and Ishshah, between man and woman.

In Genesis 3 the first man is referred to both as Adam, as if that were his name, and as "the man," while the first woman is referred to as "the woman" and as the wife of Adam, or the man, until verse 20, which says, "And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living."

Of course, the last part of this verse does not mean the mother of all living things, but the mother of all mankind, after the creation of the first pair.

During the past year all Canadians have in their various ways made contributions to Victory and Peace: by going forward dauntlessly on the Fighting Fronts; by carrying on with courage and good cheer in War plants; by working and waiting patiently on the civilian front.

We, as a business organization distributing millions of essential articles both to civilians and to men and women in the Armed Forces, deeply appreciate the patronage which you, our many friends and friendly customers, have extended to us.

Operating, in many instances, with inadequate stocks of merchandise, we have at times and for reasons beyond our control, been unable to supply you with "just what you have wanted"; but your continued patronage has been heart-warming proof of your sympathetic understanding of our problems. SEES BIG ISSUE FOR BRITAIN, U.S. OVER AIR BASES

Peter Masefield Gives Frank 'British View' of Post-War Aviation

TEMPORARY PACT?

Boston, Dec. 31 —(AP)— In a frankly "British view" of post-war aviation, Peter Masefield writes in the January Atlantic Monthly that "undoubtedly the biggest issue between Great Britain and the United States today is that of air bases."

Masefield is personal adviser on civil aviation to Lord Beaverbrook, who has been named by Prime Minister Churchill to formulate a post-war air policy for Britain.

In his copyrighted article, Masefield speaks specifically of the bases which the United States holds for military purposes on 99-year leases from Britain. He wrote:

"My personal opinion—and all the opinions expressed here are of course entirely unofficial and only my own interpretation—is that whereas the bases, under the terms of the lease, will naturally continue as bulwarks of American strategic defence, their sovereignty belong unquestionably to the peoples in whose countries they are built."

Amplifying this view, Masefield says that "obviously many recently built air bases throughout the world are mutually necessary to the United States and the British Commonwealth for national defence." But air commerce, he argues, "is a separate thing," a subject "which can be dealt with only in the whole broad issue of freedom of the air."

The problem is made more complex, Masefield says, by the American construction on British territory, such as those in Bermuda, Jamaica and Trinidad.

Suggests Temperary Agreement.

"The fact that the United States has spent much money and labor on air bases where none existed before is, I know, regarded in America as establishing an American civil right to those bases," Masefield explains. "On the other hand, one might argue that the expenditure was a wartime necessity of self-defence.

It matched the necessity of the British to concentrate labor and money on fighter and bomber production to the exclusion of all else, and to sacrifice the best lives of the nation in the Battle of Britain—which saved the world.

"The one expenditure has resulted in permanent bases for American defence; the other in military aircraft which became obsolete and in men dead who can never be restored . . ."

Masefield suggests, "some temporary agreement is obviously necessary so that air commerce can begin after the war without delay and with a minimum of restriction."

Maryland Mosquitoes Earn Soldier Title Champion Liar of '43

Burlington, Wis., Dec. 31 (AP)—A captive Maryland mosquito carrying around its neck a diamond-studded gold medal, bearing the inscription "World Champion Liar," was liberated here today.

The insect, according to O. C. Hulett, President of the Burlington Liars Club, will fly directly to an army camp at Tooele, Utah, and there deliver the medal to Sgt. Baron S. Fonnesbeck.

It was the story of this and other Maryland Mosquitoes that earned the soldier the title of "World Champion Liar of 1943."

Here is Sgt. Fonnesbeck's story which the judges decided was the best of the 6,000 entered in the annual contest:-

"The mosquitoes of Maryland were of the P-38 type, and when they landed they always filled both fuselages. The first day I was there, they completely drained me of blood. The second day I was giving the I.O.U.'s.

"Month later, when I was stationed in Alabama, the Maryland mosquitoes sent me a card on father's day because they had so much of my blood in them.

"We tried in many ways to dispose of these pests, including poison gas, but it was all to no avail. We did, however, kill a few by shooting .30 calibre rifle bullets at them. They were mean, those Mosquitoes, and it made them mad to have to get out of the way of those bullets. So they'd snap at 'em as they went by, and before they could let go of that lead—it would jar off their heads."

PART OF ROYALTIES 'PASS THE AMMUNITION' GIVEN TO ARMY FUND

Hollywood. Dec. 31 —(AP)— A cheque for $5,500, representing a portion of the royalties from his song, "praise the Lord and pass the ammunition," has been presented to United States Army emergency relief by songwriter Frank Loesser now a private at the nearby Santa Ana airbase.

Highest Living Standard Improves Canadians' Health

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 31. (CP)—Canadians will enter 1944 healthier as a nation than at any time since the outbreak of war, a spokesman for the Federal Health Department said today.

"There has been steady improvement in the general health of Canadians since the beginning of the war and we hope the improvement will continue on through 1944", this official told The Canadian Press.

"The improvement probably is due to the higher standard of living brought on by the war and to steps taken by Health Departments to prevent the spread of communicable diseases".

Better nutrition might be partly responsible for the improvement, he said, "but in cases such as the recent flu epidemic it doesn't matter what you eat; if you are exposed to such a disease you're likely to catch it".

Infant and maternal mortality rates have decreased since the war began and there also has been a decline in the rates of tuberculosis, influenza andpneumonia.

Tuberculosis, which caused 6,126 deaths in 1938—the year immediately before the war—caused 5,991 deaths in 1942. The figures for this year are not yet available.

Leading causes of death since the outbreak of war have been heart diseases, cancer, accidents, kidney and artery ailments.

Total number of deaths in 1942 was 112,864 compared with 106,817 in 1938.

On the other side of the ledger, 271,981 births were recorded in 1942, compared with only 229,446 in 1938. Number of marriages in 1942 was 127,368 against 88,436.

None of German Claims Verified

London, Dec. 31—(CP)—The Berlin radio claimed today that German U-boats had sunk two Allied destroyers off the North African coast and in the Mediterranean, and four heavily-laden merchant ships totalling 30,000 tons in the Atlantic and Mediterranean.

Britain now has lost 16 destroyers since Dec. 23, the broadcast added. Berlin asserted yesterday that six British destroyers had been torpedoed in fighting in the Bay of Biscay in which the admiralty announced three Nazi destroyers were sunk. None of the claims has been verified by Allied sources.

1,538 SHOWS GIVEN

Toronto, Dec. 31—(CP)—Toronto's entertainment committee of the citizens' committee for the troops in training, which arranged its first show Oct. 29, 1939, looks back on a record of 1,538 shows given men and women of the three services training in three Ontario military districts. Total attendance at their shows is estimated at 1,360,000 and mileage travelled by players more than 103,000 miles.

Army May Control U. S. Railroads For Duration

Washington, Dec. 31. (AP) — Army control of the railroads in the United States for the indefinite future appeared likely today in view of the darkening prospects of an early wage settlement.

President Roosevelt advised the 15 non-operating unions he is ready to make a final decision in their base, but he stipulated a basis of arbitration which the Union Chiefs say is unacceptable.

The War Department said it wanted to return the rail system to private management but could not because at least two Unions—the firemen and conductors—instead of cancelling strike orders, had merely postponed them for the period of government operation.

The latent bitterness of the controversy emerged in the statement issued by D. B. Robertson of the Firemen, H. M. Fraser of the Conductors, and T. C. Cashen of the Switchmen, who accused the United States Government of bungling, delay, and of straying from the processes of the Railway Labor Act which they, the Unions, said they "scrupulously followed" during the controversy.

The President's letter to the "Non-Ops" laid open the fight over the scope of what he is authorized to arbitrate. In agreeing to arbitration last Monday, the 15 Unions, representing more than 1,000,000 office, shop and track workers, said they accepted the sliding scale increases of four to ten cents and that only overtime, therefore, was left to be arbitrated.

The President said he understood that the carriers contend that the 10 cents was approved by Stabilization Director, Fred M. Vinson to eliminate substandard conditions and would not have been necessary if payments were to be made for overtime. The issue of overtime was injected after the four to 10-cent award. The Unions contend the latter can not be arbitrated. They are apprehensive lest the award or the overtime be reduced if the two are considered together.

Police Probing Axe-Slaying Of Three Children

Montreal, Dec. 31 — (CP) — Police today gathered material and interviewed witnesses preparatory to Monday's inquest into the axe-slaying of three children in the basement of their west-end Hampton Avenue home yesterday.

Meanwhile Mrs. MacLennan, 43, mother of the slain children, and held as a material witness added nothing to her statement to police last night that she wanted "to save their souls."

Wife of engineer Gordon R. MacLennan of a nearby St. Paul L'Ermite munitions plant and a native of Parry Sound, Ont., Mrs. MacLennan was found sitting on a lounge in the front room of her home attired in a blood-spattered white slip. Police also found a four-foot blood-stained axe which will be used as an exhibit at the inquest.

First report of the slayings was made at one p. m. to Dr. Clifford Smith who said a woman's voice told him over the telephone she had just killed her children.

Dr. Smith went to the MacLennan home and finding nine-year-old Miriam still alive he arranged for an ambulance to take her to hospital but the little girl died before being admitted.

Police Director Armand Brodeur said Miriam and Donald, 12, and Helen, eight, were enticed down to the basement, one at a time, and battered with an axe. He said the killer put pyjamas on the three children and washed the two girls and put them to bed. Donald was carried only to the foot of the basement stairway.

Mr. MacLennan told police he and his wife were married 13 years ago. He said his wife had been under medical care for the last two years.

Cape Gloucester Airdrome Seized

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, Dec. 31—(AP)—United States marines captured savagely-defended Cape Gloucester and its airdrome four days and a few hours after a seaborne force from New Guinea invaded that northwest New Britain strong point. Today the surviving Japanese faced entrapment.

On the last day of 1943, Lt.-Gen. Walter Krueger, of the U. S. 6th Army, announced "I have the honor to present the Gloucester airdrome to the commander-in-chief as a New Year's present."

The irresistible manner in which the marines burned their way through pillbox defences with flame throwers, supported by artillery and bombing planes, to complete the occupation Thursday of the base's two airstrips won praise from Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The enemy's only hope of escape lies in taking to circuitous jungle trails around the base of 6,600-foot Mt. Talawe.

Capture of Cape Gloucester cuts the New Guinea-New Britain sea supply line along New Britain's north coast just as the capture of Arawe, 60 miles to the southeast, on Dec. 15 in the initial invasion of the island cut the south coast route.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Dec. 31 — (CP) — This was young Pete Dennis' first operational trip in a Lancaster and his heart beat a little faster when the target was announced as Berlin.

It was the night of Nov. 26 when the Canadian bomber group made up a large percentage of the air armada that shattered the Nazi capital. Pete, who is a sergeant pilot from Fort William, Ont., won't forget that night.

Three Messerschmitt 109s made nine attacks on the big bomber and put one of the engines out of commission and silenced every gun but the mid-upper while Pete still was an hour's flying time from Berlin. But he kept going, shook off the enemy fighters, and brought the plane right over the target.

Other Canadians in the crew included PO. John O'Gorman, Perth, Ont., and Sgt. Harvey Quesnel, Port Credit, Ont.

Other Canadian airmen also have reported tough brushes with night fighters recently.

A fighter went after, but failed to get, an R.C.A.F. Halifax coming home from a raid on Ludwigshafen with five Canadians, including Sgt. K. C. Fox, Belleville, Ont., a gunner.

Another Halifax with Sgt. D. J. Copeland, Penetanguishene, Ont., and its crew dropped through clouds at the rate of 4,000 feet a minute to escape two enemy fighters in an attack on Mannheim.

The pilot had told them to prepare to bail out, Copeland said, but "he did a grand job to get us out of a ticklish situation and we lost the attackers on the way down." The pilot was an Englishman.

Washington Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Dec. 31 — (CP) — Americans, buoyed up by successes in the field and promises of victory in Europe in 1944, and apparently undaunted by grim forecasts of tremendous fighting and dying in the days ahead, today prepared to give the old year an uproarious send-off.

In Washington, as in other large American cities, night clubs and other local places for eating and merry-making were being rapidly booked, local prices ranging up from $15 and more a couple.

But those in positions of responsibility, from President Roosevelt down, will have little time for merrymaking. Their New Year's day headaches were prepared for them well in advance.

The President and his aides were confronted this week with the threat of a strike tieing up all the railways in the United States and with a temporary stoppage in the steel industry. The rail strike was averted after the government took over the railways and the steel workers went back to work while their wage disputes were under negotiation.

Also, confronting Mr. Roosevelt and the administration was a battle with an openly antagonistic Congress which wrecked Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau's $10,000,000,000 tax bill, threatened to destroy the subsidy system — the administration's chief weapon against inflation — and upset plans for enabling service men and women to vote in next November's election.

The administration is in the midst of planning for what may prove the most costly in lives and material of all the field operations to date — the Western attack on Fortress Europe in which American soldiers are expected to bear the brunt.

But, for the moment, the watchword is "Happy New Year," and Americans, like their brothers-in-arms in Canada and Britain believe that to achieve that wish they must knock the Nazis out of the war no matter what the cost.

Washington Canadians: One of the brightest stars in the galaxy surrounding President Roosevelt, Lauchlin Currie, is a native of West Dublin, N. S., and spent his boyhood in Bridgewater. He became naturalized in the United States in 1935 and since 1939 has been one of the President's closest advisers but usually anonymous except when he is sent on trips to Chungking and such places. Lately he has been operating head of the Office of Economic Warfare but it was reported this week that he will soon return to Mr. Roosevelt's side in the White House. He is 41.

Taxi-cab topics: Taxi problems are second to the weather as a small-talk subject here. Lawyers, teachers and many government officials are making a lot of money driving taxicabs after hours and the professional drivers are said to make as much as $200 a week. A local women's page writer reported that Temple Bailey, popular fictionist now living here, has bought and operated her own taxi. This correspondent asked Miss Bailey about it. "I hate to spoil the story," she replied, "but the truth is I never drove a car in my life. Gas rationing forced me to dismiss my chauffeur and he bought himself a car and went into the business—and is making good money. Some times he drives me — when I can get him."

OWL CARRIES AWAY TRAP

Galt, Dec. 31—(CP)—Two Galt boys, Edgar Wilks and Laughlin Van Norman report seeing the huge owl which escaped a trap in Victoria Park several weeks ago by carrying away trap, chain and trap stake. The bird, startled by their approach, rose into the air still dragging trap, chain and stake after it.

NOT A GIRL THERE

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 31—(AP)—Maybe it was the rain . . . or that his train was more than two hours late. Last summer when Frank Sinatra came to town you couldn't see the guy for the gasping girls. Yesterday the crooner arrived again, to make another motion picture. Not a girl . . . not a gasp.

COULDN'T SLEEP
COULDN'T WORK

What a relief to settle down to a real night's rest, and awake fully refreshed, ready for the day's duties. I was tortured by fretful nights—tossing, turning — never comfortable. Half awake days —over-tired, driving body and mind to work when they needed rest. "Try Dodd's Kidney Pills," said a friend — "it may be your kidneys". I'm glad I followed his advice as now I'm sleeping like a top—thanks to !!!

Something About Canadian Cheddar Cheese

By S. L. JOSS

An address on Canadian cheddar cheese was delivered on Tuesday at Queen's University by Mr. S. L. Joss, Belleville, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association. The text of the address follows:

I could outline the development of the marketing of Ontario Cheddar Cheese in five or ten minutes but I think it better to deal with the subject on a much wider scale.

* *

The marketing of any article begins with the raw product and only ends with a satisfied consumer. To attain this result quality must be maintained from beginning to end, or from the producer to the consumer. Every phase in the process must be carefully studied and skillfully executed, such as merchandising, which includes packaging, store displays and many other consumer appeals. Modern advertising methods call for a complete knowledge of the article, its origin, its history and development and its food value. Without this information the maximum returns cannot be obtained.

* *

I am going to deal with my subject under the following heads:

1. The origin and history of cheese.
2. The food value.
3. Merchandising.
4. Development of the industry and its place in Canadian dairying.
5. Past and present marketing systems.
6. Some comments regarding the future of the industry.
7. Public relations.

The Origin and History of Cheese

We are told that cheese was made 3,000 years ago and it was mentioned in Homer's Odyssey, also the Iliad. Aristotle, the great Greek philosopher, speaks about it, and in the fifth century B.C., Sicily exported cheese to Greece. Its discovery, like the discovery of many things, was an accident, and is told as follows: The Arabs, in their long treks across the desert, carried their liquid foods in skin bags which were made from calves' stomachs. (Rennet, a liquid necessary in the manufacture of cheese, is made from calves' stomachs.) When one of these bags was filled with milk and strung across the camel's back, the agitation and the temperature to which the milk was subjected produced the necessary condition to form curd. The Arab, on stopping for his noon-day meal, found, to his surprise, this solid mass in place of the milk. On testing it he found it to his liking, with the result that from his tribe came the first cheese.

* *

What has all this to do with the marketing of cheese? I will tell you when we come to discuss merchandising. Before closing this part of the subject, however, I would like to say that to know the origin and history of the things with which we are in daily contact is not only interesting and enlightening, but in business, is of great commercial value.

Food Value

The war has taxed and developed our inventive ingenuity and our research laboratories to an unprecedented extent, and no industry has received greater scientific attention than the food industry. One of the most interesting and beneficial developments in the war has been the application of scientific knowledge to the nutritional or food requirements of nations. To feed the people of Great Britain it has been necessary to set up and maintain a ration system based upon the production of the foods that are produced the most economically, yet contain all the vital nutrients necessary to the health and morale of the civilian people and the fighting forces. Cheese meets all the requirements and stands first among all imported foods in the United Kingdom.

* *

Without going into the technical or chemical composition of cheese, it is sufficient to say that its relative food value far exceeds that of practically all other foods. The nutrient value of the raw milk is unchanged in cheese, yet the manufactured product (cheese) is a highly concentrated food that is easy to keep and improves with age, easy to transport, and is all food—no waste.

Merchandising

Merchandising brings us to the test of all our efforts in production, manufacturing, grading, packaging and preparing for sale to the consumer. If we are to get the maximum returns for the maximum effort in the stages mentioned above, we must know all that can be known about our product. We must be prepared to put into use our knowledge of the origin of the product, its history, its development, and its food value. All this information should be so arranged that it will appeal to every type of consumer through the various advertising mediums; for instance, a dramatic appeal based upon the story of its origin, an appeal based upon the long history of the product, upon its food value, or a combination of some, or all, of the points mentioned. No detail can be overlooked if effective salesmanship is to be achieved, as the first essential is to get the interest of your prospective customer, and interest, in people, is as varied as the kinds of articles that are daily advertised. The most effective use of all available information can only be made by experts trained in the advertising field.

The Development of the Industry and Its Place in Canadian Dairying

The Cheese Industry in Canada is as old as the Canadian Dairy Industry and I want to speak very briefly on its development, the reason for its development, the rise and fall of its export trade, and in short, its place in the Dairy Industry.

In 1868 we exported to the United Kingdom 6,141,570 pounds of cheese. In 1904 we exported 233,980,000 pounds and in 1935 our exports were 55,718,700 pounds. There are two periods here: 1868 to 1904, and 1904 to 1935, and to understand them, in so far as cheese is concerned, is to understand a good deal about the development of not only the Cheese Industry, but of the entire Dairy Industry.

From 1868 to 1904 tremendous strides were made in increasing milk production. The increase was far in excess of our consumptive requirements, therefore it was necessary for us to find and develop an outlet for surpluses. That outlet was found, for cheese, in the United Kingdom, and during the period mentioned we extended that market from 6,141,570 pounds in 1868 to 233,980,000 pounds in 1904.

From 1904 to 1934 the trend in cheese exports was downward, reaching the low mark in 1935 of 55,041,7000 pounds. There is a great deal of misunderstanding in connection with the decrease in our exports of cheese to the United Kingdom. Many people believe that we were forced out of the market by our competitors, which is not a fact. Our domestic requirements for dairy products other than cheese was growing by leaps and bounds because of increased population and increased per capita consumption, and as these requirements expanded more rapidly than total volume of milk production increased, milk was diverted from cheese production. This diversion took place because of more remunerative prices on the domestic market than the export market.

Without going into detail in connection with these changes, I will cite just a few instances. In 1904 our butter production was 36,066,000 pounds and in 1939 it was 268,000,000 pounds, an increase of 643%. In whole milk for fluid consumption the increase from 1921 to 1938 was 236%. It is only during the past 36 years that the concentrated milk business and the ice cream business have been established, but they have also played an important part in increasing domestic requirements for milk products.

In spite of this very desirable increase in consumption, we are still dependent upon our cheese industry to take care of surpluses of milk. The importance of surplus in any business cannot be overestimated as it is largely the surplus that determines the final net returns to the producer. The Dairy Industry is fortunate in having a surplus in cheese, which, because of its high quality, demands the highest possible price on the export market, and although we cannot say that the United Kingdom market is unlimited (I am speaking about normal times) I believe we can double our exports without any serious effect upon price.

To properly appraise the cheese industry it is necessary to consider it under normal conditions, and in doing so, place it in proper relationship to other branches of the dairy industry. In doing this, if we think of it in terms of volume only, it will receive a very insignificant classification as it only represents 7 to 8 per cent of our total production of milk. I would, however, remind you that our surplus milk is used in the form of cheese and, as already stated, the surplus in practically any business, largely determines the net returns for the entire production of the raw product. This belief among Canadian dairymen has prompted someone (not a cheese man) to term the cheese industry "The Balance Wheel" of the dairy industry, and because of the general belief in the actuality of this phrase, many ingenious schemes have been advocated whereby the price of cheese would be kept at as high a level as possible in order that the prices of dairy products in general might be similarly stabilized.

Governments have also recognized the need of bolstering cheese prices (not only in wartime) and from 1935 to 1943 inclusive approximately $12,500,000 has been paid the Ontario cheese producers in the form of bonuses and premiums. Bonuses have always provided a subject for criticism. Very often the form in which the bonus is given, the explanation by the Government for giving it, and the time at which it is given, are targets for attack, but I would like to say that a careful study of the whole matter of bonuses, in my opinion, will reveal enough evidence to justify their payment. A chart I have with me may help somewhat in getting a clearer picture of the points I have discussed.

This chart shows the production of Dairy Products from 1921 to 1938 inclusive and it is divided into four sections, viz., butter, whole milk, cheese and miscellaneous, which includes ice cream and concentrated milk products.

The chart represents from 10 billion pounds of milk in 1921 to 16 billion pounds in 1938. Such astronomical figures mean very little to us, so let us put it in a different way. If all this milk were made into cheese we would have from 350,000 tons to 600,000 tons, which, if loaded on railway refrigerator cars, would form a train from 100 to 180 miles long.

The Canadian dairy industry is big business. It is taking around 350,000 farmers to produce the raw product, milk, for our annual requirements. Financially, it amounts to over $200,000,000 yearly and is the second largest industry in Canadian agriculture. The cheese branch is the Balance Wheel of this industry. I will make a further reference to this point under the heading Public Relations.

Past and Present Marketing Methods

The changes in the marketing of our cheese have been slight, as the present cheese board system of sale has been in effect since 1885. For ten to fifteen years before that time sales were made direct from the factory representative to the buyer.

On the establishment of the cheese boards, buying became more competitive, as the buyers were brought together at designated points where weekly sales were held, and where they were obliged to bid against one another to get their requirements. For many years the length of the time the cheese boards would operate each season was determined by the market trend.

In a bullish market buyers would endeavour to contract ahead for August, September and October production and in the event of their being successful the cheese boards would adjourn for the season. In a bearish market cheese was often held in the factories for fairly long periods without sales being made. The market under such conditions was highly speculative, with speculative results for both buyers and sellers.

Future buying on the foregoing basis was gradually eliminated until the boards finally met regularly and sold fairly regularly. Two systems of sales prevail, viz., the "auction" and the "call" systems. In "auction" sales the buyer bidding the highest price has first selection, but all the time he is selecting, the board is open for further advance bids. In the "call" system the highest bidder is given first selection and can, if he wishes, select the entire board without interruption. If this is done the sale is over, as no further bids will be accepted.

A system of "Regulars" became quite prevalent until it was stamped out in 1935, when the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association were given a Marketing Scheme under the Farm Products Control Act, under authority of which they made it compulsory for all Ontario cheese to be boarded and sold on a recognized cheese board. "Regulars" simply meant that the cheese was not boarded and sold in open competition, but was sold privately at a price set by the cheese board.

Before Government grading became effective (1923) the inspection of cheese was made by the buyers. This inspection was made at the factory, the buyers' warehouses and at the railroad cars. The cheese was paid for on the basis of this inspection. Today all cheese is inspected at central grading stations by Dominion Government graders. The different grades are: No. 1, No. 2, No. 3 and No Grade. The price differentials between these grades are:

One cent per pound between No. 1 and No. 2.

Two cents per pound between No. 1 and No. 3.

An agreed price between buyer and seller for No Grade.

In our war contracts with the British Ministry of Food these differentials are ½ and 1 cent respectively.

* *

Since 1939 the Dominion Government has been paying a quality premium on cheese which is as follows: The minimum score for a first-grade cheese is 92 points. One cent per pound is paid as a quality premium on cheese scoring 93 points and two cents per pound on cheese scoring 94 points or over.

* *

In weighing cheese for commercial purposes ½ pound must be allowed for shrinkage. In every shipment of 100 boxes or less, five cheese are weighed individually and from the result the average loss, if any is determined for the shipment. In a shipment of over 100 boxes 10% are weighed. About 20 years ago one pound per cheese was allowed for shrinkage on all cheese made during the last half of October and two pounds allowed on cheese made in November. The reason for this was that cheese factory curing rooms were unheated and very often rinds did not dry until they were stored in the buyer's warehouse, the result being considerable loss in weight.

* *

It is interesting to note that the lowest price for cheese I have on record is 6½ cents per pound, paid June 6th., 1896, and the highest, 32¼ cents paid June 3, 1919.

Some Comments Regarding the Future of the Cheese Industry

Unpredictable as the post-war period for the industry is, one must nevertheless predict in order that plans may be prepared to cope as far as possible with the changes that are inevitable. The definite data that is available from which conclusions might be drawn are statistics provided by wartime production and exports.

* *

Pre-war yearly imports of cheese to the United Kingdom were approximately 325,000,000 pounds.

In 1942 total imports of cheese by the United Kingdom were (approximately):

*New Zealand, 1941-1942	320,000,000 lbs.
*Australia, 1941-1942	90,000,000 lbs.
U.S.A. 1942	250,000,000 lbs.
Canada, 1942	135,000,000 lbs.
Total	795,000,000 lbs.

*Each year ends 30th. June.

Pre-war consumption in the United Kingdom was (approximately) 425,000,000 pounds per year. Normal per capita consumption is (approximately) 3 ounces per week. Wartime consumption varies from 3 to 8 ounces per week, while wartime heavy workers average 16 ozs. per week.

* *

It will be noted that the imports in 1942 are nearly twice the normal consumption. One of the unpredictable phases of this part of the problem is: Will the people of the United Kingdom have developed a taste for cheese that they will continue to want it in large quantities, or will the reaction be just the opposite? The marketing problem will centre largely around the question of which country can survive the probable competition for the market.

Fairmiles Operate From Floating Naval Base

An R.C.N. Mother Ship, Dec. 31—(CP)—In the bleak Northwest Atlantic this ugly duckling of the Royal Canadian Navy plods along convoy routes with supplies for speedy, sub-chasing Fairmiles operating out of the range of home supply bases.

That Fairmiles operate from this floating naval base instead of from home ports was revealed for the first time today in a navy press release which described the mother ship as one of the largest vessels built in Canada to fly the white ensign.

The Fairmiles operate at sea much as they would from a home port. The mother ship carries enough food, ammunition, fuel and spare parts to keep the fleet operating for months at a time. Almost half the ship's company comprises specialists, experts and artisans.

A huge lifting beam sling is used in lieu of dry dock.

When the Fairmiles return from a patrol of the convoy routes, they are taken over by the specialists, inspected, refueled and made ready for another search for areas where enemy U-boats might be lurking.

When there is fueling to be done life aboard ship is regulated to the gravity of the job in hand. The blacksmith, stokers and the cooks extinguish their fires. All electrical switches are pulled, steel tools are laid away and doors or hatches leading to deck are sealed. Engine and pump rooms are also sealed and no one enters or leaves because a sudden draught of gas might cause an explosion.

Canadian Airman Made First Attack On Blockade Runner

Toronto Man Tells of Naval-Air Engagement in Bay of Biscay

London, Dec. 31 — (CP Cable) — The pilot of the Canadian Sunderland bomber which made the first attack against a Nazi blockade runner sunk in the Bay of Biscay in a naval-air engagement in which the Germans also lost three destroyers was Flt. Lt. W. Y. Martin whose father lives at Toronto, it was learned at R.C.A.F. headquarters.

Owing to difficulties of communication it was expected to be a little while before complete details are available on the part played by Canadian fliers in the latest victory over Nazi sea marauders.

The British sea and air strength was summoned to the scene by two American navy fliers who first spotted a German flotilla of 11 destroyers in the Bay of Biscay and shadowed it for six hours.

The Americans who discovered the Nazi ships, apparently intending to form an escort for the blockade runner were Lieut. Stuart D. Johnston and Ensign Hugh M. Greeley.

The destroyers were five to eight miles away from the plane when sighted at 9:20 a. m. Tuesday.

"We immediately sent a signal to the base," said Johnston, "and received instructions to shadow. We did that for about six hours.

"After we first sighted them we kept coming in closer. They fired, but didn't hit us.

"Then the (British) cruisers (Glasgow and Enterprise) came up and opened fire on the destroyers and the destroyers turned tail right away. They were steaming westward as hard as they could go with the cruisers coming up behind them.

"The battle started at about 2 p. m. We could see the flashes of the guns and shells falling near the destroyers, but we didn't see any actually hit as it was difficult to see. We stayed as long as we could before returning to our base and altogether were in the air about 12 hours."

The German blockade runner, whose errand apparently accounted for the presence of the destroyers, was attacked Monday, and today the Czech pilot of one plane said he had scored a direct hit with his first bomb, crippling the vessel and leaving it afire and sinking.

The action against the 11 Nazi destroyers was handled in its final stages by the two British cruisers with aerial support and it was announced that three of the enemy ships had been sunk and that others had been damaged.

The Berlin radio claimed today the Germans had lost only one destroyer and two torpedo boats while asserting submarines had sunk five British destroyers and damaged both cruisers. The Admiralty, however, has made no mention of any British destroyers being involved.

Announcing

New Uniform

HYDRO RURAL RATES

Effective JANUARY 1st, 1944

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario announces new uniform rates for electricity to all consumers served by the Commission in the rural areas of Ontario, to become effective January 1st, 1944:

The new rates will result in a substantial saving to most Farm and Hamlet consumers, and their form is considerably simplified.

The new rate system provides for the following:

- A uniform rate to all Rural customers, now served direct by the Commission.
- The elimination of service charges to all farm users.
- The reduction of service charges to all Hamlet customers.
- The co-ordination of all present Rural Power Districts into one Provincial Rural Power System with the same meter rates applying throughout to the various classifications.
- The existing consumer classifications, totalling 11 in all, have been reduced to 5 clearly defined classes: i.e. 2 wire hamlet, 3 wire hamlet, farm, commercial lighting and summer cottages.

New Rates Benefiting Approximately 97% of All Rural Consumers Are as Follows:

FARM SERVICE

NO SERVICE CHARGE.

First Block of 20 KwHrs.* per Kilowatt of demand per month at 4c per KwHr.*

Next Block of 60 KwHrs.* per Kilowatt of demand per month at 1-6/10c per KwHr*. All remaining KwHrs.* per month at ¾c per KwHr.*

Minimum charge $0.75 per Kilowatt of demand per month gross.

Gross quarterly bill subject to 10% Prompt Payment Discount.

This Farm Service rate applies to all Farms. In the case of "Standard" Farms of approximately 100 acres the demand is usually 3 Kilowatts and for these services the first block of KwHrs is 60 while the second block is 180. On larger farms these blocks will increase in proportion to the Kilowatt demand.

*(KwHrs.)—Kilowatt Hours

2 WIRE HAMLET SERVICE

Service Charge 55c per month gross.
First 40 KwHrs.* per month at 4c per KHwr.*
Next 80 KwHrs.* per month at 1-6/10c per KwHr.*
All remaining KwHrs.* per month at ¾c per KwHr.*
Minimum charge $1.67 per month gross
Gross quarterly bill subject to 10% Prompt Payment Discount.

3 WIRE HAMLET SERVICE

Service Charge 55c per month gross.
First 40 KwHrs.* per month at 4c per Kwhr.*
Next 180 KwHrs.* per month at 1-6/10c per KwHr.*
All remaining Kwhrs.* per month at ¾c per KwHr.*
Minimum charge $2.25 per month gross.
Gross quarterly bill subject to 10% Prompt Payment Discount.

*(KwHrs.)—Kilowatt Hours.

These new rates apply only to rural consumers served direct by this Commission in Rural Power Districts established under Sections 71 to 79, inclusive, of the Power Commission Act. They do not apply to consumers in rural voted areas or townships operating under Section 54, of the Power Commission Act. In the latter areas, such as the townships of Ancaster, Brantford, East York, Etobicoke, London, Nipigon, North York, Scarborough, Toronto and Trafalgar, the present rates will not be affected.

As a result of these new rate reductions, Hydro Rural consumers will save an estimated amount exceeding $500,000.00 per annum. Experience justifies the expectation on the part of the Commission that this reduction in revenue will be recovered in a short time through the increased use of electricity in the rural areas.

The application of these uniform rural rates will enable the Commission to later extend service to many areas not now served and to supply economically, consumers in the more sparsely settled areas. In most rural districts the new rates will provide a saving for the majority of consumers. The following examples indicate the estimated consumer saving in a district at present supplied under a rate of 6c per KwHr. for the first block and 2c per KwHr. for the second block.

STANDARD FARM CONSUMER

A comparison in 3 months' net cost if use is 450 Kilowatt-hours per quarter.

Present 3 months' cost in 6c and 2c districts	3 months' cost under new uniform rate	3 months' saving in these districts
$15.63	$10.38	$5.25

2 WIRE HAMLET CONSUMER

A comparison in 3 months' net cost if use is 225 Kilowatt-hours per quarter.

Present 3 months' cost in 6c and 2c districts	3 months' cost under new uniform rate	3 months' saving in these districts
$10.29	$7.32	$2.97

Space does not permit us to detail all of the changes in connection with the new Hydro Rural rates, such as those affecting commercial, industrial and summer cottage users. If further particulars are desired, inquire of your district Rural Power Superintendent or contact The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, 620 University Avenue, Toronto.

Rickey Not Sure Baseball Still National Pastime

(By The Canadian Press)

President Branch Rickey of Brooklyn Dodgers laid the baseball cards on the table at New York yesterday in declaring he wasn't sure the diamond sport was still the National pastime in the United States and if the leaders did not take active steps in organizing a post-war program, it might be supplanted by football. He foresaw a six-month professional baseball season, with elevens playing two games weekly, in the growth of that sport. High school baseball had deteriorated as a competitive game, he declared, while colleges had made it a secondary sport. Some universities had dropped baseball entirely.

In the coming peace, there should be 50 minor leagues in the country, Rickey stated, providing baseball missionaries were sent out to promote the sport. He hinted that the draft status for service in the armed forces would be stabilized for all ball players before the opening of the 1944 season. This would remove current roster uncertainty but he warned the contract status of players now in the armed services should be settled, expressing fear such men might be declared free agents by Commissioner K. M. Landis. Minor leagues should be reorganized, he said.

Victor in the cross-country race at the opening of the 23rd annual college invitation ski tournament at Lake Placid yesterday was Kjel, an entrant from 'Little Norway", Norwegian Training Camp in Ontario. He covered the six-mile course in 56.42.

With the prospect of clear skies but a heavy turf for the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Calif., New Year's Day, University of Washington remained heavy favorite to win against California Trojans although the latter have a formidable array of reserves with practically three men for every position on the line-up.

A crowd of 27,000 is expected to jam the Orange Bowl at Miami, Fla., tomorrow for the post-season grid feature between Louisiana Tigers and Texas A. and M. and a large score was predicted with passes and long runs all over the field.

St. Paul of the American Association yesterday completed the trade of Clay Smith, veteran twirler to the Brooklyn Dodgers, in exchange for shortstop John Duncan Barkley, who batted .314 in 20 games last season.

Three weeks after undergoing an operation, Tommy Botts, 60-year-old turfman, died at Cincinnati yeterday. He was widely known as a racehorse trainer.

Promote Mike Jacobs announced at New York yesterday that the postponed fight between Tami Maurtello and Joe Baksi would likely be held February 9 at Madison Square Garden to give Mauriello a chance to recover from his recent illness. Lightweight Bobby Ruffin of New York had been pitted against Al Davis of Brooklyn for a 10-rounder February 18.

President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers received a letter yesterday from infielder Arky Vaughan conveying the information he hoped to be back with the team next season, having recovered from a stomach ailment—although getting help for his Potter Valley, Calif., cattle ranch was a problem.

First-Baseman Babe Dahlgren, leading hitter of the Philadelphia Nationals, yesterday was traded to Pittsburgh Pirates for catcher Babe Phelps, plus cash. Phelps was out of baseball last season but played 95 games with the Pirates in 1942. He has hit over .300 in several years of his career.

MANY NEW FACES GRACE ROSTER OF JUNIOR SQUAD

Season Officially Opens on Tuesday With Trenton as Opposition

IN GOOD CONDITION

Many new faces will grace the roster of the Belleville juniors when the O. H. A. season is officialy opened at the Hume Arena on Tuesday night when the local kids pry off the lid with Trenton juniors in the opening O. H. A. fixture of the season.

Belleville kids haven't forgotten last season when the Trenton squad pushed them out of the O. H. A. race and although somewhat early in the campaign Coach "Toots" Holway's charges have been hard at practice all week in hopes of getting the proverbial jump on Les Farrell's Trenton outfit.

There'll be some changes when the teams line-up Tuesday as Dick Fitzpatrick, who tended goal for Trenton last year, is now with the Belleville team and battling for the goal-tending spot with "Moe" Rollins, who guarded the nets for the locals in 1943. "I can't name my starting team for Tuesday until after tomorrow's practice," stated Coach Holway today when he revealed he had 26 teen-aged lads battling for positions on the local sextette.

'Frankly I believe we have the best junior hockey team to represent Belleville in years and all that is needed now is the support of the public to encourage the lads. With Intermediate hockey apparently out for the duration here is the opportunity of the sport-loving people of Belleville to encourage the game among the youth of the city. After watching them in practice I am sure Belleville will ultimately be proud of our 1944 junior hockey team and on Tuesday night lets all get behind the kids and have a real season of hockey," is the message of President Tom Flurey.

Lach now has a total of 32 points. O'Connor scored one goal and one assist to give him 31 points.

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP) — The Manitoba Curling Association has raised $53,000 for the Red Cross in the past three years and this season the objective is $25,000. Efforts of the good village of Elie, Man., show how the money is raised. Elie, 29 miles west of Winnipeg, has a population of less than 300. It has only one sheet of curling ice and 40 curlers, including women. Yet last season the Elie Curling Club raised $520 for the Red Cross fund and already this season the club has paid a $420 installment on its $700 objective. Club members raise the money by raffling pigs, hens or whatever is available. To reach the objective each member must raise an average of $17.50. No one has any doubts the M.C.A. will reach its $25,000 objective and that money will send an 11-pound parcel each month during the next year to every Manitoba prisoner-of-war — approximately 900 of them.

Complaint Dept.

Toronto newspapers are publishing squawks of Toronto Maple Leafs officials against hockey's new red line. "It's a farce," says Manager Frank Selke, worried about declining Toronto attendance. Coach Hap Day says the rule allowing forward passing as far as mid-ice is responsible for the "shoot-and-chase" play now prevalent in the N.H.L. The players shoot the puck into the opposition zone, then scramble madly for possession. Day says the new rule was introduced to stop ganging plays "and look what's happened. There's more ganging than ever."

Incidentally:

There doesn't seem much point in the Pacific Coast Senior Hockey League movement to have its clubs renounce Allan Cup aspirations. The idea apparently is to circumvent the R.C.A.F. order withdrawing Air Force teams from leagues with Allan Cup aims and so to keep Vancouver R.C.A.F. in the league. But the R.C.A.F. order also forbade Air Force teams from playing other than service teams and the coast circuit has three civilian teams ... writing in the Montreal Forum program, manager Tommy Gorman of Canadiens picks Dick Irvin as Coach of the season to date and goalie Bill Durnan as both rookie and player of the season.

Sudbury, Ont., Dec. 31—(CP)—To Shorty the started life as Wilfred but only his best friends remember that) Green, one of the most colorful hockey characters ever to come out of Northern Ontario, the youngsters now performing in the National Hockey League don't compare with the stars of a few years ago.

Shorty, who terminated a turbulent hockey career about 10 years ago to go into the men's wear business in his home town of Sudbury, paused the other day to recall some of the highlights of a career which carried him from the old Sudbury Wolves to Hamilton and New York Americans in the N. H. L. and to Duluth and Tulsa in the American Hockey Association.

Aged 48, Shorty now weighs 178 against the 138 he carried during his playing days. "The young fellows just don't belong in the same class as the old timers," he said. "They can't stickhandle, they can't pass, they can't fake a pass, they can't fake a shot—in fact they just don't use any of the tricks that really make hockey.

"Look who's one of the best defenceman in the N. H. L. now, Earl Seibert. And why? Because although he's getting old and slow, he knows what to do and he lays his passes where they count."

All-Time All-Stars

Shorty's high regard for the oldtimers is reflected in his selection for an all-time all-star professional team:-

Goal—Georges Zezina
Defence—Sprague Cleghorn
Defence—Eddie Gerard
Centre—Frank Nighbor
Right Wing—Bill Cook
Left Wing—Aurel Joliat

Shorty picks Zezina for goal because the late Montreal Canadiens' star was always cool and "when you came too close that big stick came out like lightning and sent the puck flying." Gerard and Sprague Cleghorn he regards as top defencemen for their ice generalship and thumping rearguard play. Nighbor was the "greatest ice general of them all" while Bill Cook and Joliat were great offensive and defensive wingmen.

He had a kind word for one modern hockey player—Bob Davidson of Toronto Maple Leafs.

"I always thought Syl Apps, Sweeney Schriner and Davidson were the best of the modern Leafs. Davidson is better than a lot of people think. He's always in there and goals scored off Davidson's wing in a year are few and far between."

Shorty, whose active playing career came to an end in 1927, believes the toughest hockey he ever played was in the early 1920's when the old Sudbury Wolves and the Sault Greyhounds were locked in a bitter feud.

"The rinks up here were small and the players were tough," said Shorty." You just got banged around endlessly."

Sudbury had its best team in 1921, he said, with George Duncan in goal, Clarence Boucher and Charlie Langlois on defence, Shorty himself at centre and his brother, Gerald (Red) Green and Alex McKinnon on the wings. Bill Duncan and the late Leo Berthiume were the subs.

ARKY VAUGHAN PATCHES UP FEUD WITH DUROCHER

Shortstop Says All is Forgiven and Forgotten With Respect to Last Year

WILL PLAY IN '44

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Dec. 31 — (AP)—This being the season of the year for man and his fellow-man to get chummy over their beer, it is a pleasure to report that the Dodgers are one big happy family again.

The glad tidings came from Arky Vaughan's California cattle farm by air mail today, pulling the fuse out of the last firecracker left from last summer's player strike and leaving the daffiness boys as palsy-walsy as you please for 1944.

It didn't take much to put on the big kiss-and-make-up scene — just a letter from Arky to prexy Branch Rickey of The Bums. In it the shortstop, who went on strike because manager Leo the Lip Durocher suspended Bobo Newsom, admitted frankly there was no place to play but Brooklyn — for him.

"And the trouble we had last summer, to me, is forgiven and forgotten," he even went so far as to say. "And I'm pretty sure Leo feels the same."

While Brooklyn was getting good news, the New York Yankees had different tidings: loss of Charley Keller, their star left fielder and most powerful hitter.

Keller reports next month to the United States Wartime Service as an ensign. He will be in charge of the physical fitness program at the service's training base in St. Petersburg.

Departure of Keller completes the breakup of the great pre-war outfield whose other members were Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich. DiMaggio is in the army and Henrich the coast guard.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Yankees suffered their biggest loss since the departure of Joe DiMaggio when Charlie Keller entered the Maritime service yesterday... The figures prove it; although King Kong hit only .271, he knocked in 86 runs and hit into only seven infield double plays . . . When the Kentucky basketball team started east for last night's game against St. John's, the players had to ride in the baggage car from Lexington, Ky., to Cincinnati . . . If Chalky Wright is successful in his three fights in Panama (he finally got plane space and is due there today), Manager Eddie Walker will book him for three more in Peru at the same price, $10,000.

The Right: Place.

In his school days at Dedham, Mass., a few years ago, Sgt. Leonard OBrien was twice picked for all-eastern Massachusetts hockey honors . . .Then he enlisted in the army air corps and his bomber was brought down over Europe . . Now a prisoner in Germany, Leonard couldn't be on hand to receive the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters he had earned . . . His mother, Mrs. Mabel T. O'Brien, was chosen to receive the medals for him and when army officials asked her where the presentation should be made, she chose the ice of the Boston arena between the periods of the Dedham-Hudson hockey game a few days ago.

by K.J.C.

YOU CAN TRUST A MAN WHO—:

Strives to retain the respect of old friends and the regard of new ones.
Does not jump to conclusions but seeks the facts before making a decision.
Puts service to his nation in time of peril above personal safety.
Seeks promotion on merit rather than on the influence of some friend or relative.
Who does not look too good or assumes to have more wisdom than he possesses.
Has gained the affection of some pure woman.
Is just as critical of his own morals as he is of his neighbor.
Is always considerate of the other fellow's rights.
Loves little children and enjoys spending his time with them.
Does not parade his piety.
Does not shirk responsibility or "pass the buck."
Cultivates the knack of making others smile instead of frown.
Knows the latest slang and cuss words but doesn't rave to resort to either to properly express himself.
Realizes his own imperfections, faulty habits and past mistakes and tries to improve.
Is orderly and systematic about his work, but does not sacrifice effectiveness for efficiency.

(Ends a year.)

Again we come to the end of a year, time to look back and account for its stewardship. We are all human and it is easy to forget—forget just how much we really have to be thankful for. Actually in Canada we have nearly everything we should desire and perhaps more than we really need. It takes a time like New Year's, when we look both ahead and behind, to help us remember just how fortunate we really are.

It is times when taking stock that recalls the fact that despite the chronic knockers of sport, those who just don't appreciate it and what it means to the youth of the country, we can say it is the fellows who loved a ball game, a hockey game, football and all the rest who are today fighting and winning this war. And it is the wish of all that these boys will come back safe and sound before another New Year's Eve rolls around.

(Looking back.)

In our fifth war year sport is still played across Canada. True enough it has taken a toll of the cream of all youth for war service and today it is the "war babies" who are providing the bulk of sport for civilian consumption in the smaller centres like Belleville.

In 1943 hockey still flourished in Belleville when Reliance A.C. carried the banner into the intermediate O.H.A., but like the previous season Peterborough pushed the locals out in the play-offs. Trenton beat Belleville out for junior O.H.A. group honors and then followed some Interscholastic puck chasing as the season wound up with a district league play-off for the S. R. Burrows Trophy.

Next came softball with Reliance A.C. being declared league winners and eliminating Kingston and Trenton before themselves bowing out before Oshawa in a hectic two-game series. Belleville juniors also went down at the hands of a Motor City softball nine. Unfortunately no city softball champion was declared Reliance and the No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" failing to finish their final play-off series after each won three games.

In bowling circles the Recreation and "Y" alley bowlers enjoyed a great season, but it remained to have the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club take the honors of staging the year's greatest sport event. This was their inaugural Corbin Gold Cup men's rinks tournament that brought teams here from all parts of Eastern Ontario, some 200 bowlers competing. This event was the crowning effort of the club through President Cliff Argue, who was given all the bouquets.

Then came autumn and football. St. Michael's Academy took all laurels here winning the junior and senior six-man championship in Bay of Quinte Interscholastic grid circles. Then Jack Doran's crowd crowned their efforts by winning the senior Bay of Quinte 12-man football title, defeating Stirling in a sudden death game.

For consistancy professional wrestling stood out when this popular sport played weekly at the Hume Arena for nine consecutive months during which time promoter Frank Tunney introduced such men as "Wild Bill" Longson, recognized world's champion and then gave the fans a big laugh with "team wrestling."

Field days at both No. 5 I.T.S. and the Trenton R.C.A.F. station provided entertainment for the civilians at different intervals, when the hospitality of the neighboring air stations were appreciated.

So generally speaking sport fared exceptionally well in Belleville in our fifth war year.

(Remember when—)

The Tennessee Volunteers were defeated by Southern California 14 to 0 in the annual Rose Bowl football game at Pasadena, Cal., before a capacity crowd of 92,000 fans four years ago tomorrow. It was the first defeat in two years for the Volunteers and tomorrow see Washington State and Southern California play in the 1944 Rose Bowl game.

With no publication until Monday don't forget to procure seats for the opening junior O.H.A. game between Trenton and Belleville at the Hume Arena next Tuesday night.

And so — "HAPPY NEW YEAR ALL."

What's Doing in Sport

Montreal—(CP)— A meeting of the Quebec Senior Hockey League last night conceded only three teams were a certainty for the balance of the season when it was learned 10 players of the University of Montreal were not eligible unless they were given their release by the Montreal Intermediate League.

Washington, D. C.—(AP)—Catcher Jake Early of the Washington Senators, noted for his ability to handle knuckle-ball pitches, has been ordered to report for military examination at King's Mountain, N. C., Monday.

Vancouver—(CP)—The Vancouver Sun said yesterday in the newspage story it had been informed by "authoritative sources" that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will confer with Air Minister Power at Ottawa Jan. 4 in an effort to have revised the order requiring R. Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 262

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There was a palooka who lived in Padukah and hopping to slam was his forte. By using no system, he bid slams and missed 'em. He's now in the bankruptcy court.

To make a grand slam, you must take all 13 tricks. To make a small slam, you must take 12 tricks. Opponents need very little to prevent you from making a slam.

With so very little margin left, a slam must be figured with precision. You must know how much leeway to allow for. You must know what, if any, danger may lie ahead.

Suppose you and I are partners and you have this hand:

♠A K J 7 5
♥A K J 7 5
♣J 5

You know you have seven tricks; two aces, two kings, two short cards in diamonds, one short card in clubs. If I tell you my hand contains five tricks, you know we have 12 tricks between us.

Even so, you still have worries before you can have assurence of making a slam. One of your worries is that opponents may take two tricks before we can take 12.

When is it possible for opponents to take two tricks in a hurry? When they have a couple of aces. Or enough kings. Or an ace and king.

For the safety of your slam, it is necessary to know how many aces are held by your opponents. If you have enough aces, it is necessary to know how many kings are held by opponents.

After you know my hand contains five tricks, suppose I tell you my hand contains two aces and two kings. Would you not be confident of at least a small slam between us?

But suppose I tell you that I have only one ace and no kings. Are you not warned that a slam is dangerous? And would you not be content to stop at less than a slam contract?

Horse Sense shows how to tell these things. Get a load of it.

"The Sky's The Limit"

Fun and frolic against a dancing, romancing background make up the theme of "The Sky's the Limit," the new Fred Astaire-Joan Leslie musical offering now in its final day at the Belle Theatre.

With Robert Benchley heading the featured cast, and Freddie Slack and his orchestra supplying the music, the film deals with the hectic adventure of a fighter pilot on leave in New York City when he tries to keep his identity a secret and win a girl's affections at the same time.

Three entertaining and varied screen treats precede the feature attraction.

New Year's Eve Frolic

Youth has its fling on the screen of the Belle Theatre where M-G-M's Technicolor musical, "Best Foot Forward," opens tonight, New Year's Eve frolic and is continuing on Saturday.

Starring Lucille Ball in the role of a Hollywood movie star who attends the prom of Winsocki Military Academy as a publicity stunt only to find herself hiding from public view for the duration of the dance, the tune-filled film is a delightful comedy of prep school kids.

Tommy Dix, from the cast of the original Broadway stage hit, plays the youngster who invites Miss Ball to the dance in a fan letter. He is so sure she won't accept he also invites Virginia Weidler, his best girl. He reckons without the publicity minded press agent, William Gaxton, who sees a great stunt in the invitation and accepts it over Lucille's protest. The complications which set in when Virginia arrives to find Lucille Ball masquerading as her will keep you in stitches.

"Crazy House"

Olsen and Johnson, the popular stage and screen comics, believe the music, and lots of it, has boosted the success of their hit shows, "Hellzapopin'" and "Sons of Fun" both outstanding Broadway entertainments. And in "Crazy House" their new Universal film production which opens Saturday (New Year's Day) at the McCarthy theatre, the comics have held to the same theory. The picture, according to advance reports has a lavish musical score which includes 15 featured members.

Such well known vocalists as Allan Jones, Martha O'Driscoll, Marion Hutton and the Glenn Miller Singers and the famous Delta Rhythm Boys are headlined in the gay movie. Count Basie and his orchestra and Leighton Noble and his orchestra provide accompaniment and novel specialties.

Popular songs in the picture include "I'll See You in My Dreams," "The Donkey Serenade," sung by Jones. "Some Day Maybe I'll Dream Again" and "The Rainbow Song," presented by Miss O'Driscoll.

"There Goes That Song Again," "Tropicana," "Pocket Full O'Pennies," "Get on Board Little Children" and "Lament of a Laundry Girl," are other attractive selections, the latter being sung by Cass Daley, noted comedienne.

Other musical highlights in the film are "I Oughta Dance," sung by Miss Daley and Olsen and Johnson; "My Song Without Words," danced by Tony and Sally DeMarco; "Moonlight Serenade," "Jealous," and "Baby Wont You Please Come Home." The Glenn Miller Singers present the latter selection.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Tish"

The year's comedy surprise starts New Year's Monday at the Capitol Theatre. You will meet Tish and howl! She goes hunting and a bear corners her! She goes fishing and lands in jail! She helps cupid and romance takes a detour! She'll rock Belleville with laughter. Don't miss "Tish," Mary Roberts Rinehart's famed character starring Marjorie Main, Zasu Pitts and Aline MacMahon with Lee Bowman and Guy Kibee. Susan Peters and Virginia Grey are also in the select cast.

"Truck Busters"

Thrills, danger and high adventure are the ingredients that make up the new Warner Bros. picture, "Truck Busters," which opens at the Capitol Theatre New Year's Monday.

Richard Travis and Virginia Christine head a featured cast that includes Charles Lang, William Davidson, Don Costello and other fine players.

The picture deals with the lives of the young men who drive the mighty cross-country trucks so necessary to modern civilization.

It also has to do with the love story of Casey Dorgan (Richard Travis), an intrepid young truckman and Eadie Watkins (Virginia Christine) who portrays a waitress at a roadside cafe.

The Canadian Universal News completes the first of the many outstanding January attractions to play the Capitol.

UNCONFIRMED JAPANESE CLAIM

New York, Dec. 31—(AP)— The Japanese High Command declared today that 14 Allied submarines had been sunk "in waters near Japan proper and other operational areas" from October through Dec. 30 by Japanese warships and army and navy planes. The Tokyo claim, in a broadcast communique recorded by The Associated Press, was not confirmed by any Allied source.

'30 YEARS BUT HE MEANT 30 DAYS'

San Jose, Calif., Dec. 31—(AP)— "Thirty years in the county jail!" boomed Police Judge Percy O'Connor in passing sentence on a vagrant. The man gulped, blanched and swayed. Then the judge corrected himself: "Whoops 30 days, I mean."

AT THE BELLE — A handful of stars, five of 'em, but not all the stars that appear in MGM's brimful, youthful Technicolor musical "Best Foot Forward," slated to open tonight at the Belle Theatre New Year's Eve Frolic, and continuing Saturday. In this picture are Lucille Ball, William Gaxton, Harry James and his famed music makers, Tommy Dix and Virginia Weidler.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 30 — (CP) — The first big news about Lord Woolton's new Ministry of Reconstruction was that there wasn't going to be one.

To a country that had expected another sprawling organization in Whitehall that was a surprise which was matched in both Houses of Parliament. Lord Woolton himself broke the news to the Lords and his understudy, Sir William Jowitt, making the disclosure to the Commons, "nearly made the House whistle in astonishment," as one writer put it.

The new Minister would, they explained, have a staff of only 12 and would be served by Whitehall's tiniest secretariat.

His would be the job of overseer of plans for rebuilding Britain.

Plans would be prepared by whichever ministry was concerned and would be passed round the various departments for opinion. If there were difficulties to be righted that's where Lord Woolton came in.

"If he thinks the plans are not complete," Sir William said, "he will say 'this, that or the other is what you need to do'. He is much more than a co-ordinator because he is also an initiator."

In the Lords, Lord Woolton bluntly stated "I am not going to make any promises until I know they can be fulfilled."

He reiterated the warning of Field Marshal Smuts that Britain would be rich in prestige after the war but poor in wealth for some years.

"Do not let us assume," he said, "that in the transition period between war and peace all the initiative and action are going to depend on what the government in going to do.

"It is not the government's new world we are going to build. It is the people's world and the people who are going to work for it and benefit from it.

"Therefore, I appeal to the practical common sense and the United effort of the whole nation so that we may all work together in industrial harmony in this task of moving from the destruction of our enemies to the construction of our own domestic life and our international trade."

Lord Woolton, turning to housing, one of various subjects, said "I am not promising 4,000,000 houses but we are planning to extend the building industry to try to cope with a problem of quite colossal magnitude.

"This will mean a labor force of 1,250,000 from an industry which has had to provide a very heavy contribution in personnel for war needs."

DOG'S FLYING TIME

Marianna, Fla., Dec. 31. (AP)— Angus is a graying black Scottie, an army pooch for all his 9 1-2 years, who likes nothing better than a ride in a fast fighter plane, and in the thousands of hours he has spent in the air he has accumulated more flying time than anyone at the United States Army field here, except his master, Col. John W. Persons, the commanding officer.

MORE TRUCKS MAY BE AVAILABLE WHERE ESSENTIAL

Ottawa, Dec. 31—(CP)—An increased number of trucks for essential purposes is likely to be available in 1944, it was learned today. While it is understood that final policy has not yet been approved, indications are that the over-all quota will be increased.

The 1944 quota will be distributed across Canada on a basis of need, rather than by alloting a specific number of each province.

See No Occasion To Change Provincial Liquor Rations

Ottawa, Dec. 31 (CP)—On the basis of the amount of liquor available, Federal officials see no occasion for any change in provincial liquor rations in effect at the start of 1944, it was stated today in informed circles here.

However, if there should be a large increase in the number of liquor permits issued by any province, it is expected that the province will have to reduce the ration in order to divide the same amount of liquor sold in 1943 among the larger number of 1944 permit holders.

West Huntingdon

Many family reunions were held —some entertaining over thirty visitors. A number also were out of town for the day.

Newfoundland Gunners in Italy

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 8th Army in Italy, Dec. 31 (CP Cable)—Newfoundland gunners who fought with distinction in North Africa are part of the 8th Army of British, Canadian, New Zealand and Indian troops battling the Germans between the snow-capped Apennines and the blue-green Adriatic.

Under command of a British lieutenant-colonel who has been with them since November, 1940, when they were a heavy artillery regiment guarding against the invasion of Britain, the Newfoundlanders have been in Italy since before the crossing of the Trigno river last October. They are attached to the Indian division.

"We have already had more shooting in Italy than we had in North Africa," said Maj. I. D. Forsyth, of Bournemouth, England, a battery commander. The gunners fired their 25-pounders in support of most infantry formations in the 8th Army.

When Canadian troops crossed the Moro river Dec. 8, beginning the attack which was culminated Tuesday in the capture of Ortona, the Newfoundlanders joined in the hour-long barrage. Their guns helped again when Ontario troops crossed the Ortona-Orsogna road Dec. 18.

Ninety-seven per cent of the men and one-third of the officers come from Newfoundland. The remaining personnel was recruited in Britain which provided all the officers when the regiment first went overseas.

German Agency Says Churchill At Aswan in Egypt

New York, Dec. 31 — (AP) —The German Transocean News Agency in a broadcast of an Ankara dispatch asserted today that Prime Minister Churchill left Cairo Tuesday for Aswan, a health resort on the Nile in Southern Egypt, where he will stay at the Cataract Hotel.

The report, which lacked confirmation from Allied sources, said Mr. Churchill was accompanied by his wife and his daughter Sarah, Mrs. Vic. Oliver.

In a statement issued from London yesterday Mr. Churchill announced that he had recovered from pneumonia and "I am now leaving the place where I have been staying for "an unknown destination.'"

President Ordered To Stay in Bed

Washington, Dec. 31 — (AP) — President Roosevelt's cold had turned into the grippe today and the White House said he had half a degree of fever.

Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, the President's physician, ordered him to remain in bed today and said he probably would have to stay in bed tomorrow.

The regular Friday cabinet meeting and news conference were cancelled. The illness will prevent the President's participating formally in any observance of New Year's Day, which he has proclaimed a day of prayer.

Arrives Home From Germany Before Letter

Denver, Dec. 31 (AP) — On Sept. 3, in a prison camp somewhere in Germany, Staff Sgt. Benjamin F. Spring sat down and wrote a letter to his wife in Denver.

He thought of the holidays to come, and expressed hope that some day he would be able to spend a Christmas and New Year's Day again with his family.

Six weeks later Sergeant Spring was released from the camp under an exchange of prisoners and returned to the United States.

He reached into the mail box at his home this week and drew out his own battered, travel-stained, hopeful letter.

Canadian issues were mixed, with Hiram Walker, Lake Shore and Canadian Pacific adding fractions and Dome Mines and Distillers Seagrams off fractions.

Omnibus Corporation made a new 1943 high. Occasional improvement was registered for U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Santa Fe, American Telephone, Douglas Aircraft and Dow Chemical. Losers included Johns-Manville, Westinghouse, Southern Railway, Western Union "A", General Electric and Union Carbide.

Hitler in Gloom On New Year's Eve

London, Dec. 31. (CP) — Hitler grimly told the German people in a New Year's message today that "in this war there will be no victors and losers but merely survivors and annihilated".

"We realize that this is a merciless struggle in which the question is 'to be, or not to be', and therefore must and unfortunately will be countered by us in the same merciless manner", said the message as broadcast from Berlin.

Hitlers cheerless greeting to the home front began with the familiar charge that Germany had the war thrust upon her, and then turned into a hymn of hate against Britain with this twist: Britain has lost her balance of power position and is at the mercy of her Allies. He said Britons had forgotten that only Bolshevism could profit from the war.

Jap Counter-Thrusts Thrown Back in Burma

New Delhi, Dec. 31 — (CP) — In what appears to have been one of the heaviest ground actions in months on the Burma front, Allied troops advancing east of the Mayu Range in Western Burma have thrown back strong Japanese counter-attacks with heavy enemy casualties, Allied headquarters announced today.

The land victory was announced along with renewed and widespread aerial attacks on enemy troop concentrations and airfields in northern Burma, where American and Chinese forces are building another "Burma Road" from Assam to China.

Today's report on the Mayu peninsula advance was the first since a communique announced last Monday that Allied land forces had "improved their positions" there. After the repulse of the strong enemy counter-attacks, Allies forces resumed "extensive and successful" patrolling activities in the area, the announcement continued.

NORTH to DANGER by TOM GILL

CHAPTER 9

Colin hesitated. Already he had been there too long; he knew that every minute meant danger, but the temptation to look inside just one of those sealed packages was too compelling. Quickly he reached out to the nearest box, then jerked his hand back as if he had touched a white-hot iron, and switched off the light.

Footsteps were running up the stairs; a second more and they had burst into the attic, and now, sharp as the cocking of a rifle, a key rattled in the lock of the attic door. He threw himself down behind the shelter of the nearest crate when the door creaked open and a light flared above his head.

Dead silence held the room, silence more threatening than any sound could be, while Colin scarcely breathed and black shadows moved before that shifting light.

Then, in Dove's quietly level voice, came the words, "Over behind that crate."

Crouching behind the crate, Colin saw the beam of Dove's flashlight sweep the room in a swift arc and stop just above his head. From the direction of the door he heard the rapid breathing of Dove's companion, then silence—a long, questioning silence — while his own heart raced faster.

Again Dove spoke, "I know that light came from the attic window."

"I tell you it was the sun." The words were in Dr. Benedict's deep-toned voice. "I've seen that reflection a dozen times from the river."

For a single second hope rose in Colin's pounding heart—if Dove would be satisfied without further search! But that hope died quickly.

"Hold the flashlight," he heard Dove saying. "I want to look behind that crate."

A shoe scraped against a nearby packing case, then the crate where Colin hid quivered as Dove pulled himself on top, and Colin knew that just above his head, barely an arm's length distant, Jonathan Dove was kneeling.

Again the voice, so close this time that Rae could hear the soft intake of Dove's breath. "Now let me have the flashlight."

The game was up. Better to come out from behind the crate than—

The report of a gun and a piercing scream downstairs woke every sleeping echo in the building. A hoarse, strangled gasp from Benedict, then once again that terror-stricken scream.

"It's Blair!" Benedict cried. "Something's happening to Blair!"

The next second Colin felt the crate tremble and heard the two men's footsteps clattering down the stairs.

Almost before they left the attic, Colin was squeezing his way out through the narrow entrance he had made beside the stovepipe. Standing on the upper rafter, he shoved the wallboard back in place swung himself down and dropped to the chapel floor.

Another second, and he was out of the door, racing around the corner of the building, then up the steps to Benedict's office.

A strange sight inside: A revolver lay in the centre of the floor and, close by the desk, Benedict had clutched his daughter with both arms while Dove stood watching.

"I only know it slipped from my hands," Blair was saying. "It hit the floor and went off."

"But you're not hurt?" Her father's voice was still unsteady. "Tell me you're not hurt."

"I'm not hurt, Father — only frightened."

Dove picked up the gun. "What were you doing with it?" he asked.

"It's Father's. I found it in the desk drawer. I picked it up to see if it was loaded."

"They always are," Dove commented; then, catching sight of Colin, he made a quick, involuntary movement that was checked almost before it had begun. "This young lady has just been adding to our gray hairs," he said. "You heard the shot?"

"Yes — and Blair's scream. I came running."

"Here's where the bullet went out," said Benedict, pointing at a hole below the window sill, but Dove did not even trouble to look. His pale-gray eyes were still on Colin. Soon he turned to Blair and his eyes were friendly and solicitous. "Feeling better?" he asked.

"I'm feeling feeble-minded for being so clumsy. What I need is a walk." She looked at Colin. "Let's go beg a cup of tea from Ma Corrigale before I get into more trouble."

And not until they were well out of sight and earshot did either of them speak. As they rounded the first turn of the trail Colin drew her arm through his, saying, "Thanks. I won't ever forget that it's due to you I'm still in one piece."

Blair's face had not quite regained its color. "I heard them come in and run up to the attic. I was never so frightened in my life. Then I thought of that gun."

"It was a tight spot. Only your quick thinking kept it from being tighter."

"But what did you find?"

Colin's eyes began glowing. "Blair, that room is jammed with stuff. Most of it's packed in crates. I hadn't time to open anything, but one thing I know: Dove has a short-wave radio up there, ten times as powerful as the one at the Post."

"A radio! That means—" she stopped.

He looked at her with serious eyes. "A set as strong as that could reach a long way. My guess is that the gentle Jonathan Dove is a German spy, and from his maps, I'd say that he is more interested in the United States than he is in Canada."

"But shouldn't we tell the Mounted Police?"

"Not yet." Colin's voice was decisive. "The possession of a radio set isn't a crime, and Dove would be ready with some explanation. I've had one experience testifying against him without enough proof. If I tried it again, everyone would say I was persecuting him because he's a competitor of the Company. No, this time I've got to know. Even if it takes weeks, I've got to be sure he can't squirm out."

"But Father—" Blair's hand tightened on his arm. "Colin, what is Father doing in all this? He's not a spy—I know he isn't."

Gently Colin answered, "We'll have to face the fact that your father is tied up with Dove. How, we don't know; and before we can help him, we've got to learn what it's all about."

"But how?"

"The hidden room may hold an answer. But I can't afford to try that again until we're absolutely sure the way is clear. We'll have to forget about that room for a while. Then, when the boat docks next Wednesday, let's watch it unload. I've a hunch Dove will be bringing in more crates and cases. And, as soon as freeze-up comes, I want to find where Dove goes on those midnight trips of his. As long as he uses a canoe, I can't follow him, but when he has to go by dog team, he'll leave tracks. So, whether we like it or not, we've got to play the waiting game and for that I need your help."

Colin felt the pressure of her hand. "What do you want me to do?"

"Between now and Wednesday, help me look as if I hadn't a thing on my mind but to see all the old places again. Spend as much time as you can with me. We'll go over to Forestry Island and back toward the big lake. We'll even fish a little."

She smiled. "That'll be fun."

He nodded, but, as an afterthought added, "I have a suspicion that Nate Tennant isn't going to like it."

So for the next three days, in a canoe with a borrowed outboard motor, Colin and Blair chugged their placid way about the streams and lakes, renewing acquaintance with people and places Colin had not seen for two years.

And Blair was right. It was fun being together and feeling the old bonds strengthen. Before the first day passed, Colin realized how good it was to be with her—to watch her tall, straight figure bend to the paddle and the sun glinting on her dark head.

And in that partnership Blair provided a quality that Colin lacked—patience to endure delay. Once he smiled at a sudden recollection. "Remember when we were kids, we made a compact that we'd do anything for each other; help each other against all the world? I was thinking this morning that you're my childhood and boyhood all rolled into one. I suppose every woman I ever met or will meet, I'll subconsciously compare with you."

She laughed. "That may not be so easy. There's Irina. Irina's as different from me as anyone could be." She looked up at him. "You like her, don't you?"

Colin hesitated. "I'll be glad when she's married to Rod," he answered.

The days were far from empty. Colin was learning facts that began to fit into a pattern that held potentialities of new danger. For one thing, he soon learned that whisky was being smuggled to the Indians in greater quantities than ever. He learned that the Crees and breeds alike were bitterly resentful of the white trappers Tennant was bringing in on the boat. There were even covert threats and some of the more rebellious spoke openly of going to the dock in a body and turning the trappers back.

"The whole stage is set for an explosion," Colin told Blair the day the boat from Winnipeg was expected. "Selkirk says there are police officers on board and others will be at the dock. But I don't like the thought of this country having internal trouble in war time. Selkirk's worried, too."

"Is that why he wanted to see you this morning."

"No, that was about the company," Colin half smiled. "The Winnipeg office refused me permission to come to Learmonth, so I came anyhow. They've radioed twice to Selkirk to find out what I'm doing here and yesterday they ordered me back."

"And you haven't done anything about it?"

"Not yet. I can't tell them why I'm here and I'm not going back."

"But what will they do?"

"That's what bothers Selkirk." And, changing the subject, Colin asked, "What do you know about a fellow named Olsen, one of Nate's head trappers?"

"Only that he used to work for Dove at the school. He has a vile temper, so Dove got rid of him. Then Nate offered him work, and he's been with Nate ever since. Not a very pleasant sort of person."

"I suspected that, from what Alec's been telling me."

Colin was silent for a moment. "The boat won't be in for two hours. I think you and I had better pay a visit to Olsen."

It was a half hour's run with the outboard motor down a narrow branch of the Nelson, where they found Olsen calking a canoe outside a makeshift cabin.

"He doesn't like people around," Blair cautioned as they chugged to shore.

Colin could see that. Beyond a short, "Mornin', Miss Blair," Olsen gave little sign of welcome. He looked sullenly at Colin, then, without a word spat into the water and kneeling down, sighted along the keel of the canoe.

Blair called to him. "Olsen, this is Colin Rae—you've heard about him."

Olsen barely nodded and with a heavy knife began shaving the keel.

Smiling at the chilly reception, Colin pulled his canoe up on the bank. The ground was littered with cans, broken bottles and half-decayed fish heads; two dirty blankets lying in the sun were riddled with jagged holes and a dozen steel traps hung rusting in the trees.

"Looks as if you're getting ready for the trapping season," Colin observed.

Again Olsen spat into the water. "You didn't come all the way up here to tell me that."

"You're right." Colin's voice hardened. "I came to find out why you served notice on Alec Gunn not to trap on the Upper Nelson."

Olsen grinned. "Because that's where I'm going to trap. Ain't that a good reason?"

"Not very."

"Well, it better be reason enough."

"Listen, Olsen"—Colin's dislike for the man was fast becoming visible—"Alec and I trapped the Upper Nelson before you ever came into this country. And before that, Alec's father used it as his trapping grounds. Everybody knows that's Alec's territory and everybody respects it. You'll save trouble for yourself if you respect it, too."

Critically Olsen looked Colin over. "I've heard a lot about you." He thumbed the blade of his knife. "Some people in this country think you know a lot. But I think you're a meddlesome old woman. What's a white man got sticking up for a breed? It would be better for this country if we took the trap lines away from all of 'em—Dove's outfit included."

As Colin walked back to his canoe, Olsen followed Colin to the edge of the stream, then rasped, "If you and that breed buddy of yourn start layin' traps up there, it'll be just too bad. I'm working for Nate Tennant and I'm doin' it Nate Tennant's way."

He pointed a grubby finger at Blair. "Besides, Nate ain't going to like the company you keep."

Blair looked up quickly. "Don't worry about me, Olsen."

"I ain't worryin'. I just figure I made a mistake when I thought you was Nate Tennant's girl. If you was mine and you took up with this—"

Olsen saw the change in Colin's eyes and stopped.

"Olsen"—Colin had stepped forward—"you don't want to get hurt on a nice sunny afternoon like this, do you?"

Olsen did not move. Neither did he answer. But the hand still held the knife and Colin felt Blair's touch on his sleeve. "Don't," she whispered, "please."

Neither man stirred. Poised, they stood with watchful eyes, each waiting for the other's move. Then from far to the south a boat's whistle came deeply rolling, and at the sound Olsen started. Slowly he moved back and without another look at Rae hurried to his cabin.

Again Colin felt a tug on his sleeve and Blair's low-voiced "Come."

As they turned upstream, Blair asked, "Why did you come here, Colin?"

"I wanted to see the kind of men Nate's hiring."

"Will this mean trouble between Nate and you?"

Somber eyes fixed on the passing shore. Colin made no direct reply. "Learmonth's in for rough times, Blair," he said at last, "and more trouble is coming up on this boat. The Cree's aren't going to submit to an invasion of white trappers like this. Nate knows all that, but he doesn't care; and I hand in this whole scheme." Colin have a feeling that Dove has a looked back. "You say Olsen once worked for Dove?"

"Yes. He helped Dove build the Hall. Why?"

"Do you suppose Olsen is still working for Mr. Dove?"

"But how?"

"By double-crossing Nate."

She shook her head. "It's getting too complicated for me."

"Sometimes I think it is for me. And there may be more complications at Dove's dinner party this evening." Colin opened the throttle until the water curled in a long ripple beneath the bow. "Let's see what the boat brings in."

They were farther downstream than they realized and, when they came in sight of Learmonth, the little two-deck steamer was already snorting its way to the dock where dozens of eager hands seized the hawsers and a tinkle of the ship's bell gave the order to stop the engine.

The dock swarmed with people—whites, Indians, and breeds. Everyone was there. Men and women from the missions, freighters and trappers, coming in to get their last mail and their winter purchases of traps, harness for dog teams, snowshoes, ammunition and —more important still—their last supply of food. A sense of excitement and expectancy. A sense of lurking danger, too.

Colin caught it the instant he climbed the bank. Up beyond the dock, withdrawn from the others, stood a group of Cree Indians and breeds. They spoke little; they did not smile, but their eyes fixed steadily on the boat—they were awaiting the arrival of Tennant's trappers.

Selkirk and three mounted police officers stood a little back from the dock, the Mounties' colorful in their red coats and striped breeches, chatting casually, but alert and waiting.

At the drop of the gangplank, Colin turned toward the boat. The decks were piled high with freight and from the hold came the lowing of cattle and the squeal of hogs.

On the dock, Irina stood with Ma Corrigale. From his bridge, the captain waved to Ma.

"I brought your cow!" he bellowed.

"What do you mean, 'cow!'I ordered two."

The skipper made a funnel of his hands. "One died."

"You mean starved to death. It's a wonder anything survives a trip on that boat except the cockroaches."

The crowd joined in the laugh as Ma climbed over the rail and went aboard.

From the direction of the trading post, Nate Tennant came toward them, hatless, his thick black hair glittering in the sunlight. As he forced his way through the crowd, he towered over every man on the dock—and his eyes were on Irina.

Briefly Blair presented Tennant, and, smiling up at him, Irina extended a small, mittened hand that looked incredibly tiny in Nate's huge paw.

"But how big you are!" she exclaimed.

Tennant laughed with spontaneous pleasure while his eyes moved over her face and his hand held hers until quietly she disengaged it, declaring, "I've heard all about you from Ma Corrigale."

Nate's smile broadened. "I'm the bad boy of Learmonth, Miss Meredith. Due for a dreadful end, but in the meantime I try to enjoy myself."
